Did You Know...

Smokers subject themselves to a much greater risk of death or disability at a younger age.

It is estimated that 87% of lung cancers are caused by cigarette smoking, causing about 150,000 deaths per year in the U.S.

Death rates from cancer of the esophagus, pharynx, lip, larynx and mouth are at least six times as great for smokers as for non-smokers. Death rates from heart disease are twice as high for smokers as non-smokers - from peptic ulcers, nearly three times as high.

A tragically high number of people die in early middle age, when their children need them the most, from cigarette-related diseases.

Parents who care about their children should seriously consider quitting smoking.

North Girls Bow From State Tourney

By CHRIS POISSON

The North Quincy girls' basketball team can't seem to sidestep the quick hook from the state tournament.

For the second straight year, the Red Raiders were left stranded on their homecourt, wondering how another successful regular season turned into another first-round flop.

Last season, Somerset grilled North Quincy with its 70-percent shooting. This season, frigid shooting and the infectious turnover bug stalled North Quincy at the starting line.

It's as if the tournament is the game of Monopoly and North Quincy can't pass GO.

When the 11th-seeded Wildcats (13-8) slapped the sixth-seeded Red Raiders (15-6) with a 45-36 loss last Wednesday night, it brought an abrupt ending to arguably one of the best seasons in school history.

To everyone's surprise, especially head coach Doug MacFarlane, North Quincy trampled league competition, winning 12 of 14 games to capture its first ever Old Colony League championship. By season's end, optimism engulfed Hancock Street with hopes that the Red Raiders would string together some W's — or at least one — in the playoffs.

And that's what makes the early exit so exasperating. There's a feeling of unfulfillment. It's like doing a puzzle and realizing you're missing a piece; you can see what the puzzle is supposed to look like, but it's not complete without that piece.

"I'm very disappointed," MacFarlane said. "But I'm proud of the kids. We had a great year. We worked hard. It's just a shame to go out this way. I'm real frustrated."

On paper, Weymouth's triumph is scored as an upset. MacFarlane, however, believes the Wildcats are everything but underdogs in the Division 1 South Sectional tourney.

"The Herald said the upset of the South Sectionals would be Weymouth over North Quincy," MacFarlane said. "Well, that's bull. That team went to the sectional finals last year. Those kids are seasoned veterans and they played like it."

"The seeding in the tournament doesn't mean anything as far as I'm concerned. I told the kids that 12-8, seeded 11th, doesn't mean squat. When it comes down to it, it's just two good teams playing against each other. It was a good game. Unfortunately, we were on the wrong end."

From the get-go, you could sense this was not the same team that dominated the regular season. This team looked like it was sinking in the deep end of a pool — it was well over its head. It turned the ball over five times in the first five minutes of the game.

"We showed a little inexperience," MacFarlane said. "We came out nervous. We didn't play well in the beginning. The girls were really uptight. I don't know if that had anything to do with it. I'm not making excuses. We just didn't execute."

Rather, the Red Raiders were executed. In probably their worst offensive outing of the year, they coughed the ball up an uncharacteristic 20 times (U'gh!) and shot 24 percent from the floor (Brrr!).

While North Quincy actually shot above the freezing mark (35 percent) in the first half, it was its interior defense that let them down. With pin-point passing, Weymouth dissected North Quincy's defense like the game was a high school biology class. Of the Wildcats' 29 points, all but five were in the paint. Sophomore surgeon Erica Murphy headed the operation with 12 points.

"We couldn't stop them," MacFarlane said. "We were falling asleep a little bit defensively inside and they took advantage of it. They were making great interior passes. The Murphy girl killed us underneath."

Murphy's performance is unfortunate because North Quincy actually shut down Weymouth's stop-and-go, the McDonald twins, Sarah and Lindsey, holding them to four points each. The finished with a combined 15 points.

Weymouth built a lead as high as nine points (22-13), but North Quincy cut it to 24-19 when senior point guard Casey Ridge came up with a steal at midcourt and drove to the hoop for a 3-point play.

Trailing 29-23 at the half, North Quincy switched from its standard 1-3-1 defense to a 2-3 zone with sophomore forward April Supry (15 points, 8 rebounds) manning the middle. With three bodies down low, North Quincy took away Weymouth's inside game and forced them to

Smith & Brink, PC Wins Squirt Jamboree

Christopher Brown scored the game-winning goal with 24 seconds left in the game to lift Smith & Brink, PC to a 4-3 win over Local #103 IBEW for the Squirt Division Jamboree championship in recent Quincy Youth Hockey action.

Smith & Brink, PC took a 1-0 lead in the first period when Jonathan Cahill scored with an assist from Brown. In the second, Peter Eleey evened the score at 2 with an assist from Patrick Young.

Local IBEW grabbed the lead in the final period before Kevin Chenette tied the game at 3 with Eleey assisting.

Captain Lammy Papalambros and Glen Misho played strong two-way hockey throughout the series, and rookie goalie Shane Reilly shined between the pipes.

In the semifinal game, Smith & Brink, PC knocked out Quincy Car Wash, 5-2, behind Eleey's hat trick.

Brown and Josh McKeon added the other goals. Ryan Murphy and Cahill notched assists.

Justin Halloran, Carleton Burke, Brendan Murphy, Daniel Keeley, James Budukiewicz, Daniele

Murphy and Young turned in strong defensive performances, as they helped hold Quincy Car Wash scoreless through the first two periods.

Quincy Hockey Advances

The Quincy High School hockey team knocked off ninth seed Needham, 4-2, last Saturday at Stoneham Arena to advance to the quarterfinals of the Division 1 South tournament.

No. 8 Quincy (12-6-1) was scheduled to face off against top seed and Old Colony League foe Falmouth (19-3) Monday night, weather permitting.

Quincy split the regular season series with the Clippers 1-1. The Presidents took the first game, 5-4, at Falmouth and dropped the second matchup, 6-3, at home.

Junior goalie Shaun Flaherty shined between the pipes, turning back an amazing 30 shots to keep the Presidents in the game, while juniors Andy Ross, Bill McKeon, David Germain (assist) and senior Brian Neenan did the scoring.

shoot jumpers. The result: the best defensive performances of the season. The Red Raiders held the Wildcats to just one point in the first 9:48 of the half—a free throw by Murphy with 14:29 left.

"We went out of our 1-3-1 matchup, which has been our mainstay defense all year, and we went to a 2-3," MacFarlane said. "I put April Suprey in the middle and she took away their interior game. She plays great position defense and that's what we needed. The two girls down below with her also picked it up."

North Quincy outscored Weymouth, 8-1, to open the half, capped by a pair of Suprey free throws with 7:50 left for its first lead of the game at 31-30. In between the free throws, Weymouth coach Stephen Shoff called a timeout and MacFarlane felt this was the time his team would finally make a run.

"In the timeout I said, 'OK, it's 0-0 with seven minutes to go. Let's go. It's our game right now. We've been dictating it on the defensive end, let's dictate it on the offensive end.' I don't think we hit a shot coming down the stretch," MacFarlane said.

He's right. After taking the 31-30 lead, North Quincy hit just five free throws the rest of the way and its last field goal came with 9:42 left on a layup by junior tri-captain Lauren Sleeth (10 points, 4 rebounds, 2 steals). It couldn't taste iron if it swallowed a vitamin, connecting on just 3 of 24 second-half shots.

The closest the Red Raiders came to putting the ball in the net came with 2:45 left. Trailing 37-35, Ridge hoisted a 3-ball that circled around the rim like it was on a roulette wheel before bouncing out of the cylinder, ending their season as Weymouth closed the game with an 8-1 run.

"That hurt the most," MacFarlane said. "I mean that ball was in. If that had gone in I think it would have changed the whole outcome of the game. That would have been a knife in their back. That would've been a key shot."

With five seconds left in the game, Weymouth called a timeout to set up a play for one of its bench players to score. With his team huddled together on the court for the final time, MacFarlane had a chance to console them before the end of the year team meeting the following day.

"I said, 'Hey, you have nothing to be ashamed of. You had a great season. You worked your butts off to get here. You worked your butts off tonight. For whatever reason it just wasn't in the cards for us.'"

WINTER CAR CARE

AAA Offers Easy-To-Follow Wintering Motoring Advice

Winter driving is tough on motorists and vehicles. To help drivers make it through the toughest winter conditions, AAA Southern New England offers the following tips:

Charge Cold weather is tough on batteries. At zero degrees, a car's battery loses about 60 percent of its strength. At a comparatively mild 32 degrees, a battery is 35 percent weaker. Keeping battery terminals clean helps, but a load test performed by a qualified technician will help determine whether a car's battery is strong enough for winter starts.

Get a Grip Before winter arrives, make sure your car is equipped with tires that are able to handle New England's winter weather. For most motorists, all-season tires are adequate. In more northern or mountainous regions, switching to snow tires may be needed.

See and Be Seen Danger must be seen to be avoided. Driving with a snow-covered windshield, windows, side view mirrors or lights invites a crash. Clear windows, mirrors and lights with an ice scraper, brush or spray deicer. Make certain windshield wipers and defrosters are in good working order and that washer reservoirs are filled with no freeze windshield washer fluid.

Slippery When Wet

In temperatures at or just above 32 degrees, a thin layer of water can over the ice causing extremely slippery conditions. The distance needed to stop on ice at 32 degrees is twice as long as at zero degrees.

Keep Your Engine Cool

Make your cooling system antifreeze is mixed with an equal portion of water for maximum protection.

Fast Solution A squirt of deicer spray is a quick method to overcome frozen door locks.

Air It Out Don't let frigid temperatures tempt you into starting your car in a closed garage or idling your engine for long periods with the windows closed. Carbon monoxide present in exhaust fumes is almost impossible to detect and can be fatal when breathed in a confined area.

Finish Up Road salt, slush and grime are especially hard on a car's finish. To help prevent rust and paint damage, keep cars washed and waxed. A full or self-service car wash makes the job easier when temperatures are low.

New Cars And Clean Air

(NAPSA) The largest manufacturing industry in the country, automotive manufacturing has traveled farther than any other industry toward a cleaner environment and is dedicated to going even farther to clean the air.

For three decades the auto industry has been producing ever cleaner vehicles: the industry spends $18.4 billion annually in research and development of new advanced technologies to make cars and light trucks even cleaner, safer and more fuel-efficient than ever. Here are some clean air facts:

- Nationwide, all cars and light trucks are at least 96 percent cleaner than their counterparts in the 1960s.
- By 2009, all cars and light trucks will become 80 percent cleaner than today.
- This decade, both cars and light trucks will drive 99 percent cleaner than in the 1960s.
- Today's light trucks run cleaner than a 1993 car.
- All 2001 new cars sold nationwide -- approximately eight million cars -- will meet voluntary National Low Emission Vehicle program standards (separate standards are required in California, Massachusetts, New York and Vermont).

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Someone once asked, "Must the mood, manner and motives of youth fade away with the years?" Before you answer quickly look around. . . You will see plenty of proof that youth is not always measured in years. Youth need not be a time of life. It should be a state of mind. Youth, regardless of years, should be an adventure in life.

When enthusiasm for life exists, wrinkled skin will not wrinkle a mind. Youth only fades away when worry, doubt, distrust, fear and despair burden the body and bow the head. Youth remains when life is faced cheerfully; when a mind wonders and is amazed with the stars, the sun, the moon and the grandeur of God's world. Youth stays on with an attitude of today is another day and what can be done with it.

Youth is faith and hope. It is enjoying beauty, being of good cheer. Cast these out and youth and maturity are gone. Retain them and youth remains. Faith, hope, appreciation of beauty and good cheer . . . all can be regained.

Yes, the fountain of youth can only be found in a state of mind . . . no other place . . .

The Assisted Living Option

By CAROL TAYLOR

Assisted living is a housing option for seniors who don't require around the clock care of a nursing home, and choose to live in a community where they can maintain their independence, receive assistance with care, and improve their quality of life. Assisted living offers seniors their own apartments, three meals a day, weekly housekeeping, an emergency call system, availability of 24-hour staff, activities, and some personal care assistance.

Prior to the development of assisted living, the alternative housing option for seniors was care in a nursing home setting. Today, a senior in need of some assistance with the activities of daily living such as dressing, bathing, or a reminder to take medication can opt to choose a more independent lifestyle in an assisted living environment.

Residents have the option of being as active or as private as they wish. Many seniors choose assisted living communities that are closer to their families so they can enjoy frequent family visits. Seniors who once lived alone and often felt isolated, now enjoy making new friends within the assisted living community. Assisted living is a wonderful option for many seniors. The best way to see if this is an option for you or your loved one is to visit an assisted living community and experience first-hand the benefits of this new option in senior healthcare. For more information, please call the Welch Care Connection at 1-800-698-0304.

Carol Taylor is marketing director for Allerton House at Harbor Park Assisted Living Community.

'Active Parents' Help Reduce Underage Drinking In Quincy

By LINDA BILLIKAS

When IMPACT QUINCY, a community-based coalition began in 1991, one of the first alliances that was set up was the Family Life Alliance. This committee tried to find ways to support parents in raising better families in Quincy and working on reducing underage drinking.

Parenting is easy...until you have children. So, with the help of School Superintendent Eugene Creedon, Pupil Personnel Director Janet Powell and the support of the School Committee, IMPACT QUINCY started training parents in "Active Parenting," a video-based program founded by Dr. Michael Popkin of Georgia. These courses help parents with the most important job of their life — parenting.

Active parents know that you can't wait until the teen years to start setting limits about drinking or anything else. You must start communicating, giving choices and teaching responsibility at a very young age. Active Parents learn that children may have their say, but not necessarily their way.

IMPACT QUINCY is currently offering four different Active Parenting courses. They are:

1) Active Parenting 1,2,3,4 for parents of small children. This course teaches discipline skills and rules that children will follow through their teen years.

2) Active Parenting Today for parents of 2-12 years old. This course deals with power struggles, discipline skills that work, teaching responsibility and cooperation, and how to effectively talk about tobacco, alcohol and other drugs with your children.

3) Active Parenting of Teens for parents of Pre-Teens and Teens. This course deals with current teen issues, choosing your battles, building your child's sense of responsibility and talking about violence, sex, alcohol and drugs.

4) Parents on Board, a course on how to help your child do his/her homework and how to have a good relationship with the school.

Since 1991, IMPACT QUINCY and Quincy Public Schools has made it possible for more than 800 parents to participate in Active Parenting classes through the schools, churches, community centers and businesses in and around Quincy. More than 100 community leaders have been trained to lead Active Parenting classes.

The Active Parents of Quincy have done a lot to build a sense of responsibility in their children and encourage them to say "No" to underage drinking.

Many teens have made the responsible choice of not drinking at all. As Mayor James Sheets said recently, "The city of Quincy and IMPACT QUINCY have a great history of working together for the good of our citizens and the community." Not many cities can say that they have businesses, parents and the school system so closely connected to work toward the goal of making our youth less likely to experiment with alcohol and other harmful substances.

Many people and organizations have given financial support to supplement the cost of these parenting courses so that more parents may participate.

To all Active Parents and future Active Parents, we must say we are fortunate to live in a city that cares so much for our children and their needs. Remember, children spell love, T-E-A-E. Please take some time and call IMPACT QUINCY to learn more about educating parents and kids about underage drinking. Please call (617) 472-6027 or (617) 328-5821.

Billikas is a Quincy parent, teacher, a member of the Impact Quincy Leadership Team and a Nationally Trained Active Parent Leader.

New London, CT. He received a master's degree in business administration from Harvard.

Speaks On Human Rights

Quincy Student Addresses Youth Delegates At UN

Quincy resident Elizabeth Bloomer, a 15-year-old sophomore at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree and an alumna of Broad Meadows Middle School, addressed over 900 youth delegates from around the world Friday in the General Assembly of the United Nations in New York City.

Making remarks before the 25th anniversary of the United Nations International School Conference, Bloomer described to delegates how she and her peers have taken action against child labor as consumers, lobbyists, fund-raisers, and public speakers.

Harry Belafonte also addressed the conference, which since its beginning 25 years ago has grown to include student representatives from over 30 national and international schools. Previous speakers have included UN Secretary General Kofi Annan.

Bloomer addressed the conference's theme of Human Rights: The Struggles of Poor Women and Children. She outlined the three youth activism campaigns she helped lead and co-found while a student at Broad Meadows.

Bloomer has spoken out numerous times against child labor, including speeches at Harvard, The University of Massachusetts, Wellesley College, Team Harmony V held at the Fleet Center in Boston, and various child labor conferences held in Washington, D.C.

tion, Washington, DC, had heard Bloomer speak several times and recommended her to the UN International School's Student Speaker Coordinator Rebecca Hoffman.

The three campaigns Bloomer was involved in at Broad Meadows under the direction of teacher Ronald Adams, who attended Friday's conference, were:

•The Kids Campaign: A

School for Iqbal: Broad Meadows' students used the Internet to organize students in all 50 states to fundraise over $147,000 to establish a "School for Iqbal" in Pakistan. Iqbal Masih was a former child slave who visited Broad Meadows Middle School in 1994. Five months after visiting Broad Meadows, Iqbal was back in Pakistan where he was shot and killed.

THE BLOOMERS, Laura (left), age 12, and Elizabeth, age 15, take in the sights of New York City including the United Nations Building, where Elizabeth, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams High School and a graduate of Broad Meadows Middle School, addressed over 900 youth delegates at the 25th United Nations International School Conference.

The "School for Iqbal" opened in 1997.

•The Kids Online March Against Child Labor: After learning of a global march across five continents to protest child labor, Broad Meadows students created a "Virtual March" web site for those too young to actually march or those unable to march. The students collected over 4,500 email messages from all over the United States as well as from 34 nations. The students printed out all of the messages and personally handed them to then Secretary of Labor Alexis Herman.

•During the campaign, Bloomer "adopted by letter" Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms. Other students adopted other members of the Senate Committee in the hope the Senate would ratify a new UN treaty, known as I.L.O. 182, abolishing the most severe forms of child labor. The Senate ratified that treaty and I.L.O. 182 is now U.S. law. Bloomer and her peers pledge to continue the web site drive until all ratifications ratify the new international child labor treaty. So far, 59 nations have voted for ratification.

•Operation Day's Work - USA: Inspired by a similar program run by students in Norway and sponsored by USAID (The U.S. Agency for International Development) eight U.S. schools were recruited by USAID Administrator Brian Atwood to pilot this student-run, global anti-poverty project. The students involved vote each year to work one day and donate their pay to fund an educational program for poor, working children in a chosen developing country.

In 1998, the pilot schools earned over $30,000 from their "Day's Work" and funded a livestock and literacy program for 2,000 Haitian youth and their families. In 1999, the students raised over $40,000 to expand an orphanage in El Salvador. This school year, participating students voted to aid child laborers in Nepal.

HIGH TIDE DURING last week's nor'easter was a rough time for those living near the waterfront as evidenced by the pounding surf around this house on Shelton Road in Adams Shore. (Quincy Sun Photos)

City Bears Storm Well But Now Low On Road Salt

Quincy weathered the recent two-day nor'easter extremely well, escaping the storm relatively unscathed.

However, given the scarcity of road salt currently available in the city, another snowstorm following too close upon this one's heels could pose problems for the city, as it would across Massachusetts.

"It definitely would be a concern," said DPW Commissioner David Colton of a major snowfall hitting the city before the DPW had a chance to replenish its resources. "It (road salt) is in order but we don't have enough right now. There is a statewide shortage."

Over the course of last week, Colton said, DPW crews used roughly 1,000 tons of road salt in handling the snowstorm which dropped several feet of snow on the city during a 36-hour period.

Presently, the city has only 50 tons of road salt remaining to handle whatever comes next.

As for last week's storm, which Colton said cost an estimated $350,000, the city was largely unaffected.

"The city held up very well," said Colton, attributing much of the success to renovations — such as seawall repair — that the city undertook after the "No-Name" Storm of 1991. "The money we've put in (for improvements) has definitely paid off."

The DPW used more than 100 pieces of equipment during the storm, mostly for the job of snow removal.

Commenting Tuesday, Mayor James Sheets said he had been made aware of the road salt shortage in the city but was confident the matter would be handled quickly.

Colton, who was named DPW commissioner in 1989, was recently nominated by the New England chapter of the American Public Works Association as its choice for one of the top 10 public works leaders in the nation for 2001.

A Good First Year

QMC Cuts Losses By 45 Percent

Less than two years after its bailout by city, state, and federal agencies, Quincy Medical Center has reduced its operating loss by 45 percent, from $14.9 million for Fiscal Year 1999 to $8.4 million for Fiscal Year 2000.

The 45 percent reduction, along with improved figures for all financial indicators listed, was among the highlights of a 24-page annual report filed March 9 by Quincy Medical Center to the state's Secretary of Administration and Finance.

Other noteworthy accomplishments for the year include improved "financial benchmarks" such as accounts receivable, accounts payable, debt service ratio, and cash on hand; an increase in free patient care; and expanded outreach services including an On-Site VA Primary Care Clinic and an On-Site Asian Primary Care Facility.

"We have a great deal to accomplish still, however we are in the midst of a dramatic turnaround at this hospital, both financially and medically," said QMC CEO and President Christine Schuster. "We are well aware that many thought the funding was a risk, however we have always believed that it was an investment in this community and we see that investment paying dividends."

CHRISTINE SCHUSTER

"We are in the midst of a dramatic turnaround."

Last year, the State Legislature approved a no-interest $12 million loan to help QMC through a transition from city-owned hospital to private non-profit hospital. As part of its loan obligation,

Concerns For Children's, Pets' Safety Coyote Prowling Squantum Area

By CRAIG SALTERS
The neighborhood of Squantum is dealing with a rather unwelcome neighbor as a coyote first spotted in the fall is being sighted more and more frequently.

"I've seen him six or eight times in the last two months," said Sharron Beals, executive director of the Beechwood Community Life Center, 440 East Squantum St. "I see him in the field behind our center as I leave work in the evenings."

Beals called the coyote "very domesticated" and even a bit arrogant. "You stomp your feet and he won't go away," Beals said. "Eventually he'll amble into the reeds of the marsh towards Marina Bay."

There have been no coyote sightings during the day, emphasized Beals, who added that none of the 250 children between the ages of infancy to 11 enrolled in the center enter through the rear of the building.

Even so, Beals said, the children can track his footprints in the snow and "definitely know he's out there," going so far as to name the animal "Coyote Bill."

SHARRON BEALS

"Obviously, any wild animal near our community center is a concern."

MARY COLLINS

"I was never so scared in my whole life."

SOME GOOD ADVICE: Passersby, however few in number, must have considered the advice of Uncle Sam's billboard at the corner of Beale St. and Newport Ave. easier said than done during the recent nor'easter that hit Quincy.

Hat Rack Bar License Transferred

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Even though The Hat Rack Bar, 7-9 Copeland St., can remain open for awhile, The License Board voted to transfer the all-alcoholic license from there to Mark Ransom, owner of The Eight Ball in Quincy Square.

Cancellation of the license will follow the approval of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission, which would take about a month.

In September of last year, the License Board revoked The Hat Rack Bar's license following a raid by Quincy police which netted several arrests on drug and gambling charges.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico commended the board and the police department for their work in ultimately ending The Hat Rack's business. He said he was "very happy" since Brewer's Corner is revitalizing its business district. He called the action by the board a "jump start" a "catalyst" for the area.

He said he was "looking ahead" to the proposed new deli at the former pharmacy and said the board's action sends a "clear message of change and new beginning's at Brewer's Corner". He said "we are well on our way to seeing a different neighborhood."

Hearing March 19 On Bill To Create Needed Cemetery Lots

A public hearing on a Senate bill which would create more needed cemetery space in Quincy will be held Monday, March 19.

The City Cemetery Department said the hearing before a Massachusetts Legislature's Joint Committee on State Administration is scheduled for 11 a.m. in Room B-1 at the State House.

The bill (No. 1583) was filed by Senator Michael Morrissey with the support of Reps. Ronald Mariano and Bruce Ayers.

It calls for a land transfer between the Metropolitan District Commission and the city to create the needed public cemetery space.

The city would exchange land adjacent to the Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy for abandoned MDC land off Ricciuti Drive.

The city's efforts to expand grave space within the Pine Hill Cemetery were halted by the state to protect the migratory habitat of rattlesnakes.

The number of available gravesites in Pine Hill was down to 250 a month ago and available only on an "immediate need" basis. Pre-need sales of lots is no longer offered.

The Cemetery Department said the hearing Monday will allow Quincy residents the opportunity to voice their concerns about the lack of available cemetery land in the city.

For more information on the hearing call 376-1251.

Will Link Area To Major Highways

$18 Million For Crown Colony Ramps

By CRAIG SALTERS
The state has made an $18 million commitment to fund the proposed ramps for the Crown Colony Office Complex in South Quincy, Mayor James Sheets announced Tuesday.

The ramps -- one of which would carry traffic northerly onto Rte. 93 while the other carried traffic southerly on Rte. 3 -- could be completed as early as 2004.

The verbal commitment was made by Governor Paul Cellucci Tuesday afternoon in a meeting in the governor's office attended by Mayor Sheets, State Secretary of Transportation Kevin Sullivan, Developer Thomas Flatley, Harvard Pilgrim CEO Charles Baker, and Jack Gillon, traffic engineer for the city.

"What we came away with after our presentation was a firm commitment from the governor to construct the ramps," said Sheets.

In addition, Sheets said, the city has a private-sector commitment of between $1.5 and $1.9 million to do the design work for the project, a commitment made in a letter signed by Flatley which was forwarded to Secretary Sullivan, who had earlier identified private sector support as a crucial aspect of the project.

"It's crucial because it fast-tracks the process," explained Ward 4 Councilor Michael D'Amico, who was unable to attend the meeting but who said the project has been a high priority for him over the past five years. "It moves the process along because we're giving them the design."

D'Amico said that he "couldn't be happier" with the announcement and said the ramps would benefit the city with less traffic, continued growth at Crown Colony, and increased tax revenue, in that order.

"First and foremost, it will bring traffic relief to the residents of South Quincy," D'Amico said.

Sheets, who noted that the Crown Colony ramps project has already been approved by the Massachusetts Highway Department and is one of the city's priorities on the regional Transportation Improvement List, made no attempt to hide his enthusiasm over the state support.

"This is a tremendous step forward for the companies of the Crown Colony Office Park, to the generation of new jobs, and, obviously, to the reduction of congestion at the intersection of Bugin Parkway and Centre St.," the mayor said.

Sheets estimated that the ramps, which will also be used by the soon-to-open Marriott Hotel, would add roughly 4,000 jobs to the city over the next five years.

Both Sheets and

D'Amico said they are awaiting a formal letter of commitment from Secretary Sullivan.

Present plans call for the state to provide the $18 million in funds once the design phase has been 80 percent completed, thereby allowing construction bids to be sent out.

Design phase is expected to take roughly one year with two years anticipated for actual construction.

The Crown Colony Office Park is one of the largest corporate business areas in the city, second only to the State Street Complex in North Quincy.

JOHN KEENAN (center), who served more than three years as the executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, receives a handshake and a certificate of recognition from the mayor at a farewell reception for Keenan held Friday at City Hall. Looking on is Keenan's wife Jeanne Marie. Keenan recently accepted a position as financial coordinator to the Norfolk County Advisory Board. (Quincy Sun photo)

Renovation Not In Children's Best Interest

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am writing this letter addressing the feasibility of renovating Quincy High School while the students are still in attendance. It frightens me to consider the possibility. Why does it matter? It will save the city money! Perhaps! However, what will be the cost to the students who will be forced to live through such an endeavor?

Half-bones me to the main body of this article the children, and especially those children who have disabilities. All of the students will be forced to breathe in dust, dirt, noise, and generally be expected to be in the front of a classroom to renovate. This may require students to split their day in half: attending school in the morning for a few hours, only to leave and return a few hours later to finish up their day.

It seems to me as a high school teacher that schools already have a hard enough time keeping them in school once we get them there in the first place. The truth is many students will opt to stay home instead of returning to school. Maybe not all the time, but experience has taught me that adolescents will choose the better option. This will lead to too perhaps to school failure and cause some students to feel school isn't for them. Society is not better because of that choice. We as adults have a responsibility to make our decisions around the best interest of our children. Renovation is not in the best interest of our children.

It seems to me that public officials have a greater burden placed on them to protect the interests of the minority against the majority. These officials should be looking at the interests of the children, not the interests of the city or the interests of the majority.

then needs met? Where are the bathrooms going to be, and how close will they be? What's going to happen to the students with upper respiratory illnesses? What's going to prevent these students from becoming sick because of long term exposure to large amounts of dust on a daily basis? Who's going to protect their right to an education? What about students with neurological issues such as ADHD? Construction is going to cause an ever greater distraction. This syndrome is characterized by distractible and impulsive behaviors. The syndrome is characterized by difficulty in paying attention, sitting still, sustaining attention through the completion of a task, following directions of more than a few steps, waiting one's turn, toleration of frustration, and containing energy.

Who is going to protect their right to learn, by providing these students with a stable, consistent, and most especially a highly structured learning environment? Renovations will lead these students to surmise that school is a hostile place that will not protect their right to learn, according to their learning style.

It's easy to say that in the abstract that the student will survive renovations, but at what cost and whose child will be left behind in the process? The truth is in the best of situations teaching is difficult, but when we throw renovations into the mix, it becomes not only difficult but, in my opinion, it becomes impossible. This is a plea on behalf of those students who will be forced to contend with the hardship of living through renovations and attending school. I am a parent, educator, and long-time resident of Quincy. This is my opinion.

That Political Poll

It doesn't take much to get the local political speculation juices flowing.

Like that telephone poll reportedly being conducted in connection with this year's city election.

It seems to key in on the city council at-large race. And takes a glance of sorts at the mayor's office.

Details are still a bit sketchy. But according to a usually reliable source, one North Quincy household that was called said it appeared the caller was trying to determine the recognition factor of certain candidates.

A question reportedly went something like this: "Are you familiar with these names?"

The source doesn't know how many names were mentioned but the person receiving the call remembered three: John Keenan, Joseph Finn and -- William Phelan.

Both Keenan and Finn are candidates for council at-large, although they haven't yet officially announced.

KEENAN

FINN

But Phelan's name came as a surprise.

He is in the second year of his first three-year term as a school committee member, the second top vote-getter in a five candidate field in 1999.

But while Keenan's and Finn's names and others have been frequently mentioned as potential or sure council at-large candidates, there has been no talk, or even a peep, about Phelan possibly running for that office this year.

But being mentioned in the poll is good enough for the Speculation Corps to start their engines.

Phelan led the successful charge against the Quincy Ave. toxic waste dump as the site for the new Quincy High School.

The city council will have what amounts to the final say on the final site selection via bond issue votes to build the school.

So some are now speculating Phelan might run for the council to have a voice in that final say.

But another question reportedly in the poll also has some speculating he might run for something bigger.

The question is worded something like this: "Are you satisfied with the current administration?"

That would seem to mean the mayor's office and long-time incumbent James Sheets.

Would Phelan actually challenge Sheets, they're asking.

Sheets, who has served the longest of Quincy's mayors, will be seeking his seventh term. He has not had a major challenger since winning the mayor's office in 1989. He has run three times unopposed.

And his performance marks are still high.

Phelan, who is seen as a hero by many parents and others for his Lene Ranger-like stand against the Quincy Ave. site for the new Quincy High School would be considered a test for Sheets if he did run.

How good is the poll and what political value does it really have? And who is having it taken? And for who? And what are the actual results?

Questions still to be answered.

But that person in North Quincy who received the call said he was told by the pollster that it was being done independently.

And it sounded "pretty professional," he said. Never a dull moment in politics. Whether there's something really cooking or not.

SENATE PRESIDENT Tom Birmingham attended the Ward 4 Democratic Caucus Saturday and went away with a couple of nice prizes.

First, Mayor James Sheets recognized him for all he did to help save Quincy Hospital, now Quincy Medical Center.

And then received what sounded very much like Sheets' endorsement in his bid for governor according to those who were there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of Quincy Square looking south on Hancock Street from the First Parish Church. In the center the Bethany Congregational Church was on the site of today's Fleet Bank building. F.W. Woolworth's was on the street level of the Adams Building on the left. On the right is the marquis of the Alhambra Theater later known as the ART. The taller building just beyond the theater was the new home of the National Mount Wollaston Bank that later became the Norfolk County Trust Company, and after several mergers is now part of the Fleet Bank. That site is now home to the Stop & Shop headquarters building.

Keep Merrymount Park Beautiful

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am writing this letter in hopes that it will help to keep Merrymount Park just the way it is now — as one of the most beautiful and unique parks on the South Shore. There are no other public parks like this between here and the bridge to the Cape. The play fields, the amphitheater, the boat docks and the activity facilities are peerless. It is a perfect example of what Frederick Law Olmsted was talking about when he advocated big beautiful public spaces where people could get away from the cares of the city.

The Adams family gave this historic property to the city in the 1890s — during the same time that Olmsted created the Emerald Necklace in Boston. It offers scenic trails around the Black's Creek Estuary and vistas from the high ground out across the bay that are priceless. The property creates a long unbroken connection from the Hancock Street end to the water's edge at Wollaston Beach — with a variety of lovely landscape in between. It abuts property owned by the MDC, thus connecting to Wollaston Beach and eventually to Marina Bay.

The idea of siting the new high school in this location seems appealing at first. The city owns the property. There isn't any contamination to deal with. There are open spaces and field around — all to the benefit of our children. Who couldn't imagine their child happily off to a new school in such a pristine location, enjoying the views, sailing a boat, walking to the baseball field? However, a school is generally focused on indoor uses, with students concentrating on their studies and school activities. (Other "indoor" facilities are things like bowling alleys, movie theaters, convention centers or shopping malls.)

The setting is important, for safety and access, but not for stunning views to tidal estuaries. A school parking lot for 500 cars will take up close to four acres. The roadways need to be redesigned, maybe widened. Lighting will be added. Trees will be cleared to make way for construction. The site will be leveled for the building and fenced in for the associated play fields and facilities. There will be very little left of this parkland we all love so much.

The legacy of the last 100 years says the gift of this park is a treasure. If we take it and spend it, we can never have it back. All gone for a building that could be outdated and sold in the next 100 years, like some of our other old schools to private developers.

As a landscape architect, I have often worked on projects in this city and elsewhere that have taken properties and made them into something more beautiful and useful in some way — Marina Bay, the new library addition, Constitution Common in front of City Hall, Lincoln Heights, Crown Colony, Great Woods. There is no way I could ever approve Merrymount Park. There is no way I could ever be convinced that it would be an appropriate site for a school.

Quincy's Yesterdays Committee Reverses Itself On School Site

By PAUL HAROLD

The School Committee unanimously voted to reverse its choice of a site for the new Furnace Brook school, favoring the Rice estate on Adams St. over its previous choice, the golf course site on Furnace Brook Parkway.

49 Years Ago

Committee members said they changed their vote when new information was presented concerning the Furnace Brook golf course property. The seven and a half acre Rice property on the corner of Adams St. and Grenwood Rd. had an assessed value of $47,900.

Superintendent Dr. Paul Gossard said that he would seek the approval of City Manager William Deegan and the city council for the committee's new favored site.

ANTI-DEEGAN BLOCK DOWN TO THREE

City Councillor Frank Orcutt backed out of the "anti Deegan" block on the council that sought to fire the city manager. Four votes were needed to fire the Plan E manager.

Councillor Carl Anderson, who sought to oust Deegan, had the backing of Mayor David McIntosh and Councillor David Crowley. Those supporting Deegan, besides Orcutt, were councillors Edna Austin, Amelia Della Chiesa and Alfred Helfrich.

Anderson said that the anti-Deegan block had a slump card noting that it took five votes to appropriate the manager's salary.

Meanwhile, there were reports that in retaliation, Deegan was seeking a grand jury indictment against Anderson for violation provisions of the Plan E charter.

NEW JAY'S ARMY AND NAVY OPENS

A new Jay's Army and Navy store opened at 3 Granite St., quadrupling the floor space of the old store at 1632 Hancock St.

The new store carried that same merchandise of work clothes, Army and navy surplus and sporting goods along with a new sportswear department. Henry Gornstein of Pontiac Rd. was the owner with Max Coffman and Hyman Drushman as partners in the five-store chain.

The opening promotion included the display of the nation's largest pair of Lees dungarees.

Erika Feiner Art Exhibit At The Miter Box

Saturday is the final day of Quincy resident and artist Erika Feiner's month-long oil painting exhibit at the Miter Box, 18 Beach St., Wollaston.

Feiner, who was born in West Germany but moved to America in 1948 after marrying Walter Feiner, a U.S. serviceman, is displaying roughly 50 of her oil paintings with a focus on various landscapes and still lifes, along with several paintings of children.

This is the first such exhibition for Feiner, a self-trained artist and member of the Quincy Art Association who has won awards at Quincy's First Night celebrations and has participated in the "Arts Affair" on the boardwalk of Marina Bay.

Feiner resumed painting in 1999 after a 30-year hiatus.

"I can't explain it," said Feiner, the mother of four, on her decision to begin painting again after such a long time away. "It just came over me. Now I feel it's wasted time if I don't sit down to paint."

Describing her painting as "instinctive" and her method one of "trial and error," Feiner said light is an important element in her works.

Husband Walter has set up a workshop in the couple's home where Feiner, despite her arthritis, paints back and forth between two easels for up to eight hours at a time. "I paint until I'm stiff," Feiner said simply.

A strong advocate of what he calls his wife's "gift," Walter Feiner photographs his wife's paintings in various stages of the process and also makes occasion cards from her paintings, sending them to friends and relatives.

"She's terrific," he said. "Of course, I'm prejudiced."

Feiner's art hangs in the office of Mayor James Sheets and the couple presented a painting to Rabbi Jacob Mann on the occasion of his 90th birthday.

Feiner also devotes time to writing, having written several short stories and a manuscript for a novel.

For more information on the exhibit, contact Cheryl Mason at the Miter Box at (617) 479-2248.

ABANDONED DOWNTOWN was the reality last Tuesday morning, as a nor'easter bore down upon the city for nearly two days, canceling school, closing down many businesses, and causing Mayor James Sheets to declare a state of emergency. For all its force, the steady nature of the storm, combined with advanced warning and city preparedness, left Quincy relatively unscathed from the blizzard.

Child Welfare League Honors Bill Delahunt

The Child Welfare League of America has named Congressman Bill Delahunt of Quincy its 2001 Congressional Advocate of the Year "for his demonstrated commitment to the well-being of children, youth and families during the 106th Congress.

"Over the past four years," said a CWLA statement, "Rep. Delahunt has compiled an impressive record of legislative accomplishment on behalf of American children and families, with particular emphasis on easing obstacles to adoption."

The League cited legislation co-authored by Delahunt conferring U.S. citizenship on more than 75,000 children adopted from abroad, thus removing a burden from the adoptive American families and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Delahunt also played a key role in the ratification of the Hague Convention on Intercountry Adoption, a 60-nation treaty aimed at streamlining international adoption and safeguarding children who are often at risk in the process.

Quincy Lions Club Marks 60 Years Of Service

The Quincy Lions Club celebrated the 60th anniversary of its founding at a dinner meeting held recently at the Neighborhood Club.

Club President and Kingpin Thomas Zukauskas presided over the anniversary dinner.

Originally sponsored by the Weymouth Lions Club, the Quincy Lions Club received its charter from Lions International on January 20, 1941. Its charter membership included 21 members and its Charter President was Quincy attorney Avery W. Gilkerson, who also served on the City Council and as a state representative, later moving to Florida where he died some years ago.

Over the course of its 60-year history the Quincy Lions Club has met at several locations, including Ships Haven, Sherry's, The Fox and Hounds, Dutton's, and the Winfield House. The club currently meets each Thursday at noon and scheduled evening meetings at the Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd. The club does not meet on holidays or during July and August.

Over the past 10 years, the Quincy Lions Club has made contributions in excess of $125,000 to worthwhile causes including: Massachusetts Eye Research Foundation; eye exams and glasses for local residents; hearing aids for local residents; scholarships for local high school students; and holiday dinners for the blind.

The club also provides social settings for its members and guests including such events as a harbor cruise, theater experience, comedy connection, and an annual installation dinner.

Lions International is the world's largest service club organization and the first ever to have achieved one million members. Lions in more than 39,000 clubs participate in service efforts spanning the globe. The Lions Club is active in 171 countries or geographical locations on six continents and currently boasts 1,375,000 members.

Presently, there are 81 members in the Quincy Lions Club.

Stated Lions Club objectives are:

- To create and foster a spirit of understanding among the peoples of the world.

- To promote the principles of good government and good citizenship.

- To take an active interest in the civic, cultural, social, and moral welfare of the community.

- To unite the clubs in the bonds of friendship, good fellowship, and mutual understanding.

- To provide a forum for the open discussion of all matters of public interest provided, however, that partisan politics and sectarian religion shall not be debated by club members.

- To encourage service-minded men and women to serve their community without personal financial reward, and to encourage efficiency and high ethical standards in commerce, industry, professions, public works, and private endeavors.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

INLAYS AND ONLAYS

Inlays are restorations that more resemble fillings than crowns. They are typically more conservative than crowns because they require removal of less tooth structure. Inlays can be fabricated of composite resin, porcelain, or gold. Ideally, inlays are best used to treat small areas of decay that involve only the chewing surface and one proximal surface (the surface in between teeth). It is best if the opposite proximal surface is intact and free of decay. Larger restorations, including both proximal surfaces, are better served by onlays or crowns. Onlays extend to cover the entire chewing surface, thereby protecting cusps of the teeth from fracture. Like inlays, onlays can be composed of composite resin, porcelain or gold.

P.S. Gold inlays have been used for nearly a century.

Thinking About Leaving Quincy?

Think Again

Call it stubborn loyalty, but this is where I grew up. I know the stores, the streets and the people like the back of my hand. It's where I raised my family. I'm staying here and moving to River Bay Club retirement community. They offer everything I need for now and in the future. Florida, that's for vacations.

SPRING CAME EARLY this year for Quincy resident Cheryl Morgan (right) as she prepared to distribute hundreds of "Hearts in Bloom" bouquets to fellow employees at Ernest & Young. Volunteers sold bouquets of flowers, which raised funds to help lifesaving research and community education programs sponsored by the American Heart Association. Each bouquet of flowers carried information on how to "Be An American Heartsaver. It's as easy as 1-2-3." 1. Know the warning signs of heart attack and stroke; 2. Call 911 in a medical emergency; 3. Give CPR. With Morgan are Mary Bennett, Melanie Knowles and Beth Coyle. (Ed MacKinnon Photography)

Quincy Citizens For Safe Schools Win 'Outstanding Activism' Award

Quincy Citizens for Safe Schools was honored with an "Outstanding Activism" award Saturday for its work in halting construction of a new Quincy High School on the site of an old shipyard toxic waste dump.

"The Quincy residents did a remarkable job of researching the facts and educating Quincy residents and Quincy town officials about the toxics hazards at the proposed site," said director of Toxics Action Center.

"They truly deserve to be honored for their hard work to protect Quincy students from exposure to dangerous toxic chemicals."

The award was presented to group members, including leader Julie Berberan, at "Toxic Action 2001," the region's largest environmental conference organized by Toxics Action Center. More than 325 activists attended the conference.

Keynote speaker was Pat Costner, senior scientist with Greenpeace International, and closing remarks were delivered by Joe Thornton, author of "Pandora's Poison: Chlorine, Health and a New Environmental Strategy."

Since 1987, Toxics Action Center has assisted more than 300 neighborhood groups in their fights against toxic hazards in their communities.

Quincy 2000 Gives $2 Million Helping Hand To Firms

Joseph Mannarino, executive director of The Quincy 2000 Corporation, announces that the economic development agency has allocated up to $2 million of its Loan Pool for Quincy businesses which have suffered business setbacks due to this winter's dramatic increase in energy costs, excessive cold weather and recent storm damage.

The borrowing need may have been generated by market disruptions, price increases, physical damage to business property or depleted working capital due to lost sales revenues. In addition, Quincy 2000 will offer a free business technical assistance package covering such items as cash flow management, pricing, contractor selection, permitting and code compliance.

Quincy 2000 is the city's non-profit, private/public economic development partnership whose Loan Pool makes loans for such difficult to finance purposes as business start-up, working capital, equipment finance and leasehold improvements. Additionally, Quincy 2000 provides lower cost business financing using federal Community Development Block Grant monies provided through the city of Quincy for business creating jobs for low and moderate income people.

"While recent storm damage has been limited, it has come on the heels of other major business disruptions this winter," said Mannarino. "We believe that being there for Quincy businesses experiencing emergencies is a key element of our economic development mission. The flexibility of our participating banks is particularly helpful in these situations."

Fleet Bank services the Quincy 2000 Loan Pool. Its bank funders are Century, Citizens, Colonial, Eastern, Fleet, Massachusetts Cooperative, Rockland Trust, South Shore Cooperative, South Shore Savings, Sovereign and The Bank of Canton.

Mexican Restaurant For Downtown

This week, Quincy Center will have its first Mexican take out restaurant at 1502 Hancock St., called OK Jose Tagueria, next to Hancock Tobacco.

The License Board Tuesday issued a common victualer license to David Lopez, who will manage the restaurant.

According to Chairman Joseph Shea, Several businesses have been at the site, but have closed in a short period of time.

This time, the restaurant will offer all kinds of Mexican entrees including fajitas, quesadillas, taco's, burritos and a variety of other favorite dishes.

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business and Professional Association gave a "thumbs up" when Shea asked her what she thought about the new establishment. She later commented that "it's going to be terrific."

'To Kill' List Taken Very Seriously By School Officials

Joke or not, the city's school department is taking very seriously an incident at Broad Meadows Middle School where a sixth-grade boy was found with a "People to kill list."

The list, which contained the names of four female students, was discovered last week, resulting in a 10-day suspension for the boy, a letter to parents, and a public meeting on the matter Monday night.

"I have been in constant contact with Superintendent (Eugene) Creedon on the matter," said Mayor James Sheets, who received a report from Creedon Friday. "From what I can determine, the issue has been handled properly."

According to Creedon's report, Sheets said, the matter was handled appropriately by both Broad Meadows Principal Anne Marie Zukauskas and faculty at the school. Creedon assured the mayor that the school department took the situation "very seriously" but was following due process as set forth in the frameworks of the Quincy Public Schools.

"Unfortunately, these things do happen," Sheets said. "It was important that we address the matter in a responsible manner and that's what we did."

Tax Prep Help Available At Quincy Council On Aging

IRS-trained volunteers are available by appointment Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Quincy Council On Aging, 83 Saratoga St., to help individuals who need assistance in preparing a basic tax return.

"Each year the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) trains groups of volunteers to prepare basic tax returns for free," said IRS spokeswoman Peggy Riley. "Once training has been completed, the volunteers set up sites within their community to assist older individuals, those with disabilities, or non-English speaking taxpayers with tax return preparation."

Taxpayers who plan to visit one of the 294 sites located in Massachusetts must bring along their 2000 tax package, W-2 statements, Form 1099 bank interest and dividend statements, and a copy of last year's (1999) tax return. Accurate social security numbers are also required for anyone listed on the tax return -- the taxpayer, spouse, and any dependents being claimed.

For more information, call the Quincy Council On Aging at (617) 376-1246 or the IRS toll-free number at 1-800-829-1040.

QMC is required to file annually a report detailing benchmarks and milestones toward the goal of achieving financial viability.

The benchmarks, as outlined in the legislation, are to include changes in patient volume and payor mix; the establishment and maintenance of community benefits; and the results of affiliations with other health care providers.

The report has been filed with the Secretary of Administration and Finance, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate, and the Legislature's Joint Committee on Health Care, as also prescribed by the legislation.

On Friday, Schuster and several members of her executive team met with the local legislative delegation to discuss details of the report and the first year performance.

Later, the QMC team met with Deputy Secretary for Administration and Finance Henri Rauschenbach — who has emerged as the Cellucci/Swift Administration's point man on health care issues — to brief him on the report as it was being delivered to key agencies and committees.

"The tremendous progress Quincy Medical Center has made in a relatively short period of time is truly remarkable," said Schuster. "As we told Deputy Secretary Rauschenbach, we believe that our performance serves as a positive example of making the best of a second chance.

"Our local legislative delegation and Mayor Jim Sheets have been the key to turning this hospital around and helping to put us on the right course."

The report lists several accomplishments of QMC during the past year, including:

- "Recruited a new seasoned, executive leadership team including the president and chief executive officer, vice-president for Patient Care Services, and General Manager for Support Services and changed administrative leadership positions in several key operating departments;
- "Implemented new clinical leadership from Boston Medical Center including the Chief of Surgery, Chief of Anesthesia, Chief of Medicine, and Chief of Psychiatry;
- "Received accreditation by the Joint Commission on the Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations (JCAHO), with a score of 94 percent, the highest in the history of the hospital;

- "Increased inpatient discharges by five percent and increased Emergency Department visits by six percent from FY 1999 to FY 2000;
- "Increased the free care provided from FY 2000 by 8.6 percent to $2,429,000;
- "Added many new clinical services stemming from our comprehensive clinical affiliation with Boston Medical Center;
- "Improved financial performance that has restored our compliance with mortgage covenants;

- "Improved critical financial benchmarks including accounts receivable, accounts payable, debt service ratio, and cash on hand."

"Our accomplishments during the past year were made possible by the continued support of the major stakeholders who came together to support Quincy Medical Center's transition in 1999," said Schuster. "Mayor James Sheets and the taxpayers of the City of Quincy have continued their promised five-year commitment of financial support.

"We also engaged in very productive negotiations with our unions that resulted in QMC being the employer of choice in our competitive market for labor resources. The labor unions have made financial and work rule concessions to uphold their commitment to QMC's financial stability."

THE OXYGEN SENSOR

Modern vehicles are equipped with oxygen sensors in their exhaust systems that measure the oxygen content of the vehicle's exhaust gases. This information aids the engine-control computer to regulate the mixture of air and fuel burned in the engine, providing an optimal balance of power, economy and clean exhaust. Oxygen sensors are relatively easy and inexpensive to replace. Some vehicle owners ignore the recommended replacement intervals in their owner's manuals because there is not a noticeable difference in the way the vehicle drives when the sensor stops functioning normally. This is a false economy. The engine may use too much fuel as a result, as well as pollute the air needlessly. This hurts both the wallet and the environment.

Real Estate in the New Era

by Vin Moscardelli
Owner/Broker

FOR EVERYONE'S BENEFIT

First and foremost, buyers want to know how much house they will be able to afford. The best way to get an answer to this question is to go through the mortgage prequalification process. This begins the process of formally applying for a mortgage, and gives the buyer a clear sense of his or her buying parameters. Mortgage prequalification and preapproval also gives the real estate agent a more realistic idea of what homes best suit the buyer. And, it strengthens the buyer's bargaining position with the seller by presenting him or her with a prequalified buyer whom he or she knows is financially qualified to purchase the house. Sellers are more likely to turn their attention to serious buyers.

In today's competitive real estate market, it's to your advantage to know in advance the amount of money you are eligible to borrow. A pre-approval letter from a bank will give you negotiating power when you find the home of your dreams. The sales associates of FRACENTRAL REAL ESTATE combine years of professional experience with a dedication to our clients and community. Our goal is to bring buyers and sellers together to the mutual satisfaction of both. Call us at 328-1312 to arrange a convenient consultation, or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway.

HINT: Mortgage prequalification indicates the maximum amount the lender feels the buyer can afford but not necessarily spend.

Caddy Park Native American Artifacts Historical Society Topic

The ancient Native American artifacts discovered in Quincy's Caddy Park two summers ago will be the focus of Quincy Historical Society's meeting. Thursday, March 22 at 7:30 p.m. at Adams Academy, Quincy Center.

Tom Mahlstedt, archaeologist for the Metropolitan District Commission who directed the excavation, will be guest speaker.

The Caddy Park find is unprecedented in New England in the age and range of the material found. Discovered during construction of a new playground, the artifacts have produced much discussion and some controversy about what they reveal about the lives of early Native Americans. Some have suggested they reveal exciting new possibilities about this early people, particularly about their reliance on and ability to exploit the resources of the waters of Massachusetts Bay.

Mahlstedt, currently archaeologist with the Department of Environmental Management, will present an illustrated talk that details the process of discovery and excavation, describes the objects found, and discusses what they indicate about the way of life and the behavior of the people who made them.

The public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Coyote Prowling Squantum Area Raises Concerns

"Obviously, any wild animal near our center is a concern," continued Beals. "We've reported it to the animal control officer and have used it as an opportunity to remind the children that you never go near a wild animal, or even a dog, and that you never feed wild animals."

Beals, who grew up in the mountainous area around San Diego, said she is quite familiar with the howling of coyotes but has yet to hear one in Squantum. "But I'll be listening," Beals said.

Although the idea of wild animals so close to homes and neighborhood pets is a bit frightening at first, the fact that a coyote or even coyotes have been sighted in Squantum is not at all surprising, said Susan Langlois, a wildlife biologist from the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife stationed in Westborough.

"I'm sure the sightings are accurate," Langlois said. "Coyotes are ubiquitous and extremely adaptive. They're really like suburbia because of the easy living, the constant food supply 365 days a year."

Coyotes, Langlois said, first migrated to Massachusetts in the 1950's and by the late 1970's had crossed the canal onto Cape Cod. By the early 1990's, coyotes were present in every community in the state, including Springfield, Worcester, and Boston, Langlois said.

"The coyotes (in Squantum) have most likely been there for years," she said.

According to Langlois, coyotes adapt to suburbia in much the same way as raccoons, deer, squirrels, and songbirds. The animals are "opportunistic," eating whatever is easiest for them, including moles, mice, voles, rabbits, ground-nesting birds, insects, squirrels. Even easier, of course, are items such as trash, roadkill, compost, pet food, and fallen fruit from trees.

And, although Langlois said they would not actively hunt them, the coyotes will eat cats if the opportunity arises. "Yes, cats are recognized as a definite prey item," she said.

Because coyotes are so prevalent, Langlois said the best advice for residents was to make their homes as uninviting to the animals as possible.

"The number one rule is never feed them," Langlois said. "They become habituated very easily. If you had a neighbor feeding the coyotes, then I would say you have a problem."

Other tips include: securing trash, not feeding pets outside, using bird feeders which keep the seed contained, and removing brush from backyards.

"Coyotes are shy, elusive creatures by nature," Langlois said. "They're not looking for human contact."

But try telling that to Landsdowne St.'s Mary Collins, who had a run-in with a coyote last fall as she walked her 90-pound Belgian Herding Dog "Yogi" along the caseway roughly 100 yards from the entrance to Marina Bay.

"At first I thought it was a dog on the marsh," said Collins, "but then I got a better look and said 'that is no dog.'"

"I was never so scared in my whole life."

After spotting the coyote, Collins said she stepped up her pace only to notice that the coyote was following her. Terrified, Collins — a 16-year member of the School Committee who left office in 1992 — started flagging down the first car she saw, which, luckily happened to be a Quincy Police Department cruiser.

Collins and Yogi jumped in the cruiser, she said, and all ended happily.

But Collins said she is skeptical that coyotes only look for small prey. "My dog Yogi is anything but small," she said. "In fact, he was bigger than the coyote."

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton said he has been aware of the situation for some time and said the best course of action was to continue to work closely with the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife and with Donald Conboy, animal control officer for the city.

"When it was first mentioned to me, it sounded like folklore," Newton admitted, saying that he has since learned much from Langlois and others about the habits of coyotes.

"They cover an amazing amount of territory," said Newton, echoing an earlier comment by Langlois that coyotes can roam an area from two to 30 square miles in size. "The coyote that you see in Blue Hills one day could be the same one you see in Squantum the next."

WINTER CAR CARE

Negotiating The Best Deal For A New Car

NEED TO GET A NEW car? That's the most exciting question you'll make this year. Since the average price of a new car is about $23,500, it's important to know how to negotiate a better deal. According to E-LOAN, a leading online lending company, here are some things to consider:

- Find out what you can afford. Before walking into the showroom, decide how much you're able to pay in cash and how much you'll need to finance. Online lending sites, such as E-LOAN.com, will approve your financing before you go to the dealership. That way, your financing will be arranged before you shop so you can operate like a cash buyer. E-LOAN.com also allows you to make sure that the credit rate you're approved for is solely based on your individual financial profile, not on your negotiating skills.

- Recognize that there are three different negotiations. The price of the car, the price of your financing and often the value of a trade-in are all opportunities to get a better deal. Treating each as a separate transaction will help you to negotiate each more successfully, thereby helping you to save the most money overall on your new car.

- Negotiate the sales price. Car dealers may be willing to bargain on their profit margin, often by as much as 10 to 20 percent. This is the difference between the manufacturer's suggested retail price and the dealer invoice cost. Web sites like Kelley Blue Book at kbb.com will show the dealer's invoice costs.

- Negotiate the financing. If you've decided to finance your vehicle through the dealership, make sure its interest rate is comparable to rates you found elsewhere. Many dealerships make more profit by marking up the interest rates they offer consumers than on the purchase of the car. It's important to find the lowest rate available to you. Otherwise, you could wind up paying as much as $3,600 in extra charges. Remember, negotiating credit is no different than negotiating the price of a new house.

- Be aware of changing interest rates. Once you've driven off with the car of your dreams, keep an eye out for dropping interest rates. Like a home mortgage, you can also refinance your auto loan to lower your monthly payments and the total amount you end up paying for your car.

To learn more about how to get the best rate on your next auto loan, simply log on to www.e-loan.com or call 1-888-E-LOAN-22.

Brake For Wildlife

(NAPS)—Collisions between automobiles and deer account for over one million accidents each year. The Humane Society of the United States urges drivers to avoid collisions with deer and other animals by following these tips:

- Scan the edges of the road for wildlife about to cross.
- Slow down when traveling where animals are most likely to cross, especially in wooded and brushy areas, stream valleys and areas where two habitat types meet.
- Maintain a safe following distance.
- Expect to see more animals at dawn and dusk, the most active times for many wild animals and rush hour for drivers.
- Lower your dashboard lights slightly to enable you to better see the reflection of your headlights in the eyes of any animal near the road.
- Deer can't read crossing signs. Use caution at all times.
- If you see one animal, expect more to follow.

Squirt A's Ride Undeclared Wave To State Title

The Quincy Squirt A Wolfpack travel hockey team can now say it is the best in the state.

On Sunday afternoon, Quincy dispatched Andover, 2-1, to capture the state championship at Springfield Olympia in Springfield. For the Wolfpack, it was pay back for an 8-5 loss they suffered earlier in the season at the Medford Thanksgiving Tournament.

Forwards Johnny McInnis and Chris Brown netted the two goals, while defenseman Ricky Penzo and forward Lammy Papalambros picked up assists.

Quincy (39-5) will compete in the Greater Boston League playoffs this weekend and it will end the season the following weekend with a tournament in Montreal.

Quincy went 5-0 in the state tournament, outscoring its opponents 18-11. The goalies and the blue line also turned in a strong performance. It opened with a 4-1 win over Twin City last Friday night. Casey Conley, Teddy Walsh (assist), Brian Sullivan (assist) and McInnis (assist) tallied goals. Mike Leone and Brown had assists.

On Saturday morning, Papalambros potted a goal and collected a pair of assists to spark Quincy to a 4-3 win over Plymouth in the second game. Kyle Tobin, Sullivan and Conley (assist) added the other goals. Kenny Patey and McInnis had assists.

Later in the evening, the Wolfpack knocked out Danvers, 5-2, behind a pair of goals and an assist from McInnis, Tobin, Walsh and Sullivan also found the back of the net. Papalambros notched two assists, while Glenn Peterson, Mike Griffin, Kevin Lewis and Brown had one apiece.

In the semifinals Sunday morning, Quincy cruised to a 7-4 win over previously unbeaten Falmouth. Sullivan and Brown powered the offense with two goals and an assist each. McInnis picked up three points (goal, 2 assists) and Tobin chipped in with a goal and an assist. Walsh also lit the lamp, while

John Alexander, Glen Misho On Sea Dogs Team

Glen Misho and John Alexander, both of Quincy, have been named as early selections to the 2001 South Shore Baseball Club Seadogs 11-and-under division AAU travel baseball team.

As members of the Seadogs, Misho and Alexander will compete against other AAU organizations in Massachusetts for the right to appear in the AAU Baseball National Championships to be held in the new $175 million, 200-acre Walt Disney Sports Complex in Orlando, Fla., in August.

"Glen is a talented pitcher with a great arm," said Chris Dintino, 11-and-under team manager. "I'm looking forward to coaching him at this level."

"John is a very talented ballplayer with experience at the AAU level," said Steve Almonte, director of the Seadogs program.

A sixth-grader at St. Agatha's School in Milton, Misho plays for Quincy Police in Quincy Youth Baseball's Little League division.

Alexander, a sixth-grader at Broad Meadows Middle School, plays for the Lions Club in Quincy Youth Baseball. He is also a member of the Quincy All-Star travel A team, which posted a perfect 29-0 record last summer and won the South Suburban League championship.

Alexander's father is also a part of the Seadogs organization when he was elected to the 11-and-under coaching staff this year.

The Seadogs program is not intended to replace but supplement local league play.

Growing in popularity, AAU travel team baseball gives players, coaches and families the opportunity to travel and compete in a national tournament. "Going to the National Championship is a thrill of a lifetime," Almonte said.

The South Shore Baseball Club will field eight teams in 2001, from the 10-and-under to the 17-and-un-

Squirt B's Win Cranberry Crown For Third Tournament Title

The Quincy Squirt B travel hockey team recently blanked Weymouth, 4-0, to capture the 2001 Cranberry Tournament championship in Pembroke.

The victory makes it a clean sweep in tournament entries this year, as Quincy has also won the Waterville Valley (N.H.) and K of C tournaments.

After a somewhat rocky start, Ryan Murphy settled down and posted back-to-back shutouts to earn tournament MVP honors. Matt Flaherty scored the game-winning 22 seconds into the game on a feed from Erik Johnson and Sean Dunn.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 7-3 win over the Coastal Stars and then knocked off Weymouth, 6-1, and Pembroke, 4-0, to reach the championship game.

After the tournament,

Quincy picked up a huge 2-1 win over previously unbeaten and state tournament bound Somerville to advance to the Greater Boston League playoffs.

Coached by Philip Johnson and Patrick Morrissey, Quincy has gone 24-2-1 since mid-December thanks to the strong play of its blue-liners. The defense consists of Billy Kiley, Brian McLean, Pat Morrissey, Michael LeBel, Michael Grant and Scott Vallatini.

Due to their puck control and size, Tom Conley, Scott Richardson and Kyle Craig have emerged as a potent top line. The other two lines — Matt Clifford, Glen Misho, Chris Devlin, Johnson, Dunn and Flaherty — have been equally impressive, utilizing its speed and hustle to its advantage.

Rory Lydon Eighth Quincy Wrestler To Win State Title

Quincy High School senior Rory Lydon recently became the eighth wrestler in school history to take home a Division 1 state title.

Coming off just his second loss of the season (42 wins at the sectional finals, Lydon had plenty of motivation heading into the Division 1 state tournament.

"I've never seen a wrestler react the way Rory did to his sectional final loss," said head coach Lou Venturelli. "He was emotional and obviously down after his loss. But when I asked him how he was doing, he said, 'I'm not upset about losing, I'm just upset that I didn't work hard enough.'"

Lydon had a relatively easy ride to the finals with two quick pins and a 6-0 win in the semifinals over the Springfield Central wrestler to set up the showdown with B.C. High's Neil Paolotta for the third time this season.

The third time was a charm as Lydon pinned Paolotta in just under 90 seconds to capture the championship.

"What an incredible accomplishment for Rory to win a state title in only two years of wrestling," Venturelli said. "Some of his opponents have been wrestling since they were in sixth grade."

Junior Scott Kelley won four matches at the state tournament to earn a fifth-place medal in the 160 pound class. Junior Mike Murphy lost two closely contested matches. Junior Joe Hern suffered a serious ankle injury in his quarterfinal match and had to bow out of the tourney.

"What a shame that Joe was hurt because I truly believe he may have been the third best wrestler in all of New England at his weight," Venturelli said.

Park Dept. Field Permit Applications Due March 30

The City Park Department announces that applications for field permits are due to the Park Department no later than Friday, March 30.

Applications for the spring and summer sports seasons must be returned to the Park Department before then to assure priority permit dates. Permit applications can be received by calling (617) 376-1252.

The Park and Recreation Board must approve all permit requests before an official permit is issued. Priority is given to public school athletic programs, youth sports programs and then adult sports programs. Those groups who have received permits in the past will be provided the first priority for renewal.

Applicants who have previously sought permission from both the School Department and Park Department can now handle all of their requests through the Park Department. The Park Department has been granted permitting authority of all municipally-owned athletic fields.

Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments said:

"With any luck, the weather will improve and we will not be set back any further by the late snowfall. We ask that groups cooperate and allow the Park Department an opportunity to prepare the fields for the upcoming seasons. Only through your cooperation will we be able to provide the quality athletic facilities that you have come to enjoy."

Disappointing Finish But Promising Future For Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

Those in the high school hockey world not familiar with Quincy, take out some yellow sticky notes and jot down the following information.

13-7 record, Division 1 South sectional semifinals, 17 returnees, 10 seniors, Shaun Flaherty, the Germans, Bill McKeon.

Keep the notes in a safe place for future reference because these items will appear on Quincy's resume in December when the puck drops for the 2001-02 season. They're impressive credentials for a team that might very well be the favorite of the Old Colony League next year.

Although the Presidents might think this season ended prematurely with the 6-1 drubbing to No. 4 seed Norwood (17-6-1) in the semifinals last Friday night, it lasted a lot longer than most expected.

Considering the giant it faced in the second round, the fact that it made the trip to Brockton's Asiat Rink is quite an accomplishment. Quincy, seeded eighth, opened the tourney with a 4-2 victory over No. 9 Needham to set up the date with top seed Falmouth (18-4).

In the regular season, the two O.C.L. schools split the series, 1-1. The Presidents skated to a 5-4 win on the road in the first game, but dropped a 6-3 decision to the league champs at Quincy Youth Arena in the rematch.

In Round 3 last Wednesday night at Gallo Arena in Bourne, McKeon, a junior forward, skated a pass at midice and stole it alone to beat goalie Mike Mastriano with 14.3 seconds left in the first stanza for a 1-0 lead.

As it turns out, that was all that was needed. Quincy upset the best team in the Division 1 South playoffs, 1-0.

The real story of the game was the action between the Quincy pipes. Flaherty, the junior netminder, turned back 24 Clipper shots to record the shutout. In the middle frame he must have felt like a target at a firing range, as Falmouth peppered him with 15 shots from just about every where on the ice.

Flaherty's performance this season has been an added bonus for the Presidents. Sylvia was concerned about his goaltending situation before the season started. His second goalie, junior Tom Shruhan, was still recovering from a right knee injury sustained during the football season and Flaherty was still a question mark.

Well, Sylvia can put an exclamation mark next to his name now. Flaherty emerged as the No. 1 goalie as the season played out, and was at his best during the tournament. After stopping 54 of 56 shots (.964 saves percentage) through the first two games, Flaherty was equally as good in the semifinals, despite the 6-1 score.

He made countless big time saves to keep his team within striking distance after two periods when Quincy trailed 2-1. Junior Andy Ross scored his second goal of the tourney for the Presidents. In the third, Quincy self-destructed when Falmouth struck for two breakaway goals within the first two minutes to break open the game. The sixth goal was an empty-netter.

In the preseason Sylvia knew he would have a solid team, but the question was when. With a predominately young team, only three seniors, Sylvia felt any success the team achieved this year would depend on how fast the younger players developed.

It proved to be faster than the winner of the faster finger competition on "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire."

A 19-goal scorer his sophomore year, McKeon was the only established player coming into this season. But junior Dave Germain and his younger brother, Matt, a freshman, developed into potent offensive threats, while juniors Andy Ross and Brian Scott showed a knack for scoring. Sophomores Ryan Conley, Brendan Conley, Liam Powers, Matt LaCorte and freshman Josh Giordani also performed well.

With 17 players returning from this highly successful season, Quincy should be a powerhouse in Division 1 next year as it tries to erase its disappointment of the season ending in the semifinals.

Fond Memories Of Quincy Youth Soccer League

The fall season is long over, but fond memories of the Quincy Youth Soccer League still linger on.

If you happened to drive by Kincaid Field on a Saturday in September or October, you would've seen a wall of colors running around chasing a little white ball. Those were the future Eric Wanaladas and Mia Hammis of Quincy Youth Soccer.

Last fall, 150 parents and grandparents along with 131 boys and girls participated each Saturday morning in Quincy Youth Soccer's 5-year-old skills program. The program was comprised of "player coaches," 13, 14 and 15-year-olds who volunteered their time and energy to train the kids. You don't find many teenagers willing to be on a field at 9:30 in the morning on a weekend.

Symptoms Of Heart Disease And How To Treat It

What is heart disease?

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in the United States. There are many different types of heart disease - some are congenital (people are born with them), while a majority of heart diseases develop over the course of time and affect people in later life. Heart and blood vessel diseases are often referred to as "silent killers" because they usually develop over time and can go unnoticed.

Many heart problems develop when the arteries, which supply the heart with blood, slowly clog with cells, fat and cholesterol - a substance known as plaque. When the inner walls of arteries become narrow from a buildup of plaque, blood clots form and less blood can get through. This condition is known as atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries. Lack of blood flow to the heart can cause a heart attack, while lack of blood flow to the brain can result in a stroke.

General symptoms of heart disease

In people with heart disease, physical activity, emotional stress and even eating can bring on symptoms. Blockages in the arteries of the heart often cause symptoms, such as chest pressure, heaviness, tightness or a squeezing sensation. Sometimes these sensations are mistaken for gas or indigestion. Symptoms of the heart are often experienced as spreading to the neck, the back, the left arm, the throat, ears, jaws or stomach. Some people experience symptoms in only one area, and not in the chest area at all. Easy fatigue and breathlessness during activities may also be indicative of heart disease, as can difficulty breathing when lying flat, swelling of the ankles and palpitations accompanied by dizziness and other symptoms.

Prevention

Research has identified certain risk factors that make people more prone to heart disease. While some risk factors can't be controlled, such as being male or having a family history of heart disease, those related to lifestyle can be controlled, and may provide significant long-term benefits. Sometimes, risk factors overlap. By making changes in one area of life, such as becoming more physically active, you may decrease your cholesterol levels and blood pressure. The physicians of Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital recommend the following steps to help reduce the risk of certain heart diseases:

- Maintaining a diet that is low in saturated fat and cholesterol.

- Engaging in regular physical activity (preferably aerobic activity, a minimum of 30 minutes per session, at least four times per week).

- Keeping weight or body fat in a healthy range.
- Not smoking.
- Keeping blood pressure in a healthy range.
- If necessary, taking medications to lower blood cholesterol levels.

Cardiac Rehabilitation Program at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital

The inpatient Cardiac Program at Spaulding Rehabilitation Hospital uniquely incorporates rehabilitation with primary and specialty medical care to meet the needs of cardiac patients. The care team provides comprehensive medical management and rehabilitation services to patients with physical limitations resulting from cardiovascular problems.

Plaques Support QMC Auxiliary

Remember a loved one or honor a friend by placing their name on the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary plaque in the Hunting Hall of Founders at the hospital.

Nameplates cost $85 each and become a permanent part of the Auxiliary plaque.

The Hunting Hall of Founders recognizes the contributions of the many individuals, businesses and organizations that have provided financial support to Quincy Medical Center over the years. It is named for Nathaniel S. Hunting, MD, one of the founding physicians of the hospital at its inception in 1890.

Proceeds from nameplate contributions help support the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary, which raises funds for equipment and services benefiting patient care at the hospital.

To place an order for a nameplate, call Natalie Fossati in the hospital gift shop at (617) 376-5509.

Surgeons Podiatrists

WHY STEROID INJECTIONS?

Podiatrists sometimes treat some conditions by injecting corticosteroids (derivatives of cortisone). Steroids, such as dexamethasone, are potent anti-inflammatory agents and can give significant relief. Some conditions that can respond well include plantar fasciitis, heel spur syndrome, capsulitis (inflammation of the capsule around a joint), bursitis and some types of arthritis. The injections, with proper techniques, can be given without causing major pain since the steroid is often mixed with a local anesthetic (e.g., lidocaine). The skin can be prepared with, for example, Ethyl Chloride to minimize the trauma of the needle.

Are these injections harmful? Theoretically, steroids can cause some unwanted side effects, like the weakening of the internal structure of a tendon that can lead to a rupture. However, like many treatments in Medicine, when these substances are used judiciously and in appropriate situations, their utilization can be safe and effective. In fact, in some circumstances, the beneficial effects may border on the miraculous.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

WITNESS! Let's think about the word, not necessarily in a religious sense, but from an earthly view of human reaction. All of us witness things everyday. We see varying circumstances, situations and attitudes all around us, both good and bad. As we witness these things in other people, wouldn't it be a good idea for us to ponder what other people see or witness in us? Each of us individually sets a standard of behavior, thought and expression linked to ourselves. In doing this, we naturally provide a scene or knowledge for others to witness. The things we do and the things we say cause people to talk about us favorably or gossip about us unfavorably.

We create our own image, good or bad. We control the destinies of our image in the minds and thoughts of others. When we can be rightfully proud of what others witness in us, we gain an inner gladness that automatically portrays a better, more likeable image...

QEMA Activated For 72 Hours During Storm

By CHRISTOPHER GEORGE

The Quincy Emergency Management Agency was activated for 72 hours during last week's storm working with other groups to assist residents in need.

QEMA, under Acting Director Anthony Siciliano, activated for a 72-hour stretch after Governor Cellucci declared a State of Emergency for the state on Sunday, March 4.

The Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) took control of Emergency Communications for the Deputy Directors, the Junior Management Staff and other Emergency Personnel assisting with this blizzard.

QEMA, the underwater recovery team, the Department of Traffic and Parking, and the National Guard worked together to help deal with the coastal flooding in the Houghs Neck and Wollaston areas.

QEMA and the City of Quincy Elder Services teamed with CERT and shoveled out the elderly around the city. Through Elder Services and QEMA, names and addresses were gathered and teams of kids were sent out on the streets with inspiration, energy and a shovel.

Brian Wilkosky, the Deputy Director of Youth Services, headed up this team. Through the efforts of CERT and Elder Services, a large percentage of the elderly in this city were shoveled out.

By the weekend, CERT was re-involved with other community activities. On Saturday, March 10, Gregory Davis and Christine Verlicco, members of CERT, attended The New Frontier Society Leadership Conference at the JFK Library in Boston. Christine's comment on this event was "We learned a lot of helpful techniques about how and what it means to be a leader. It was a great experience and I was honored to be involved."

Also on Saturday, members of CERT attended the Emergency Preparedness Fair at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Anthony Siciliano displayed a descriptive presentation, gave a speech on emergency preparedness and showed a video. He also furnished the fair with the Quincy EMA Command Center and his Rapid Response Truck.

Thomas McGrath, the Chief of Lighting and Power for Emergency Management, brought the Lighting and Power Response Truck. Tours were given of the vehicles and classes and demonstrations were given on wilderness survival, preparing first aid kits and alternate methods of cooking was demonstrated by the local boy scout troop.

(Christopher W. George is junior manager for the Quincy Emergency Management Agency.)

'A Legend Among Us'

Carol Herbai Honored As Sun Citizen Of Year

Carol Herbai who for more than a half-century has been a dedicated volunteer at Quincy Medical Center, with the American Red Cross and — as well as at a leper colony — was honored Sunday as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year.

The 16th annual Quincy Sun award for outstanding community service was presented to her for the year 2000 at a reception at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center.

Nearly 150 guests attended, including city and state officials, hospital and Red Cross colleagues, family members, past recipients of the award and members of the judges' panel that selected her from among 38 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers.

They heard her cited as "a legendary figure," a leader who helped save the hospital during its financial plight, and praised as an enthusiastic and inspiring volunteer.

'The Budget Is Going To Be Very Tight' Sheets Calls For 10% Cut In Dept. General Expenses

By CRAIG SALTERS

In response to unexpectedly high health insurance costs, Mayor James Sheets has ordered city department heads to reduce their expense lines 10 percent for the Fiscal Year 2002 budget.

"They're going to have to reduce their expense budgets by the 10 percent," said Sheets, who emphasized items such as contracts, salaries, or capital expenditures were not included in the general expense budgets. "The basic reason is that health insurance for employees is growing much faster than anticipated and we have to make room for the increase."

"The budget is going to be very tight," the mayor warned, "much tighter than last year."

The annual amount currently budgeted to cover health insurance costs is $18 million, Sheets explained, but costs are exceeding projections by roughly $150,000 to $200,000 a month.

Sheets said he sent letters in early March to all department heads, with the lone exception being the School Department, requiring them to make the necessary cuts. "If they don't make (the cuts), then I will," Sheets said.

City Auditor Michael McFarland was quick to point out that the reductions were "absolutely not" across-the-board budget cuts, but affected only such costs as supplies or maintenance. The fixed costs of a department's budget, such as salaries, are untouched by the move, McFarland said.

Giving what he called a "very rough" estimate, McFarland predicted the expense line reductions would save the city between $750,000 to $1 million.

McFarland also attributed snow and ice removal costs which the auditor said were in excess of $1 million dollars with bills from the most recent storm still outstanding — for the mayor's decision to tighten the budget.

Sheets, however, was clear that ballooning health care costs were the driving force behind the decision.

"There's been an increase in the cost of health care and in expenses involved with a better type of health care, with more testing and different kinds of treatments," Sheets said.

Department heads are expected to submit their proposed budgets to the mayor's office within two weeks, providing time for the mayor to submit his budget plan to the City Council around the first week of May.

Last June city councilors unanimously approved a budget for Fiscal Year 2001 at $183,381,916, an $11 million increase from the previous year.

Favorable Response For Village At Quarry Hills

The Finger Companies' proposal to construct The Village at Quarry Hills, a 324-unit apartment complex on 28 acres of land off Ricciotti Drive in West Quincy, met with a generally favorable response at a public hearing Monday night.

Councillors, however, said more time needed to be devoted to the issue and continued the hearing until Monday, April 9 at 7 p.m.

Throughout the meeting, which was before the City Council acting as special permit granting authority, residents praised the developer for attentiveness to community needs — including abandoning vehicular access rights to Malvesti Way, addressing drainage concerns and improving drainage capacity in the neighborhood.

trimming down the number of apartments from the original figure of 380, and increasing the setback for buildings to a minimum of 75 feet.

Connell St.'s Barbara Donlin, chairman of the Quarry Hills Advisory Board, reported that board members approved the project — provided access,

Twin Rivers Gives $33,034 For QFD Washers, Dryers

Twin Rivers Technologies of Quincy Point has donated $33,034 for the purchase of washer and dryer units for every fire station in the city.

The washer and dryer units, part of a previous agreement with the city, allow firefighters to more easily wash their gear, which has the potential for picking up flammable chemicals, such as the ones used at Twin Rivers, a producer and distributor of fatty acids located in the former Proctor & Gamble plant. "Please accept our donation as a reinforcement of our commitment to make Twin Rivers safe for everyone," said Paul Angelico, vice-president of Twin Rivers.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman thanked Twin Rivers for their "above and beyond" efforts to increase plant safety, which have also included firefighter training for the unique challenges posed by the industrial plant.

Capt. Jeff Starr, vice-president of the Local 792 Firefighters Union, was also in attendance to thank Twin Rivers for the donation.

Installation of the washer and dryer units, Chief Gorman said, should be completed by May 1.

Safety conditions at the Twin Rivers plant came under the scrutiny of the city council after several incidents had occurred at the plant, the most serious of which was a flash fire which claimed the life of employee Joseph Conti.

Suicide Topic Of Anti-Crime Council

Usually, spending two hours talking about suicide is a bad sign -- but not in this case.

"It is so important that groups like this get together on this subject," Kim Kates from the Samaritans told the March meeting of District Attorney William Keating's Norfolk Anti-Crime Council.

Keating invited Kates, Dr. Barbara Green -- who founded South Shore Hospital's Partnership for School Health -- and Ellen Connerton from the Department of Public Health to the quarterly meeting of the council to talk about the problem of suicide and interdisciplinary solutions.

The message they delivered was startling, even to the experienced law enforcement, social service, and education officials who constitute the council: more Bay State residents commit suicide each year than die in automobiles; each year, some 24,000 high school students in the state attempt suicide.

WILLIAM KEATING

In the 27 months since he became district attorney, Keating said, his office has responded to at least 79 suicides in Norfolk County. And there are, statistically, 25 suicide attempts for each completion.

The council combines a score of leaders from an array of disciplines -- from Quincy Interfaith Association President Rev. Sheldon Bennett and Quincy Medical Center Emergency Room Chief Octavio Diaz, MD, to Weymouth School Superintendent Robert West and Wellesley Deputy Police Chief William Brooks -- to look at crime and social problems from as many angles as possible.

Dr. Green, whose partnership has reached into three dozen schools from Quincy to Braintree to Canton, Holbrook, Milton, Avon, Randolph, and Stoughton, described how her organization's program works to reach teens -- a group that is both vulnerable and accessible. In addition to training educators on warning signs, and what to do when they spot them, the partnership also reaches teens through other teens.

"It has been a wonderfully successful program because it is in their own voices," Dr. Green said.

Keating said he plans to work with Dr. Green to bring the program to more Norfolk County schools.

"Those of us charged with public health and public safety have to do more," Keating said. "And we have to do it together."

Quincy Delegation Testifies For Cemetery Bill

Senator Michael Morrissey and Representative Bruce Ayers recently testified before the State Legislature's Joint Committee on State Administration on behalf of a senate bill that would provide Quincy additional cemetery space through a transfer of land between the city and the Metropolitan District Commission.

Senate Bill 1583 would transfer the remaining undeveloped acreage at Quincy's Pine Hill Cemetery in exchange for MDC-owned land off Ricciuti Drive in West Quincy. The bill would include an equal land swap of approximately 35 acres. The bill was filed by Morrissey, Ayers and Representative Ron Mariano.

The city originally purchased the land for the Pine Hill Cemetery from the MDC in 1962. The land was developed as finances allowed through the years. The city's most recent efforts to develop additional graves within the cemetery were halted by the state because the cemetery was within the migratory habitat of the endangered copperhead and timber rattlesnakes. More than 38 acres of land within the cemetery remain undeveloped due to the protections given the endangered snakes.

The Cemetery Board of Managers recently voted to suspend all "pre-need" sales of lots due to the dwindling availability of grave space. Less than 150 lots remain available for new burials.

"The city of Quincy is on the verge of losing a valuable service to its people," said Thomas P. Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, who joined Morrissey and Ayers in testifying.

"This is not a case of poor planning on the city's behalf. We purchased the land for use as a cemetery and due to changing environmental laws, we can no longer develop it for that purpose. This bill would rectify this situation and allow Quincy residents to be interred near their loved ones. We deeply appreciate the support of our state delegation."

STATE STREET EMPLOYEES demonstrated their commitment to fighting hunger recently by delivering over 5,000 pounds of food to the Quincy Crisis Center, which serves over 11,000 meals a year and is the only food pantry on the South Shore which delivers free groceries directly to the homes of the hungry. From left are State Street volunteers Patrick Daley, Christopher Meyers, Anne Ricco, and Jennifer Waldner. State Street's 2001 Food Drive, which is part of its Global Outreach Volunteer Program, also contributed to several other food pantries throughout Boston and the South Shore.

Raymondi Resolve Seeks Update On Cemetery Space

A successful resolve submitted at Monday night's City Council meeting by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi requests that Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments, update the council on the status of cemetery space at Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy.

Raymondi, who said many residents were concerned that they would be unable to be buried in Quincy, said he was most interested in the present situation and a possible master plan for the future.

The State Legislature's Joint Committee on State Administration held a public hearing on the matter Monday at the State House, specifically discussing a bill (No. 1583) filed by State Sen. Michael Morrissey which calls for a land transfer between the Metropolitan District Commission and the city to create the needed public cemetery space.

The city would exchange land adjacent to the Pine Hill Cemetery for abandoned MDC land off Ricciuti Drive.

City efforts to expand grave space within the cemetery were halted by the state to protect the migratory habitat of rattlesnakes.

The number of available gravesites at the cemetery is approximately 250 and lots are available only on an "immediate need" basis.

No date was set for Koch's update to the council.

Council Backs McCauley Against Flag Burning

The City Council went on record Monday night in support of a proposed amendment to the United States Constitution which would prohibit the burning and/or desecration of the American flag.

The council voted unanimously on the position, which came in the form of a resolve submitted by Councilor Frank McCauley, chairman of the council's Veterans' Services Committee.

The resolve, McCauley said, would lend council support to both local and national veterans groups in favor of the amendment, which he added is traditionally passed by the House of Representatives but rejected by the Senate.

Quincy veterans groups have come out very strongly in favor of the amendment, which is scheduled to be taken up once again by the next session of Congress, McCauley said.

The council passed a similar resolve of support in 1995.

Copies of the resolve will be sent to Senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry and Congressman William Delahunt.

Buying A Parking Space

There shouldn't be any fighting over parking spaces at the condo units on Marine Drive in Marina Bay. The parking spaces there apparently just aren't reserved. They're owned.

TV newsmen Chet Curtis, who has been living there for a while, apparently intends to stay.

He has bought his parking space, a piece of real estate separate from the condo unit.

And it is now part of the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds real estate records in Dedham.

In fact, Paul Harold the new Registrar, was the one who signed the deed officially making the parking space the property of Curtis.

Harold didn't say what the value was.

But it must be pretty valuable to Curtis coming home from work at night knowing his parking space is there waiting for him.

PATRICIA "PAT" THORLEY, director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center, will be in the spotlight on WBZ-TV today (Thursday) and Friday.

She was selected as the station's Hometown Hero and segments of her interview with Roger Lyons will be shown today at 6 a.m. and noon and Friday at 6 a.m. and 5 p.m.

A former volunteer for two years, Pat has been director of the Atlantic Neighborhood Center since 1993 and has done an outstanding job.

"I just want to thank everybody," she says. "I really don't feel like a hero. There's a lot of people who do what I do and they're heroes, too."

LINDATRACY SAYS "It's time to put a woman on the City Council."

And she wants to be that woman.

Tracy, who ran for the Ward 3 seat against Patrick McDermott in 1997, has been living in Hyannisport and working as a counselor at the Gosnold Treatment Center in Falmouth, but says she's coming back to run for councilor at-large.

"I'm looking for a place in Quincy," she says.

Is she serious?

"Of course I'm serious! I got 40 percent of the vote in that 1997 election and didn't knock on any doors. This time I will. All my friends are in Quincy."

Referring to a recent item here that only three women have been elected to the council in the city's history -- Edna Austin, Joanne Condon and Pat Toland -- she says:

"I want to make it four."

READERS FORUM

Wants Record Straight On New QHS

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I would like to set the record straight with regard to capacity, reimbursement, accessibility, and renovations of Quincy High School. It is hard to believe that the school department wants to dismantle our present historic high school to build one with less than half the current capacity, but it is true.

While the proposed high school will only have capacity for 1,400 students, according to the Quincy Public Schools Facilities Report the present comprehensive Quincy High School joined with the CTE (Center for Technical Education) has capacity for 3,100 students in 134 classrooms which equals 23 students per classroom. The current Quincy High School is so large it has capacity for every high school student in the entire city!

Many people believe that the state reimbursement to build and renovate the schools will cover 90 percent of the entire school building project. This is not true. Pursuant to school building assistance construction regulations 603 CMR 38.00 state reimbursement will finance 90 percent of a calculation based upon projected student enrollment. The state will reimburse not more than $39 million to build or renovate QHS for 1400 high school students. The state will consider reimbursement of not more than $13 million to renovate QHS or Central for 700 middle school students. The Department of Education's preference is to reuse and renovate existing buildings and Quincy's plan has not been approved. However, the remodeling plan to convert Quincy High School for Central includes demolition of the entire vocational school, the gymnasium, and newer parts of the high school building to create open space for the middle school.

The often repeated statement, "just to make the CTE ADA compliant would cost more than to build a new high school" is false. The cost to make the CTE American Disability Act compliant is documented as less than $1 million in the 1997 CTE Survey. To build a new high school will cost over $60 million. It is unfair to blame accessibility for the disabled as the reason to demolish this large, functional, and fairly new vocational school.

The proposed vocational program will only have capacity for 400. There have been waiting lists in plumbing, automotive, and many other vocational programs for years and there are 565 students currently enrolled in the vocational program. Every ninth grade student also studies an elective in the vocational program. Why should taxpayer dollars be spent to build a school with much smaller capacity and workshops?

Many options are available to the high school students making double sessions unnecessary. Unlike North Quincy High, which did not have extra classroom space and needed to schedule double sessions during renovations, Quincy High School has the capacity for 3,100 students with only 1,239 students currently attending. Classroom space is also available in middle schools that the ninth grade students could attend and many school districts use reimbursable modular classrooms during renovations. If more classroom space is needed, Quincy College, which rents Coddington Hall from the City of Quincy taxpayers, could find another building to rent. This would make Coddington Hall available to our public school students. To protect Quincy College from displacement, perhaps the renovations to the high school could be done during nights and vacations over a period of a few summers as is done in many schools.

The site commission should decide what is best educationally for the students and financially for the school department and taxpayers. To renovate the very large will built historic school in Quincy Square, on a 23-acre lot of land, surrounded by educational institutions, would be the most logical outcome if the decision were based upon education, cost, and logic. Although the commission has been asked to decide which park or contaminated site to build a new smaller high school, and has been instructed not to consider renovation of the existing building, the commission must not change or deny the facts to try to sway public opinion.

Merrymount Third Graders Win Dr. Seuss Birthday Party

MERRYMOUNT ELEMENTARY SCHOOL third graders recently won a Dr. Seuss Birthday Party from BJ's Wholesale Club in Weymouth in celebration of National Read Across America Day. The third graders were challenged by BJ's Wholesale Club, which has "adopted" the school for the year, and responded with 100 percent participation in a summer reading program. Here BJ's representative Teri-Vogt, who also brought a birthday cake for the children, reads to the attentive youngsters.

PAUL PHILLIPS, president of the Quincy Education Association, came ready with a "Cat In The Hat" hat and tie as he visited the Kindergarten through Grade 3 classes of the Merrymount School, reading several Dr. Seuss selections in honor of Read Across America Day, which was established by the National Education Association four years ago. The event, which is held every year on Dr. Seuss' birthday and calls for every child in every school in the country to read with a caring adult, drew roughly 20 million American participants last year. Dr. Seuss would have been 97 years old March 2.

Annual Quincy Partnership St. Patrick's Day Luncheon

THE FIFTH ANNUAL St. Patrick's Day Luncheon sponsored by the Quincy Partnership took place Friday at the Quincy Lodge of Elks on Quarry St. The luncheon, which raises funds for Quincy Partnership projects, is traditionally a "gloves-off" send-up of the city and its politics and this year proved no exception. Getting into the spirit of the occasion were, from left: Joan Keohane, wife of Edward Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and chairman of the Quincy Partnership; Robert Curry, owner of Curry/Ace Hardware and Quincy Partnership member; Isobel Bertman, wife of Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry and Quincy Partnership member; and Curry's wife Cheryl.

(Quincy Sun photos)

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS addresses St. Patrick's Day Luncheon guests Friday. Sheets praised Quincy Partnership members for their initiative and spirit and the many civic improvements they've undertaken over the past decade.

CITY COUNCIL PRESIDENT Paul Harold attended the fifth annual St. Patrick's Day Luncheon and sang "Over at the Shipyard," a satiric look at Sotirios Emmanouil and the troubles of the Fore River Shipyard, sung to the tune of "Toora Loora Loora."

THE QUINCY TANKARD, or at least a reasonable facsimile, was put to good use by City Clerk Joseph Shea at Friday's St. Patrick's Day Luncheon sponsored by the Quincy Partnership. In background is Daniel Flynn of Daniel J. Flynn Real Estate.

SHANNON O'BRIEN, state treasurer and would-be gubernatorial candidate, announced that she is running — and eating better, and losing weight — at the St. Patrick's Day Luncheon held Friday.

EDWARD KEOHANE, chairman of the Quincy Partnership, used the occasion of the luncheon to announce the next Quincy Partnership project: a statue of John Adams to be placed in front of City Hall. The partnership has commissioned Lloyd Lillie, who created the existing statues of Abigail and John Quincy Adams, for the new project.

SHEA-ZAK NEEDS QUIET: City Clerk Joseph Shea during his "Amazing Shea-Zak" routine, a local version of Johnny Carson's "Carnak The Magnificent."

ST. V NOT SPARED: Daniel Flynn, president of Daniel J. Flynn Real Estate and co-host of the St. Patrick's Day Luncheon with City Clerk Joseph Shea, used a recent Sun article to create a Top 10 List of mistaken coyote sightings in Squantum. Contrary to Flynn's assertions, the article contained several verbs.

Caddy Park Artifacts Topic For Historical Society

Native American artifacts discovered two years ago during construction of a playground in Caddy Park will be the focus of a meeting of the Quincy Historical Society Thursday, March 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the Adams Academy building.

Tom Mahlstedt, archeologist for the MDG who directed the excavation of the artifacts, will be the guest speaker, discussing the age and range of the material, unprecedented in New England.

It has been suggested that the artifacts reveal exciting new possibilities about the early natives of Quincy, particularly about their reliance on and ability to exploit the resources of the waters of Massachusetts Bay.

Mahlstedt, now the archeologist for the Department of Environmental Management, will present details of the discovery and excavation, describe the objects found and discuss what they indicate about the way of life of the people who made them.

There is no charge for admission.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Lenten Scallop, Veggie Casserole

Today's scallop, vegetable casserole is great for a Friday during Lent, and can be made ahead of time.

When cooked, it almost looks like a soufflé, and with a salad on the side, it's golden.

Scallop, vegetable casserole
8 slices bread (day old is fine)
1/2 to 3/4 pound scallops (cut in halves)
2 cups chopped cooked favorite veggie, or a mixture
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese
5-6 eggs

1 can low-fat mushroom soup
1/2 cup milk
salt and pepper to taste

First sauté the scallops in a little olive oil and butter mixture until light brown. Don't overcook. Set aside.

Lightly grease a medium sized casserole dish. Cut the bread in 1/2 inch pieces and evenly spread half of them in the dish.

Place the scallops, vegetables and shredded cheese over the bread.

In a bowl, beat the eggs, soup, milk and seasonings. Pour this over the bread-scallop, vegetable mixture. Cover and refrigerate for a couple of hours or overnight if you have the time.

Bake in a 350 degree oven until knife inserted comes out clean and top is golden brown. (takes about an hour.)

Serve hot.

John Adams Statue Planned For City Hall

The Quincy Partnership plans to place a statue of President John Adams in front of City Hall and hopes the project will be completed by the end of this year.

Edward Keohane, owner of Keohane Funeral Home and chairman of the privately run Quincy Partnership, made the announcement Friday at the fifth annual St. Patrick's Day Luncheon, which is sponsored by the Quincy Partnership.

Sculptor Lloyd Lillie, the artist who recently created the statues of Abigail Adams and John Quincy Adams, has been commissioned for the project, Keohane said.

The statues of Abigail and John Quincy Adams, which stand across from City Hall next to the Church of the Presidents, were also funded by the Quincy Partnership, which began in 1989 with the purpose of funding civic-minded projects outside the sphere of traditional government financing.

Other Quincy Partnership projects include "Welcome to Quincy" signs and up-lighting for the city's historical buildings.

Their most recent project, a decorative fountain to be placed in Merrymount Park, is scheduled to be installed this summer.

One of the reasons to erect the statue as quickly as possible, Keohane said, was to take advantage of the publicity expected to be generated by the upcoming release of historian David McCullough's book on John Adams and Thomas Jefferson.

QCAP Downpayment Assist Program

In response to the tremendous amount of inquiries the Quincy Community Action Program (QCAP) has received recently on the assist program, the following are the answers to the most frequently asked questions.

Q: What is the QCAP downpayment assist program?

A: Funded through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the QCAP downpayment assist program is designed to provide funds to eligible homebuyers who cannot come up with the downpayment and/or closing costs required by the lender. The program will contribute 5 percent or up to $10,000 to eligible homebuyers QCAP has been running this program for the last two years.

Q: How do I find out if I am eligible?

A: There is an income and purchase price limit based on federal data for the region as well as the communities that signed on with the program. For the most updated figures and other program guidelines, contact Nelson Wong, housing coordinator at QCAP, at (617) 479-8181, ext. 115.

Q: If I am already working with a local bank or mortgage company, am I still eligible?

A: The QCAP downpayment assist program can work with most mortgage loan programs. Therefore any banks or mortgage companies can participate.

Q: I am interested in the program, how do I start?

A: HUD requires all program participants to complete a first time homebuyer workshop administered by a HUD approved housing counseling agency. For a list of agencies in your area, call HUD's Housing Counseling and Referral line at 1-800-569-4287 or visit HUD's Web site at www.hud.gov.

QCAP sponsors a HUD, MHA and CHAPA approved workshop each month. Anyone, regardless of eligibility for the assist program, is welcome to attend. Its next workshop will be held March 24 and 31 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the QCAP Office, 1509 Hancock St.

Registration fee is $30 per household. To register or to obtain a schedule for other workshops, call Nelson Wong at 479-8181, ext. 115.

The event will be from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Cohasset sales center, 861 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Registration is not required, but an RSVP will guarantee a seat. Light refreshments will be served. For more information call (781) 383-1800.

The name change reflects the purchase of the Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate franchise name by GMAC Home Services in 1999.

In addition, the company has re-located to 680 Hancock St., two doors down from its previous location, to take advantage of the larger office space.

"We now have a new company name, but continue to be a locally owned real estate company," said Barry Rabinovitz, president of Classic Homes/GMAC Real Estate. ZOLTAN AND CAROL HERBAI with Sun publisher Henry Bosworth, City Councilor and former Mayor Frank McCauley, Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Paul Harold and Sun editor Robert Bosworth. Zoltan, known as Herb, is a retired World War II Navy chief parachute rigger. (Quincy Sun Photos)

The tributes came from Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Paul Harold, Senator Michael Morrissey, Representative Bruce Ayers and Stephen Tobin, Quincy Mayor. Carol Herbai is a volunteer with the Quincy Medical Center, the American Red Cross and other worthy causes for more than a half century.

Bosworth presented Mr. Herbai as a volunteer who "has touched the lives of hundreds and hundreds of people."

Carol Herbai, for Outstanding Community Service. By virtue of her selfless help and inspiring others through her dedication as a volunteer with the Quincy Medical Center, the American Red Cross and other worthy causes for more than a half century.

Bosworth noted that the clock "symbolizes all the time you have given to others and to your community and are still giving."

Sun Editor Robert Bosworth presented her with a special framed Page One of The Sun telling of her selection for the award, listing the other 37 nominees and the names of the judging panel. Extracopies were distributed to those attending.

Mrs. Herbai, a mother of three and grandmother of six, lives on Littlefield Street, Houghs Neck, with her husband, Zoltan. She has an impressive record as a volunteer: 32 years at Quincy Medical Center where she is president of the QMC Auxiliary, 50 years with the Red Cross including service at a leper colony off Trinidad with the British Red Cross and 53 years at Beth Israel Hospital.

"You are truly a legend among us," Mayor James Sheets said Sunday. "You volunteers at the Red Cross and at the hospital are well known by all and I particularly appreciate your spirit, your dedication and your commitment."

JACKIE GARDNER, director of the American Red Cross South Area, praised Carol Herbai as a volunteer who "has touched the lives of hundreds and hundreds of people."

He praised her for her efforts in "the battle to save acute health care for the city of Quincy."

"We want to thank you for your efforts toward that cause and we want to thank you for exemplifying the efforts of all those who worked so hard."

"I think if you yourself stop and think back over the hundreds and hundreds of people that you have helped individually, that you have changed their lives, that you have made their day better because of your love, your compassion and your dedication."

"When we look at the city of Quincy and why we're so different, we have to look at the people like you who day after day, week after week, month after month and year after year, who do the job that has to be done, never asking for thanks, never asking for recognition, and we're just happy today that you've been chosen (for the award) so that we can give you the credit that you really deserve."

Sheets also thanked The Sun "for an extremely good choice and also for 16 years identifying those people in this city who have done such a dynamic and often times such a quiet and unassuming role in changing people's ways of life in making this a better city in which to live and to raise a family."

Schuster praised Mrs. Herbai as "a truly remarkable individual" and as the leader of the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary which was instrumental in preserving the hospital.

"Carol has provided leadership, commitment, energy and an enthusiasm that really makes the auxiliary just not survive but thrive," she said.

"Her enthusiasm in particular is contagious. She has a way of lighting up the room as she enters it and she motivates all of those who come in contact with her. She has an absolute wonderful way with people."

"Carol's work contributed greatly to the ongoing success of the Quincy Medical Center. She really makes a difference at the hospital."

Gardner described Mrs. Herbai as "a compassionate, caring person who volunteers and has been volunteering for a great many years."

"She has helped all of us in our community with all the work she has done."

"She's done a wonderful job. Carol has touched the lives of hundreds and hundreds of people. She has recruited, supported and recognized hundreds and hundreds of people who volunteer to the organization."

"She's been a great inspiration to me (since) I met her 16 years ago as a new director of volunteers. She took me under her wing and she taught me the value of volunteerism. I learned from Carol what volunteers are. And who is the greatest volunteer of all? A volunteer, a person like Carol who volunteers and yes, gives back to other volunteers to make them stronger in the work they do."

Harold presented a City Council Commendation on behalf of the entire council which said in part:

"You have long been a credit to the city of Quincy.

You have put 'caring' into action and have greatly improved the quality of life for your fellow man. You are one of Quincy's most respected citizens."

Morrissey presented a Senate Citation to Mrs. Herbai and noted that it is volunteers like her who helped save Quincy Hospital and re-establish itself as Quincy Medical Center.

"It is very important to have volunteers like Carol Herbai...who spends the time and the effort and the commitment and is so sincere about it."

Tobin and Ayers presented a House Citation.

Said Tobin: "Every year when you go down the list of those nominated for consideration (for the award), when you realize the caliber and the quality of those people who are under consideration, it's a real distinction to receive this award."

"That list is now so ever more prestigious because you, Carol, are now on there. I want to thank you and I want to congratulate you."

Ayers noted: "One of the reasons Quincy is such a great place to live is, as the mayor pointed out earlier, the people who live here and people like Carol who are the heart of this great city."

Heather Hedlund presented a Senate Citation in behalf of her brother, Senator Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, "in recognition of Carol's contributions to the community."

"You've been a dedicated volunteer in behalf of so many worthy causes," she added.

Carol Herbai had thanks for The Sun, Don Uvanitte for nominating her for the award and the judges for selecting her.

"It's such a surprise. I had no idea."

She also thanked representatives of the Quincy Medical Center and Red Cross for attending.

And had special praise for the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary.

"They are always there...it's a wonderful group. We have so many wonderful people who help us."

"I want to thank everybody. I'm just so amazed at the people who came. It's been a marvelous day. I thank all of you."

MEMBERS OF THE judging panel who selected Carol Herbai for The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award from among 38 nominees join her at Sunday's reception. Seated with her are Rhonda Merrill, city director of Tourism and Events, and Michelle Lydon, chairwoman of the Sailors Home Cemetery Restoration Committee. Standing are Ron Adams, immediate past recipient of the award; Rev. John Swanson, pastor Union Congregational Church; Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, and John DeCarli, vice president of Quincy Sons of Italy. Tiffanie Williams, president Tiffanie Williams public relations and consulting firm and a judge also attended but was not present for the photo.

SEVERAL OF THE past recipients of The Quincy Sun Award were on hand to help honor current recipient Carol Herbai, seated here with Ruth Wainwright, 1986 recipient. Standing are Anthony Siciliano, first recipient in 1985; Olin Taylor, 1996; Joseph McConville, 1995; Ronald Adams, 1999; and Thomas Koch, whose father the late Richard J. Koch, Sr. received the award posthumously in 1987. Two past recipients, Clara Yeomans, 1989, and Mary Vallier, 1993, are hospital patients and were unable to attend but sent their congratulations to Mrs. Herbai.

SPRING CAR CARE

Gas Prices Locally Fall Two Cents

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts fell two cents recently and are now at the lowest point since early last May, according to AAA Southern New England.

AAA's March 12 survey of prices in Massachusetts found self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $1.47 per gallon, down two cents from the previous week and seven cents since the start of 2001. The $1.47 per gallon marks the first time prices locally have been this low since last May 1, when it was also $1.47.

Current prices and their ranges are as follows:

• Regular Unleaded: $1.47 ($1.41-$1.59), self-serve; $1.61 ($1.43-$1.89), full serve.

• Mid-grade Unleaded: $1.57 ($1.39-$1.69), self-serve; $1.70 ($1.55-$1.95), full serve.

• Premium Unleaded: $1.66 ($1.45-$1.78), self-serve; $1.80 ($1.65-$1.98), full serve.

• Diesel: $1.65 ($1.49-$1.89), self-serve; $1.76

($1.59-$1.89), full serve.

AAA urges motorists to shop around for the best prices in their area. With snow starting to melt, it's also important for motorists to keep their windshield washer fluid levels high and to have their wiper blades checked for wear and tear caused by winter.

42-Volt Technology: Key To Cars Of The Future

(NAPS)—Imagine walking up to your car, having the door unlock and swing open all by itself. You get in and the door closes automatically as your favorite music begins to play. The cabin temperature adjusts to your personal preference, while sensors determine if the windshield and mirrors need to be heated. Need to make minor adjustments? Just say the word.

While this may sound like science fiction, it's actually the coming evolution of automotive technology, according to the Society of Automotive Engineers' (SAE) report, 42-Volt Systems: Technology Implications for the Automotive Industry.

Since the 1950s, vehicles have operated on 12-volt systems. Advancements in passenger comfort, interior electronics, fuel economy and emissions, however, demand additional power — and an upgrade to 42 volts is seen as the best way to run these systems.

"The increase in available power will allow engineers to develop new systems to change the vehicles of the future," according to the SAE report. "Future needs in the areas of safety, passenger comfort, emissions control and fuel economy are expected to require more electronics."

DaimlerChrysler Advanced Technology Specialist Fred Miesterfeld says the greatest achievements will be in fuel economy and passenger comfort.

"Converting to a 42-volt system would improve engine efficiency," he says. "It would also allow for more speaker power, supply more heat to window heaters and seats and provide more efficient steering control."

According to the report, consumers can also expect to see electronic steering, brakes, water pumps and air conditioning systems, all due to 42-volt technology. However, the immediate cost of converting vehicles to 42-volt systems is sizable.

"It will require new facilities, components and manufacturing processes throughout the entire supply chain," says Miesterfeld. In fact, electronics are expected to account for 35 to 40 percent of the cost of high-end vehicles during the next 10 years.

While full implementation across all car lines may take up to two decades, consumers can expect the first "all-42-volt" cars to be in the high-end luxury segment within the next seven to 10 years.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

The Ease and Importance Of A Winning Smile

By DR. DANIEL SWEENEY, DDS

Until quite recently the art of cosmetic dentistry was a luxury associated with the very rich, or with the Hollywood set. Certainly, Elizabeth Taylor and Robert Redford, or for the younger set Julia Roberts and Brad Pitt, invested a considerable sum of money in redesigning their teeth, so that their fans would be dazzled by their pearly whites. Times have changed. There is a new democracy of dental services now available to the general public, courtesy of innovative space-age technology, and the very considerable skills of the modern dentist. What we have today are a wide range of cosmetic dental services at a comparatively affordable price.

Interestingly, the public's perception of the costs of Cosmetic dentistry is still stuck in the past. This article should shed a little light on the ease and importance of gaining a winning smile, whether it's for personal self-confidence in social situation, or to present a better business image. If you are in sales and your teeth are badly stained or crooked, you are not going to leave a great first impression. The mouth is the most representative area of the human body. A great set of "pearlies" tells people a lot about your personality, your character, and even your health habits. If you have been basking on a beach in some foreign sunny resort for the past couple of years, or dining out every week in a nice restaurant, and still haven't had the cosmetic dentistry you know would improve your smile, then perhaps you should re-examine your budget more closely.

How To Have Whiter Teeth

Cleaning and Polishing:

Besides being healthy for the gums and teeth, it is desirable to have clean white teeth. Quite often, cigarette smokers complain about stained teeth and wonder how the problem can be solved when all that is needed is a good cleaning and polishing. The cleaning removes the calcified food and debris which can cause gum disease, while the polishing of the teeth removes the food and smoke stains, and leaves them smooth, clean and white as possible.

Whitening:

This is a simple technique, which whitens teeth by removing yellowish and brownish stains, which are resistant to being removed by cleaning and polishing. In most cases where the person is a heavy smoker and coffee and tea drinker, the procedure is done at home using a kit provided to you by your dentist. Whitening is the least invasive dental procedure that gives you a most dramatic result. This procedure is also very cost effective.

White Fillings:

Many patients are unhappy with dark silver fillings, which they consider unsightly especially if there are many of them. Often, these fillings can be simply replaced with white fillings made from a very durable resin.

Bonding:

If you are dissatisfied with the color or shape of your teeth then bonding can be done to alter their appearance. It is a less expensive alternative to capping and there is less time involved. The disadvantage is that it may have to be repeated after several years as the material wears.

DENTIST

Porcelain Veneers:

As with bonding, one can alter the color and shape of your teeth, but the final material used is porcelain, which is stronger and more esthetically pleasing.

Porcelain Crowns (Caps):

This is the most widely used technique. It is a permanent technique, which offers the greatest flexibility to modify the shape and color of your teeth. These crowns are used to hold together teeth that have had big old silver fillings resulting in a cosmetic result that looks like real white teeth. Crowns are also used to restore teeth that have been chipped or broken; the result is teeth that look great!

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

ARM & SHOULDER PAIN

Arm and shoulder pain can have a number of causes, but the large percentage of cases are caused by misalignment of one or more spinal bones (vertebrae), improper posture, spinal curvatures, occupational stresses, or injury to the spine. Any of these conditions may cause irritation or impingement of the nerves supplying the arms, shoulder and neck. Arm and shoulder pain does not always mean trouble where the pain is felt.

The degree of pain may vary between slight and intermittent, to excruciating. But do not be fooled by the degree of pain; sometimes a slight pain goes along with a serious condition while intense pain may be a symptom of nothing more than temporary muscle soreness caused by a weekend of unusual activity.

It should be apparent to anyone that arm and shoulder pain may indicate a serious condition. But whether the problem is serious or not, the pain can become quite debilitating. Fortunately, the doctor of chiropractic is eminently qualified to correct arm and shoulder problems. The chiropractors education and experience have been directed to such problems that involve the spine, nerves, muscles and joints of the human body.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Desmond Bellot's Dolo Creations Reflects City's Multi-Cultural Diversity Everyone Is Welcome At Former North Quincy Standout's Barber Shop

By CHRIS POISSON

Desmond Bellot has one simple rule that customers must follow when they step foot into Dolo Creations: "If you come in, you have to come back."

Located at 831 Hancock St., Bellot's new barber shop radiates an inviting, relaxing atmosphere that you immediately sense when you walk through the door. The amalgamative scent of flowers and candles permeates through the spacious, seven-chair shop, while the picture windows at the front brighten the room for a warm, cozy feeling.

"I want a place where everybody feels welcomed and I have that on my sign," says Bellot, who opened the shop two weeks ago yesterday (Wednesday). "I have the flowers, candles; I want people to come in and feel relaxed. The music is going to be R&B and jazz, a relaxed atmosphere. No Eminem."

Bellot says his barber shop differs from others. He has found a niche: a multi-cultural barber shop where "everybody is welcome."

"There's not one multi-cultural shop that caters to everybody," he says. "So what I'm trying to do is have a shop that caters to blacks, whites, Asians, whatever. It's just so everybody can feel welcomed, rather than go to a shop that is all white or a shop that is all black. Quincy's a diverse place. I just want a diverse shop, which is a shop that reflects me and how I grew up."

A touch of himself is revealed on the walls. Hanging are framed inspirational and athletic posters. There's a picture of himself when he starred for the Northeastern University football team as a wide receiver, and a Nike poster of Michael Jordan with a message about failure and success, which perhaps best sums up Bellot's life the past five years.

A three-sport standout at North Quincy High School (class of '92), Bellot received a full-ride to Northeastern on a football scholarship. He left Huntington Avenue in 1996 after his junior year to sign with the Detroit Lions of the National Football League. His career was cut short, however, when he pulled both of his hamstrings and was released before the start of the season. He never attempted to come back.

"It didn't work out," Bellot says. "It's my fault that it didn't work out because I didn't go back to try out again. I felt like I failed at something. When you fail at something, and your ambitious, you look at yourself and say, 'Well, am I really that type of person to sit back and fail at things.'"

"It really puts it in perspective and tests your heart. Is this the type of person I am or am I the type of person that will overcome obstacles. I wanted to be the person that overcomes obstacles. I'm 27 years old, and I just wanted to make a change, not only in myself but with the people around me."

Bellot went back to school and graduated in 1997 with a bachelor's degree in communications. He got a job at State Street in Quincy as a portfolio accountant, but after four months he realized that job wasn't for him.

"I hated it," Bellot says. "I used to cut my own hair, not like this [shaved] but faded, at Northeastern. So I said let me do my research in the industry and see how much they make. I found out that it is profitable. I did my research in Quincy to find out if there were any African-American or minority or multi-cultural shops in Quincy. There's none."

After seven months at barber school, Bellot received his Massachusetts Barber License and has been cutting professionally for the past three years. The fact that Dolo Creations is across the street from Veterans Memorial Stadium, where he played high school football, is ironic, but Bellot said it's a blessing. Initially looking at Quincy Center, the current location was his last option.

"I think I was blessed with this place," he says. "This was my last option. The nail shop was still here when I came by. I wanted the place two doors down, but they said they were taking it. So I said I'll take this one."

As for the name Dolo Creations, Bellot explains: "I picked Dolo because to me Dolo is an individual who stands alone and is basically ambitious. He sets goals for himself and tries to accomplish those goals."

And Bellot has set plenty of goals for Dolo Creations besides just cutting hair. At Northeastern, Bellot volunteered his time helping the inner-city youth and participating in youth basketball camps, and now he wants to extend his community service to Quincy.

"I want to bring something different to Quincy where everybody just comes together," Bellot says. "I want to do the multi-cultural thing because I want to try to make a change in Quincy. You can't change everybody. I'm not trying to change everybody. But the kids..."

Bellot is looking to open up a basketball camp for kids' next year at the nearby courts, and he's going to create a grade-point system at his barber shop in exchange for free haircuts.

"If they come in here with a C and then bring their grade one letter up, they'll get free haircuts and stuff like that," he says. "As a barber, it's not just about taking money; it's about building relationships with everybody. Kids look up to you. They'll sit down and talk to you about their personal lives, and they trust you."

He also wants to assist local shelters. "What I want to start doing is going down to the shelters," he says. "I want Dolo Creations to raise the money ourselves, buy the food, cook it and share it. I want to reach out to people because I've been blessed with this place."

Bellot says business has been going well. His first client hailed from Scituate.

CLIPPING — Owner Desmond Bellot gives his former football coach at North Quincy High School, Ken McPhee, a haircut at his new barber shop, Dolo Creations, located at 831 Hancock St. A former three-sport star at NQHS, Bellot went on to play football at Northeastern University and was signed by the Detroit Lions before being released due to injuries. (Quincy Sun Photo) which is good news since he wants his barber shop to cater to the entire South Shore as well as Quincy.

"Quincy needs it and it's really what the South Shore needs," Bellot says. "I know you've never heard of it. It's something different, a multi-cultural shop. A barber shop where everyone feels welcomed."

Everyone is welcome, but, remember, there's one rule: if you come in, you have to come back. If Bellot has his way, though, you'll want to come back.

Your Social Security

Do You Owe Money To Uncle Sam?

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Do you have an outstanding loan from the government or are you a student loan? Or, did you get more money than you're entitled to from a federal agency?

If you answered yes to either question and you receive Social Security benefits, Uncle Sam has figured out how to get back some of the delinquent debt that is owed to him.

Starting this month, the Department of the Treasury will start to send letters to Social Security beneficiaries who owe money to the government. The letter will tell you the federal agency you are indebted to and when to contact that agency to answer questions you may have about the overdue debt.

Social Security can only answer general questions about Treasury's reduction of your benefit amount to collect a non-tax debt.

If you receive a letter warning you that the Treasury is going to deduct money from your Social Security benefit, you have two months to make arrangements to pay the debt. In May, the Treasury will begin to deduct a maximum of 15 percent from your monthly benefit payment until you pay all the money. This affects only those beneficiaries who receive $750 a month or more.

To arrange to pay the non-tax debt, contact the agency where you got the money.

If you don't arrange to repay the non-tax debt, the Treasury will begin to deduct money from your benefit. They will send you a letter each month that tells you the name of the collecting agency, the date and amount deducted.

In 1996, the Congress passed the Debt Collection Improvement Act to collect overdue debts to the government. The largest dollar amounts referred to the Treasury for collection are from the Department of Education (student loan debt) and the Department of Agriculture (loan debt and food stamp benefit overpayments).

There are a few non-tax debts that Treasury will not collect. They include debts owed to or collected by states and the District of Columbia and territories, including child support.

Red Cross Quincy Office Headquarters For Storm Relief

The Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay used its South Shore office at 1495 Hancock St. as Disaster Relief Operation headquarters while it assessed damage and provided relief for state residents affected by the early March nor'easter which blanketed the region.

"Quincy was a great location for us," said Red Cross spokeswoman Renita Hosler, who explained that Quincy's access to major highways allowed Red Cross response to Boston and all areas north, south, and west with a minimum of traffic concerns.

From the Thursday following the storm until emergency teams transitioned back to chapter status early last week, the Hancock St. site housed Red Cross officials and more than 50 volunteers who manned phones, studied maps, and provided resources for the operation.

Two-man teams specially trained in assessing household damage and providing immediate assistance fanned out across the state's most affected areas: Scituate, Hull, Revere, Cohasset, Winthrop, Marshfield, Plymouth, and Nahant.

During the storm, the Red Cross operated several shelters, providing refuge to more than 60 people in an area stretching from Newburyport to Cape Cod.

Although isolated problems were reported, mostly in the Houghs Neck section of the city, Quincy came through the storm relatively unaffected, said Kevin O'Connell, director of Emergency Services for the American Red Cross in Boston and job director of this particular Red Cross Disaster Relief Operation.

"Our main goal was working with people to make their homes habitable," said O'Connell.

The assessment teams, O'Connell said, concerned themselves with the basic issues of shelter, clothing, food, and medical assistance and were authorized to write dispersing orders, essentially vouchers, for those in need of food or household items from participating stores.

O'Connell emphasized time was of critical importance during a relief operation, giving the example of someone who may have lost life-saving medication, such as heart medicine or insulin, during the storm.

Sometimes, O'Connell said, simply "being there" for people in times of crisis is enough, an idea echoed by Quincy resident Jackie Gardner, area director for the Red Cross.

"We spent several hours in the Pemberton Point area in Scituate and talked to many people whose homes fared very well during the storm," Gardner said. "Even though people didn't need tangible material items from Red Cross, they were grateful to have someone to talk to and share their experiences of the storm.

"It felt good to show the compassion of the Red Cross."

O'Connell praised the efforts of the more than 150 volunteers, some of whom worked shelters all night and went to work the next morning. "We couldn't do what we do without the volunteers," said O'Connell.

O'Connell also thanked those generous enough to make the work of the Red Cross possible. "When you send in your $5, $10, $100, whatever, this is where it goes, whether it's a local fire or a hurricane," O'Connell said.

O'Connell, a nine-year veteran of the Red Cross who recently returned from El Salvador, site of a devastating earthquake, said the one common denominator for every disaster is people being there for one another.

"It's amazing," O'Connell said. "The worse the disaster is, the more people come together."

"Somehow, they figure out a way to do it."

Contributions to the Red Cross can be mailed to: American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund, 285 Columbus Ave., Boston, MA, 02166-5114.

Quincy Honors Joseph Moakley In St. Patrick's Day Parade

The city of Quincy was represented in Sunday's St. Patrick's Day Parade in South Boston as City Councillors Patrick McDermott, Gregory Hanley, and Joseph Newton carried a city banner saluting retiring Congressman Joseph Moakley.

McDermott said the tribute, which was the idea of Quincy Democrat Gloria Noble and was put together with the help of State Sen. Michael Morrissey's office, was a resounding success.

"I think South Boston and Quincy have quite a unique relationship," McDermott said, noting the enthusiastic applause the Quincy contingent received as it marched along Broadway.

Moakley, a 15-term congressman from South Boston who served as marshal for Southie's 100th St. Patrick's Day Parade, announced his retirement recently after disclosing his battle with an incurable form of Leukemia.

ENGINES IN NEED OF A REBUILD

When an engine begins coughing up clouds of white smoke, it is likely in need of an engine rebuild. A job for professionals, it involves getting the cylinders bored (if out of spec), having the block deck and cylinder head(s) resurfaced, having the rods reconditioned, getting the heads rebuilt and replacing the crankshaft (if scored). Parts for the job include piston rings (or pistons, if the cylinders were rebored), rod and camshaft bearing, a new camshaft and lifters, timing gears and timing chain, oil pump, freeze plugs, gas-valves and seals. And, it makes sense to replace the water pump at this time. If your vehicle has high mileage, it may make sense to rebuild the transmission along with the engine.

Is your high mileage engine smoking? It may be time for a rebuild or engine replacement. To help you do this, the ASE Certified professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is available at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We're "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." HINT: As an alternative to rebuilding an engine, a factory replacement engine (known as a factory crate engine) is sometimes available.

SCOTT DIWARI

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you ever read the poem written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox in the early 1900's - entitled, "Which Are You?"

"There are two kinds of people on earth today: just two kinds of people, no more, I say. . . Not the sinner and saint, for it's well understood - the good are half bad, and the bad are half good. . . Not the rich and the poor, for to rate a man's wealth, you must first know the state of his conscience and health. . . Not the humble and proud, for in life's little span - who puts on vain airs, is not counted a man. . . Not the happy and sad, for the swift flying years - bring each man his laughter and each man his tears. So, the two kinds of people on earth, I mean - are the people who lift, and the people who lean. . . Wherever you go, you will find the earth's masses - are always divided in just these two classes. . . And oddly enough, you will find too, I mean - there's only one lifter to twenty who lean. . . In which class are you? Are you easing the load - of overtaxed lifters, who toil down the road? . . . Or are you a leaver, who lets others share - your portion of labor, worry and care?"

Don't you agree the thought is just as true today as it was almost a century ago?

Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, assistant superintendent of the Quincy Public Schools, announces that, due to the snow storm and school closings on Tuesday, March 6, registration for kindergarten for the School Year 2001-2002 has been rescheduled for Tuesday, April 3 from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at every public elementary school in Quincy for all children who will be five years of age in calendar year 2001.

Parents must present a birth certificate, passport visa at the time of registration and evidence of immunizations.

Department of Public Health kindergarten entrance immunization requirements are effective September 2000:

• 5 doses of DPT, unless fourth dose given after fourth birthday.

• 4 doses of Polio, unless third dose given after fourth birthday.

• 2 doses of MMR, with first given after first birthday.

• 3 doses of Hep B, if born after Jan. 1, 1992.

• 1 dose of Varicella (chickenpox) or doctor documented case of chickenpox.

A recent entrance physical examination is mandated by the state for all students entering school and preferably should be presented at registration or at least before the start of school in September. In addition, evidence of previous screening for lead poisoning is required for all kindergarten entrants.

Children who will be six years of age on or before Dec. 31, 2001 and who have not attended public kindergarten may be registered for Grade 1 on the same day.

Parents of children living in the Lincoln-Hancock, Clifford H. Marshall, Francis W. Parker, Wollaston, and Snug Harbor School districts may receive information at kindergarten registration concerning opportunities for pre-school/early childhood education.

traffic, drainage, and density concerns were agreed to be forehand in writing — by a vote of 14 to three, with five members abstaining.

Robert Curry, owner of Curry/Ace Hardware and a West Quincy resident, fully endorsed the plan and called it a far better alternative than past proposals or some uses that might be entertained in the future.

Yet other residents voiced concerns about the project, including the addition of vehicles to the already stressed Willard St. corridor and the fact that the plan lacked an affordable housing component.

Speaking for the Quincy chapter of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization, both Ann Yeomans and Rev. William Mullin of St John's Church urged councillors to make 10 percent affordable housing a condition of the P.U.D. permit.

Charles Denchy of Willard St. gave councillors a petition with the names of 47 residents opposed to the project for reasons of increased traffic.

In addition, Joseph Shaheen, a business agent for the Electricians' Union representing the South Shore Building Trades Council, said many union workers were being marginalized and would not support the project without a Project Labor Agreement.

Attorney David Mahoney, representing the Finger Cos., led a 30 minute presentation detailing the steps the developer had made to make the project more appealing to the neighborhood, noting the more than a dozen meetings with the community.

The Texas based Finger Cos. intends to construct the apartments by combining two parcels of land, one owned by the Joyce Family and the other owned by Quarry Hills Associates, the developers of the soon-to-open 27-hole golf course in the area.

The current plan calls for a gated community consisting of 22 two and three-story wood frame buildings in a "New England" style of architecture. Slightly more than half the units would be one bedroom with 36 percent two-bedroom and 11 percent three-bedroom.

One potential sticking point is the issue of the purchase and sale agreements for the parcels, which the council voted to formally request, along with other pertinent documents, by April 2.

Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who introduced the motion, said the purchase and sales agreements were public documents and necessary to determine whether Quarry Hills Associates, which bought its parcel with state funds, was really putting all proceeds from the sale of back into the golf course project, as it has said.

Raymondi's assertion was supported by Solicitor Stephen McGrath, who had earlier expressed doubt on the matter but was swayed by the city's need to know the exact sale price.

"The purchase and sale is the best evidence, if you will, of the financial arrangement," McGrath told councillors. "In my opinion, it is a public document."

Although Dennis Harrington, attorney for Quarry Hills Associates, said that his client did not have a problem with disclosing a copy of the purchase and sale agreement, the Finger Companies' Mahoney continued his objection and voiced his client's position that the purchase and sale agreement was an agreement between two private entities which contained "far too much proprietary information" to be made public.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

MORE RECEDES THAN HAIRLINES

As we age, our hairlines are not the only things on, or in, our heads that recede. The gums also recede, thereby exposing tooth roots, rendering them more susceptible to cavities and sensitivity to hot and cold temperatures. As a countermeasure, patients are advised to adopt scrupulous flossing and brushing (using a fluoride toothpaste) habits. These, along with professional cleanings, help prevent tooth-root cavities. The dentist may also decide that it may be beneficial to use over-the-counter rinses, stronger prescription fluoride toothpaste, or a semi-annual (professional) application of a topical fluoride. Patients who are bothered by tooth-root sensitivity should consider an over-the-counter toothpaste that is formulated to combat sensitivity.

Be sure to let us know if you experience tooth-root sensitivity. We believe in preventive dentistry. We know that you wish to receive your general dental care from a highly trained, caring staff; therefore, professionalism is very important to you. Our promise to you is that our office will provide you with dental care of the highest quality available, utilizing the most modern procedures and an extremely qualified staff. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Individuals with chronic mouth dryness, caused by various prescription medications or other health factors, are at even greater risk for cavities.

Cedrone, Koch At Odds Over Consideration

Park Dept. HQ Site For QHS?

By CRAIG SALTERS

School Committee woman and Quincy High School Siting Commission Chairwoman Christine Cedrone wants commission members to seriously consider siting the new Quincy High School at Park Department Headquarters, located on the former Army Nike site.

The complex, she asserts, is separate from Merrymount Park and its deed restrictions.

"I think it's something we should look into," Cedrone said. "It's up to the commission members whether they want to discuss it or not."

"People have just assumed it's part of the Adams Trust and it's not. It's a totally separate piece of property and decided differently," Cedrone told The Sun before Tuesday night's Siting Commission meeting.

But Executive Director of Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments Thomas Koch, who said the use of the 6.6 acre site would result in the taking of even more land at Merrymount Park, said the city would mobilize to protect land decided by Quincy's first family.

"This is the jewel of our park system, decided by the Adams family, one of America's greatest families," said Koch. "Who is Christine Cedrone, or any other public official to change that?"

"If they thought that the (proposed) Quincy Avenue site caused a controversy, they'll find it minimal compared to Merrymount Park."

Although the Richard J. Koch Park & Recreation Complex, 1 Merrymount Parkway, is listed as one of the Siting Commission's three remaining possible sites, Pageant Field and DPW Headquarters at 55 Sea St. being the other two, Cedrone said the site has not been discussed much.

One possible reason, Cedrone suggested, is that people may be lumping the Park Department Headquar

QEA President Says Testing 'Should Be Dumped'

Creedon, McCauley Differ Over MCAS Results

By CRAIG SALTERS

As roughly 500 10th graders from the Quincy Public Schools prepare for the May MCAS tests — which for the first time will be required for high school graduation across the state — the Education Committee of the Quincy City Council Monday night discussed the city's readiness for the controversial exams.

Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon led school administrators in a 30-minute presentation to the committee, discussing such issues as test scores, emerging trends, professional development for better implementation of the state's curriculum frameworks, and the academic support system the city had in place for students who scored in the "needs improvement" or "failing" categories of the test.

Quincy's total score of 2314 for 2000, Creedon said, placed it behind only Newton, Brookline, and Framingham when ranked with communities with more than 50,000 residents.

But Creedon, who told councillors that no one test should measure the success or failure of a school, also disputed the relevancy of the Department of Education's "Improvement Rating" scores, which grade the schools themselves on their improvement from one MCAS cycle to the next.

The rating system had

Asian Residents Increase 60%

City's Population: 88,025

Recently released figures from the 2000 Federal Census show the city of Quincy growing moderately in population as it grew significantly in diversity over the past decade.

The city's population rose four percent from the 1990 Federal Census, from 84,985 in 1990 to the current figure of 88,025.

The city's Asian population, however, saw a 60 percent increase in its representation: from 5,777 residents in 1990 to the current figure of 13,546.

Asians now comprise slightly more than 15 percent of the total population for the city. Overall, minorities constitute roughly 19 to 20 percent of the city's population.

"It was a good census and these are good figures," said City Clerk Joseph Shea, commenting upon the high level of cooperation at all levels. "Although we're a little disappointed that we didn't reach the 90,000 figure (for total population), we're generally happy with the numbers."

At 88,025, Quincy retains its position as the ninth largest city in Massachusetts.

137 Homes, Streets Affected City Copes With Nor'easter Flooding

The city was hit hard by last week's storm flooding but municipal departments, with assistance from the Quincy Emergency Management Agency and the American Red Cross, worked around the clock to keep complications and damages to a minimum.

Overall, 137 flooding incidents -- ranging from flooded houses, apartments, basements, and streets -- were reported on more than 80 different streets across the city.

Residents in the vicinity of Sheldon St. in West Quincy, which had water depths of three to four feet, were some of the hardest hit by the storm flooding.

Mayor James Sheets ordered a shelter to be opened at the Center for Technical Education.

For several days American Red Cross workers fanned out into Quincy and other areas which experienced flood and water damage from the rains. It also established a hotline at 1 (800) 564-1234, ext. 480 for Massachusetts residents to call if their primary residence and living space -- such as bedrooms and kitchen -- had been affected.

As part of its outreach efforts, the Red Cross distributed dozens of clean-up kits which included a bucket, mop, broom, bleach, cleaning disinfectant, garbage bags, and sponges.

Throughout the storm, employees of the city's Department of Public Works and the Park Department worked to keep up with the flooded basements, streets, yards, and businesses of the city.

Every water and sewage pump available was put to use and Emergency Management personnel worked through the night preparing and maintaining the water pumps for backup for the various city departments.

License Board Approves Package Store Expansion

The License Board granted permission to Dennis Carson of the Copeland Package Store, 273 Copeland St., to add 800 square feet of alteration of its all-alcoholic license pending a stamped plan.

According to Atty. Edward Fleming, the complex has two other stores in addition to the package store, Vesco in the center and a Laundromat on the right. The Laundromat, which has been at the site for more than 40 years, will be eliminated and replaced with a walk-in-type refrigeration to sell the liquor.

It then will free up space so Carson can sell more groceries.

It will also add an additional 800 square feet in the basement of the store for storage.

Fleming said the renovations which will take about five weeks, will provide a "one stop atmosphere" to purchase beer and wine in addition to groceries.

The building is owned by the Gaudiano Family Trust, and has been in existence for 50 years.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the approval of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission is necessary.

Board Revokes Cafe Cabaret License, Sets 90-Day Probation

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday revoked the cabaret license held by Brigadoon's 520 Washington St. and placed the restaurant on a 90-day probation period.

Calling the establishment an 80 percent bar and 20 percent a food site, Det. Lt. Robert M. Perchard, liquor inspector told the board he entered Brigadoon's on March 15 and found a punk rock band, entertaining with a crowd of young people, no manager in sight, but just a bartender.

He also found practically the same conditions on March 3.

In another area, no lights were on, empty bottles strewn all around indicating "getting young people to drink," Perchard said.

Perchard said there have been 42 calls to the police department over a period of a couple of years complaining of noise and added that there is a change of chefs about every two weeks, and the place "smelled dirty" causing him to notify the health department.

Fearing "unsafe conditions" after a report of three assaults, one with a dangerous weapon, Perchard said he spoke with Gerald D'Arcy, manager who told the board at Tuesday's meeting that he "agreed" with him and said "changes were being made."

D'Arcy explained that on March 3, the band was only performing for a "sound track" and that he didn't expect such an audience.

Claiming that some local restaurants recently coming in the area have "killed us" and said he realized that he had "made a mistake" in reversing the selling of food as opposed to providing entertainment.

After applauding Perchard for "taking it out on his own," Chairman Joseph Shea said when the license was originally issued to Brigadoon's (formerly the Knotty Pine) on Dec., 18, 1996, it was mainly for the serving of food, a family tradition established by the owners of the Knotty Pine.

Shea said the restaurant seats about 150 persons and told D'Arcy, that the board would be willing to work with him during specific reconstruction.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymond spoke earlier in the meeting and suggested a 3-6 months probation period and lauded the police department for their work.

Raymond said he dealt with the same problem 30 years ago, when he was first on the city council and added "enough is enough".

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman told D'Arcy that owning a restaurant is a 24 hour a day job and said "people sell their business themselves" and said it didn't matter if "some guy opened across the street."

Short of scolding D'Arcy, Gorman suggested he sit down and have a hard look and ask yourself "is it time to sell?"

He said neighbors will not stand for "rowdiness" and in the last four years the restaurant has "gone down hill".

He said "find someone who knows the restaurant business."

Acting Police Chief Terrence Kelly said he agreed with the board and asked D'Arcy to come up with a specific plan to turn the operation around".

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, citing health inspection problems suggested a new manager be required to appoint someone who will be assigned to cleaning up the site.

Shea told D'Arcy to report to the board before July 1.

Quincy 911 System Seen As State Model

Quincy's unique 911 emergency service, which allows firefighters to listen in on every 911 call, is being considered a model for the entire state because of its reduction in response times.

The Legislature's House and Senate Joint Committee on Government Regulations held a public hearing on the matter Tuesday at the State House. Legislators and state residents discussed whether every other community in Massachusetts should allow its fire department immediate access to 911 calls.

The public hearing represents a sea change in the state's thinking, said William Arienti, president of Local Firefighters Association 792, given that Quincy had to have special legislation passed three years ago to implement the plan.

"It works," said Arienti, who added that Quincy had also developed its own equipment to handle such a system.

Arienti added that firefighters' access to 911 calls translates into two to three minute average response times for Quincy firefighters, as compared to the state average of five to seven minutes.

"And when seconds count, one or two minutes is a very important thing," Arienti said.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On March 31, 1492, in Spain, a royal edict is issued by the nation's Catholic rulers declaring that all Jews who refuse to convert to Christianity will be expelled from the country.

• On March 30, 1867, U.S. Secretary of State William Seward signs a treaty with Russia for the purchase of Alaska for $7 million. The purchase was ridiculed in Congress and in the press as "Seward's folly," "Seward's icebox," and President Andrew Johnson's "polar bear garden."

• On March 27, 1964, the strongest earthquake in American history, measuring 8.4 on the Richter scale, slams into southern Alaska, killing 125 people and injuring thousands.

• On March 28, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., violence erupts during a march led by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in support of a sanitation workers' strike. One African American marcher is killed, and King urges calm as National Guard troops are called to Memphis to restore order.

• On April 1, 1970, AMC, the company that first introduced the compact car in the 1950s, introduced the Gremlin, America's first subcompact car. The Gremlin was out on the market for only a short time before the Big Three released their own subcompact models. The Gremlin, created to save AMC, floundered.

• On March 29, 1971, in Los Angeles, Charles Manson and three followers are sentenced to death for the brutal 1969 murders of actress Sharon Tate and six others. The death penalty was overturned in California, so their sentences were later reduced to life imprisonment.

• On March 26, 1997, following an anonymous tip, police enter a mansion in Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., and discover 39 victims of a mass suicide. It is later revealed that the men and women were members of "Heaven's Gate," a religious cult that believed that by committing suicide they would enter an alien spacecraft hidden behind the Hale-Bopp comet.

A Future Political Force?

Looking at Quincy's rapidly growing Asian population you can't help wondering if it will grow right into a powerful political force in the city's not too distant future.

The 2000 U.S. Census figures released last week show a dramatic rise since 1990 in the number of the city's Asian residents: from 5,777 to 13,546. A 60 percent increase. Most of them are Chinese.

That represents 15.4 percent of the city's new total census figure of 88,025. Up only 3,040 from 1990. A 3.58 percent increase.

City Clerk Joseph Shea had hoped Quincy would officially reach the 90,000 mark.

"I'm disappointed that the census says its 88,000 and not 90,000," he says. "They did a good job taking the census this year and if they say Quincy's population is 88,025, then that's what we will have to say that it is."

But Shea suspects that Quincy actually does have a 90,000 population unofficially. He thinks some 2,000 or more residents were missed and most of them Asians shy about responding.

He gets support on that theory from Tackey Chan, chairman of the Quincy Asian-American Association. Chan thinks there are something like 2,500 more Asians living in the city than the census shows. Which would boost the Asian population to approximately 16,000.

As Asian residents become more involved in the community through children in school and as homebuying taxpayers, a logical step would be a developing interest in the local political scene.

As they register to vote, they could make a difference in elections.

And if they organized behind one of their own candidates, we could one day have an Asian name on the City Council or School Committee.

And, maybe a longer way down the road, one in the mayor's office.

Maybe.

But some might call that premature thinking. Women, who have been here much longer than Asian residents, haven't fared too well when it comes to winning a City Council seat or the mayor's office.

Even though for years they have outnumbered men voters.

In Quincy's 112-year history as a city, only three women have made it to the City Council: Edna Austin, elected 1942; Joanne Condon (1977) and Patricia Toland (1981).

Four women have run for mayor: Rita Anderson (1977), Grace Saphir (1973 and 1975), Joanne Condon and Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg, both 1985.

But 18 women have won school committee seats. And that may be the place for an Asian-American candidate to begin a political career.

But if the Asian population continues to grow as rapidly as it has in the past 10 years, it should become a political factor in the years ahead.

All they might need is one to show them the way.

SHEA

CHRISTINE CEDRONE who would have had a good shot at becoming the fourth woman councillor in the city's history, has taken herself out of this year's election.

CEDRONE

Cedrone, who was being urged to run for councillor at-large says: "I'm not going to run. I gave it a lot of thought and it wasn't an easy decision. I love my city but ..."

But she also loves Vin Scarnici whom she will marry Nov. 10 at St. John's Church.

"This year my wedding and personal life need to take preference over politics and campaigning. There's a lot more involved in a wedding than just the ceremony."

Her decision not to run should touch off a sigh of relief among some of the candidates who will be running at-large this year.

Cedrone, who topped the School Committee field in 1999 and was the third highest vote-getter on the ballot behind Mayor James Sheets and Paul Harold, would have been a formidable council candidate.

And may be, next time around.

"I'm not saying I never will run for the council," she says. "But right now I still have a lot to do on the school committee."

CHET CURTIS tells us we were wrong in last week's column item reporting he had purchased a parking space in Marina Bay.

"It wasn't a parking space," he says. "It was a garage. And the garage goes with my condo."

Papers at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds somehow referred to it as a parking space, said Register Paul Harold.

But it is really a garage, Chet says.

He says there apparently are parking spaces available for purchase on Marina Drive where he formerly lived in Marina Bay. But he was renting at the time and never purchased.

Last October, he says, he bought a condo unit — and garage — at Harborside, 16 Brigantine Lane.

And how does he like it there?

"I like it. It's convenient and I have friends here."

And how about his new job at New England Cable News.

"Terrific, I love it. Very challenging."

Sorry for the parking mixup, Chet.

Scenes From Yesterday

Parish House, Wollaston, Mass. c. 1910

THIS IS A 1915 postcard showing the new addition to the Wollaston Congregational Church on the corner of Winthrop and Warren Avenues in what was then called Wollaston Heights. The granite and stucco parish house is shown attached to the original wooden church building on the right. One of the first buildings on Wollaston Hill, the wooden church was built in 1875. The present granite church replaced it in 1925. The Barron Souvenir Co. published the postcard.

Considering Parkland For New Quincy High School Short-Sighted

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Although there is collective agreement on the need to improve the facilities of our schools, the consideration of existing parkland for this purpose is short sighted for several reasons. The fact that more than half of the original sites being considered by the Quincy High School Siting Commission include parks, open space, wetlands, or conservation areas is troubling to those of us who support our schools, but equally value our city's natural and recreational areas.

Excluding the Blue Hills, the 16.77 square mile City of Quincy can only claim 1200 acres of open space. Forty percent of these 1200 acres are wetlands, bogs, marshes, and coastal areas. Of the remaining 700 acres, 63 percent or 446 acres belong to Quarry Hills for a golf course and other uses. A few hundred acres are used for active recreations as school grounds, playgrounds, and ball fields. When you look carefully at how much land we have for passive recreation, we are left with only 100 acres: the majority of which is located at Merrymount Park and Faxon Park, and Squaw Rock.

It is no secret that our beaches, parks, and playgrounds are among the most visited locations in the city. After all, they provide all of us with a sanctuary where we can recreate or just contemplate in nature without having to leave town. In recent years, a red hot economy has further preyed upon Quincy's remaining open space at an alarming rate. New developments on Quarry St., in Marina Bay, and along Town River have eliminated 100 acres of open space. Mark Twain had it right when he wisely stated, "Buy land, they ain't making any more." The city's new hotel tax, which will earmark revenues for open space protection, will help in the long-term. But it can't protect the areas we've lost nor will it aid other areas ripe for development.

Finally, we'd be well served to know our local history. In the 1980's, when school enrollment dipped, the city closed nearly a dozen schools which have since been sold and converted to condos, apartments, or office space. Today, as our student enrollment is again growing, the availability of land has diminished and real estate costs have soared. It is incumbent upon the good people who comprise the school siting task force to have a sense of vision that allows for the fluctuation of our student population over time.

But of equal importance is the need to preserve and protect the few areas that the families and residents of this city can claim as respite for passive and active recreation. It is also worth noting that the condition of Central Middle School was the original impetus for our present dialogue on school facilities. Let us not lose sight of this fact.

Quincy's Yesterdays Woolworth's To Rent Faxon Building

By PAUL HAROLD

Henry M. Faxon announced that the Woolworth's company would rent the entire building at 1543-63 Hancock St., corner of Cliveden St., built in 1915.

Faxon said he would renovate the building at a cost of $200,000. Woolworth's would replace current tenants including the J.A. Gamble and Son Market, Moorehead's Shoes and Smith's Dress Shop.

HOSPITAL PATIENTS IN CORRIDOR

Overcrowding at Quincy City Hospital forced five women patients to be placed in the corridor. Director Dr. Ennio Ronka said that the hospital was over capacity with 262 patients.

Ronka said the overcrowding was not the result of any seasonal illness, but as a result of the closing of the Rice wing that was short of nurses because of absences caused by the flu. He said that the continuing high hospital occupancy was because of chronic care provided to the elderly.

NEED FOR VETERANS' HOUSING

Girard White, chairman of the mayor's committee on emergency housing, said the need for veterans' housing had reached its highest peak, with 884 screened applicants awaiting housing.

He proposed that $100,000 be appropriated to convert the Old Washington School for housing for 25 families. Councillor William Papile asked for a legal opinion of the use of the school for non-school purposes. He said that a provision in the original gift of the land restricted its use.

Quincy Tankard On Display At Historical Society

Col. John Quincy's famed silver tankard, rescued from the auctioneer's block by Attorney George Burke, will be on museum display for the first time in more than 70 years on the weekend of March 30-April 1 at the Quincy Historical Society.

The aim of the exhibit will be to place the tankard, which was crafted in 1767 and bequeathed by Col. Quincy to the First Parish Church, in its historical context.

"We want to help people see the tankard in terms of the life of this community, of the Quincy family and of John Quincy in particular," said Joyce I. Baker, president of the historical society.

Also on exhibit at the society's museum in the old Adams Academy building will be other examples of silver associated with the Quincy community from the society's collection, dating from the colonial era onward.

A highlight of this accompanying display --- and a sneak preview of an upcoming core exhibit --- will be two personal items, believed to have belonged to President John Quincy Adams, which will be on public display for the first time.

The exhibit will open Friday, March 30, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. with opening ceremonies that will include a brief discussion of the tankard and of colonial silver by Jennifer Jensen, assistant curator of the New York Historical Society.

The program will include comments from George Burke, who purchased the tankard with a bid of $160,000; Mayor James Sheets; and representatives of the First Parish Church.

The exhibit will be open again Saturday, March 31 and Sunday, April 1, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. each day. There is no admission charge.

Council Seniors Committee To Hold Meetings On TRIAD

The Senior Citizens Committee of the City Council will hold meetings to discuss the viability of city participation in TRIAD, an initiative put forth by Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, chairman of the Senior Citizens Committee and author of the resolve requesting the meetings, said he was hopeful specific meeting dates could be scheduled by April or May.

The purpose of the meetings, Raymondi said, was to coordinate efforts among all interested parties to facilitate city participation in TRIAD.

According to the resolve, which was referred to committee by unanimous voice vote March 19, TRIAD is a three-way commitment among senior citizens, law enforcement officials, and the Council on Aging/Department of Elder Affairs. Its primary goals are to:

- Reduce the criminal victimization of senior citizens.

- Enhance the delivery of law enforcement services to seniors.

- Reduce the unwarranted fear of crime.

- Improve the quality of life for seniors in the community.

Raymondi, citing the need to involve the senior community in law enforcement and the fact that seniors represent the fastest growing segment of the population, called participation in TRIAD a potential positive for the city.

QUINCY REPRESENTATIVES in the South Boston St. Patrick's Day Parade had their own special salute to Congressman Joseph Moakley, the parade's honorary grand marshal. Merrymount Park A Work Of Art

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
As an artist and long-time member of the Quincy Art Association, I have seen my share of beautiful paintings of Quincy landscapes. Our search has always been to find the most beautiful place to put onto canvas and share with others. More often than not, when a Quincy artist paints a natural landscape, it is a scene from Merrymount Park.

How ironic is it that the School Siting Committee would aim to build a school upon the most beautiful natural location that we have left in Quincy. A building constructed in Merrymount Park would destroy a site of unparalleled beauty in an urban setting. Once it is gone, it would be lost forever.
Those with an appreciation for beauty would readily identify Peak, Field, Black's Creek, Merrymount Park, with the associated wildlife and scenic vistas as the most beautiful site in Quincy. To replace that natural beauty with a building and parking lots would be a tremendous mistake.

Anet Paglierani
Vassall St.

Favors New QHS At Present Site

(A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)
Chairwoman Christine Cedrone and Siting Commission Members:

First, we attended the Commission meeting on January 9 at City Hall and appreciate the hard work the Commission has done and will continue to do in the months ahead. The siting decision is very complex and must remain open to public comment and approval, as it will impact the quality of life in Quincy for decades to come: educationally, environmentally, and financially.

Obviously, with the purchase and withdrawal of the Quincy Ave. polluted site, serious errors have already been made (and would have been so much worse if the construction/occupation had taken place with disastrous health and economic results). Hopefully, a critical lesson has been learned and will be heeded as this process moves forward. We join our voices with those who demand that no more of the little remaining open space in the city be developed for this or any other project. The Duane Elementary/Lumber/Souther Tide Mill site is the most recent and notable example of a unique opportunity for open space and historic preservation lost forever. Lack of a true vision and perspective resulting in a huge, ugly parking lot and mega-pharmacy in what could and should have been a wonderful public marine park and museum.

The proposal to demolish the 33-year-old, "state-of-the-art" Voc-Tech at a cost of $3 million is another element that calls into question the rationale of the entire "master plan" to upgrade the Quincy Public Schools — with that type of reasoning, why not leave the USS Salem (with all due respect to its legacy and loyal supporters) docked where it is and convert it to a high school or middle school and address several issues at once? Seriously, we agree with the view of many citizens that the best possible site and concept for a new high school would be a "renewed" Quincy High School at its present site, with the Voc-Tech left intact and improved as needed. QHS is a classic, solid, 1926 building with a capacity for approximately 2000 students, teachers, and staff in an ideal location convenient to public transportation, the wonderfully renovated Thomas Crane Library, Quincy College, and nearby resources. The present high school will be renovated under any scenario and could possibly be redesigned to house Central Middle School — such grade 6-12 facilities have proved very effective in many private and public school systems. However problematic the process, it was successful when North Quincy High was renovated and, with careful planning to avoid unnecessary disruption, Quincy High on Coddington should emerge as the best choice and investment.

The prospect of a new high school for 10 percent of the total building cost may in fact be deceptively "too good to be true" — that final sum, including the demolition of the Voc-Tech, building at other sites, etc., actually more expensive and less effective than simply securing the funding for renovations.

As life-long Quincy residents concerned with the education, environment, and economy of our beloved city, our vote (if only we had one by referendum!) is to "renew" Quincy High School at its present site!

Thank you for your consideration and dedicated service on our behalf.

Looking A Gift Horse In The Mouth

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
As a Quincy public schools substitute teacher and as a candidate for the Quincy school committee several years ago, I believe there are times when one should look a gift horse in the mouth.

It simply isn't easy for the school committee to say no to an extra $50 thousand. However, this money appropriated by the mayor and city council earmarked to buy computers for the Atherton Hough Elementary School has, indeed, undermined the authority of the school board in controlling the school budget. School board member William Phelan is correct. "It's not about whether Atherton Hough gets the computers. It's about the process."

The school committee and not the city council is charged with the task of deciding how monies are spent. It is their job to expend their appropriation. It is their job to make monetary decisions based on the needs of the entire school system.

If the city council sees fit to add money to the school budget that is fine and dandy. However, any such new monies should be infused into the general school budget and the school board should be the elected board deciding where and which schools need additional funds.

It isn't easy turning down money but sometimes a gift horse can be deceiving. Remember those ancient Greeks and a certain Trojan Horse? The school board has every right to be wary of city councilors and mayors bearing gifts for them.

The city council has a right to lobby the school board but no right to control the destination of appropriated funds. Otherwise we might as well abolish the school board and let the city council run the schools too.

Perhaps, the city council was right in appropriating monies for computers for a certain public school but this really isn't their job. They over-reached their authority.

The school committee doesn't work for the mayor or the city council. It works for all of us. My daughter attends North Quincy High School. I know the school could use more money. As a parent I will lobby the school board not my ward councilor. He has other work to do for his constituents because we never elected him to the school committee.

Limited Dialogue With City Over Affordable Housing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
We are writing to continue the dialogue about the proposed Inclusionary Zoning ordinance which will help with the critical lack of affordable apartments and homeownership opportunities in Quincy. We appreciate the recent article and letter about the City Council Housing Committee's Feb. 12 hearing on the ordinance.

Inclusionary Zoning means that a portion (usually 10 percent) of a new development be required to be affordable housing. The affordable housing can be within the development, built off-site, or covered through the developer's contributing funds to an Affordable Housing Trust Fund for off-site development. This zoning has been in effect for many years in many places, such as Newton, Boston, Cambridge, and Somerville.

GBIO/Quincy has been working to ease Quincy's affordable housing crisis since our public meeting last April 12. At that time, State Senator Morrissey, Mayor Sheets, and Councillor Hanley committed to work with us. Councillor Hanley offered the Inclusionary Zoning ordinance in December.

We carefully reviewed the proposal and made several suggestions that, we believe, will greatly strengthen the ordinance and provide more affordable housing than the city's version. Now, our greatest concern is that, while we generally support the ordinance, our suggested changes are not having a full or fair hearing by the city.

We strongly urge that most of the affordable housing be included on-site. This is due to the lack of available developable land (only 119 acres left in Quincy) and the cost of development. As Mr. Giarratani pointed out, "No one lives in a trust."

Mixed-income developments are not nuclear science; they have been built and are successful in many communities. We provided several examples to the city, including Harbortown, Museum Towers, and the Baker's Chocolate complex which is in the planning stages. And, astonishingly, these days the income of a family of four, eligible for affordable housing is approximately $50,200 per year, thereby including teachers, bank tellers, medical technicians, bus drivers, etc.

Also, we strongly recommend that the ordinance be expanded to include all development projects with more than 10 dwelling units, not limited to the Planned Unit Developments (PUDs) as the city version does.

Since the Feb. 12 Housing Committee hearing, we have had limited dialogue with city officials about this work. As Councillor Hanley noted at the end of that hearing, the mayor has been meeting privately with developers. We have requested to be present at those meetings and have been told, "No, the mayor will call you when he is ready."

We, too, need to talk and negotiate the several differences between the city's version and ours. We attended the Feb. 28 Fair Housing Committee meeting to find that they had not received our version of the ordinance until that day, even though we had given it to the mayor and the council on Feb. 12. We also went to the special Fair Housing Committee meeting on March 7. There was not a quorum, and no vote, but the members who were there reached consensus on several issues and submitted them in writing to the mayor's representative, who chairs the committee.

When we met with the mayor last July, he agreed to strive to bring Quincy's affordable housing up from its current 8.5 percent to the state's suggested 10 percent in the next five years. That's 600 units. We were thrilled by Councillor Hanley's introduction of the ordinance in December which, we understand, was encouraged by Council President Harold who created the Housing Committee. We were happy to hear Mayor Sheets make affordable housing a top priority in his State of the City report. We fervently hope that the results will meet our expectations.

We have been working very hard on having more affordable housing. We are hopeful that, soon, we will have a strong, effective Inclusionary Zoning ordinance in Quincy.

Proposed School Projects Will Give Children Greatest Resource: Education

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am a lifelong resident of Quincy, a taxpayer and a mother of two elementary age children. I support the city's current plan to build a new high school, and renovate the current Quincy High for Central Middle School.

I am writing because I feel the coverage of the process seems to be lacking certain information. I think it is important that people are informed that we have an obsolete school building in the education system, thus the reason to add a new building. It is obvious that nothing is going to be gained by the taxpayers and students of Quincy if we ever chose to refurbish Central in its current location. It is a two acre parcel of land serving 600 students, 10 percent of DOE's recommended size. Restoration is 50 percent more expensive than conventional renovation.

If the population is downsized from 600 to 400, whose children would be restricted and to where? Most of the people involved in the process have done their homework and made a decision in the best interest of the children. No double sessions, no renovations while children are in the building, no modules.

From a taxpayers' point of view, I would like to say throughout history the taxpayers of Quincy had to make difficult decisions similar to the one we are making now. Central was the original high school. In 1922 city officials had to make the difficult choice to build a new high school. Taxpayers had to foot the bill then to educate the children of Quincy.

Now it is the year 2001, the demands on today's children are more difficult. The job market requires more skills to compete successfully. Let's give the parents and the children of Quincy the resources needed to be successful, and a school they can be proud of. It is once again the taxpayers responsibility to do right by the children of Quincy and to use our money on something productive. The greatest resource you could give a child is an education. Every one on this task force should be proud to be a part of something so wonderful. I fail to understand what is so awful about building a new school and spending money to educate our children. I thank the task force and city officials for their hard work and dedication.

UNScrabble Fundraiser At Crane Library April 5

The Thomas Crane Public Library's literacy project will celebrate National Library Week with a game of UNScrabble Challenge Thursday, April 5 at 6:30 p.m.

The event is a fundraiser for the literacy project and will be held in the library's community meeting room.

Unlike the tournament-style Scrabble sponsored by the literacy project for the last several years, UNScrabble Challenge requires a table of players to make as many words as possible to fill the board within the time limit of 30 minutes. This sounds like a daunting task for two players, but for a challenge game six to eight players per table is suggested.

Players have a chance to acquire "extra letters" to make a word they just can't resist, but it won't be easy: play will be fast and furious. Players will be amazed at how high the scores can reach in just 30 minutes.

The National Scrabble Association will provide prizes for the highest scoring table.

Dessert and coffee will be served after the Challenge game. Cost is $10 per person to play.

Registration forms are available in the community information room on the first floor and the literacy office on the second floor at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square.

Schools Eugene Creedon will attend as will principals at the elementary, middle, and high school grade levels.

Format will consist of panelists talking about current issues or programs in the schools followed by a question and answer session.

The Quincy Sun mistakenly reported a meeting date of March 22.

For more information, contact Ward 5 Association President Timothy McAloon at (617) 479-6285.

AN ALASKAN CRUISE

An Alaskan cruise is one of the best ways to experience this breathtaking, awesome wonderland. Each ship offers several excursions from which to choose, including helicopter rides, kayaking, camping and mountain biking. The key to success is heading to the purser's desk immediately after boarding your ship, as some popular excursions fill up quickly. The glaciers, sea lions, swimming salmon, wildlife and scenery are extraordinary and memorable. Most cruises are at least seven days, which is necessary to get a taste of this huge, diverse destination. Holland America Westours offers family-only cruises, a great way for parents and children to enjoy Alaska's highlights, which are both entertaining and educational.

come under fire across the state, said Creedon, producing a letter from Department of Education Commissioner David Driscoll which recognized the ratings as a problem.

In the latest MCAS analysis combining the English, Math, and Science scores, seven of Quincy's 17 schools failed to meet improvement expectations set for them by the state.

"It seems that the best thing you could have done (to get a good improvement rating) was to have done poorly the first time," said Creedon, explaining his dissatisfaction with the rating process.

Creedon offered alternative analyses, such as the Institute for Research in English Language Acquisition Development (RIEAD), which ranked Quincy as "the number one district in the state for high performing LEP (Limited English Proficiency) students."

Creedon, who added that over 40 different languages were used in the Quincy Public Schools, argued that language concerns should be factored in to the overall analysis.

"I am extremely proud of our diversity and I offer it not as an apology but as a fact," said Creedon.

Of 1,847 Quincy students tested, Creedon said, 82 percent were traditional students, 14 percent were special needs, and four percent were ESL.

However, Councillor Frank McCauley, whose resolve initiated the sub-committee meeting, brought up other figures: the 58 percent of Quincy Schools in the "Low" performance rating; the school department's 107 percent increase in Chapter 70 School Aid from FY 1993 to FY 2001, from $6,872,356 to $14,221,375; and the 60 percent increase in the school budget over that same period.

"This is the third year (of MCAS testing) and what I'm hearing doesn't square with what I'm seeing," said McCauley. "The MCAS, it appears to me, is a challenge. Are we really challenging our young people to do better?"

McCauley, who discussed with Creedon this year's results and expectations for next year, said the best course of action for the council was to ask for a similar update from the school department next year.

"While they seem to be aware of the problems, there's still a lot more work which needs to be done," McCauley said. "I think the council should re-visit this issue a year from now."

Paul Phillips, president of the Quincy Educational Association, also spoke at Monday night's meeting and left no doubt as to where the union stood on the issue of MCAS.

"I think it should be dumped," Phillips said. "The only accurate letter (in MCAS) is M for Massachusetts," said Phillips, arguing that the test was not comprehensive, not a fair assessment, and employed an arbitrary system at best.

"If MCAS has any use, it is a way for us to measure how the curriculum frameworks are being implemented," said Phillips, who argued that, instead of being used as an assessment, it was being used as a "high-stakes" test with make or break results.

Countering what he called "straw dog" arguments that MCAS opponents wanted to pass out diplomas to students who couldn't read, Phillips predicted: "We're going to deny people who can read their diplomas and their parents are going to sue our pants off ... and they should."

A score of 220 is required to pass the MCAS.

A BAD PATCH

A mouth sore that persists longer than a week should be examined by the dentist. Leukoplakia is a thick, whitish patch that occurs on the cheeks, gums, or tongue and is caused by excessive cell growth. Because it can progress to cancer, the dentist may want to take a biopsy. Patients should also contact the dentist for an immediate examination if they should notice a persistent sore or irritation that does not heal, color changes (such as the development of red and/or white oral lesions), pain or tenderness anywhere in the mouth or lips, difficulty in swallowing or chewing, or a crust or small eroded area anywhere in the soft tissues of the mouth.

A GREAT COMPANY TO DO BUSINESS WITH

Real Estate in the New Era

by Vin Moscardelli Owner/Broker

APPRAISING GRACE

Federal law now requires lenders to drop private mortgage insurance (PMI) when homeowners' equity in their homes exceeds 20%. However, those rules take only regularly scheduled monthly mortgage payments (not price appreciation) into account when figuring equity. If you have purchased a home within the past few years with less than 20% down, the recent strong market may have pushed your equity over the 20% threshold. In fact, one survey shows that 95% of the 61 cities surveyed had sufficient appreciation between 1997 and 2000 to justify dropping PMI. With this in mind, homeowners may want to schedule an appraisal to check their homes' value. They may be surprised to see that their equity stakes have risen above 20%.

If you own a home and pay PMI, consider arranging an appraisal to determine your equity. The real estate market continues to reap significant financial returns. ERA CENTRAL REAL ESTATE can provide you with an accurate market assessment of your property. Our goal is to bring buyers and sellers together to the mutual satisfaction of both. Are you currently renting? We can arrange a financial consultation and show you how you can afford a home through consolidation of your assets. In some cases, your mortgage may be equal to or less than your rent. Call us at 328-1312, or visit us at 128 Mayor McGrath Highway for exceptional residential and commercial real estate service.

HINT: Homeowners should also be aware that any home improvements they have made also bolster their equity.

FHA Takes Positive Steps To Help Homebuyers Save Money

By CAROL BULMAN

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) program plays an important role in mortgage financing, particularly for first-time homebuyers. Because of its flexible rules on qualifying ratios and low downpayments (which can be gift funds received from a relative), the FHA program has successfully helped millions of Americans realize their dream of homeownership.

The FHA, a government agency that insures mortgages made by private lenders, recently made several announcements that will help millions of potential homebuyers save money.

On Jan. 1, 2001, the FHA reduced its up-front mortgage insurance premium from 2.25 percent of the mortgage to 1.5 percent of the mortgage amount. (The borrower continues to pay one-half of one percent of the mortgage amount on an annual basis until the loan to value is paid to 78 percent.)

This mortgage insurance premium (MIP) is paid at closing or added to the amount of mortgage. Since many FHA borrowers are first-time buyers with little funds available for closing costs and a downpayment, this amount usually is financed rather than being paid in cash at closing.

The MIP is similar in concept to private mortgage insurance (PMI), which is required on a conventional loan with less than a 20-percent downpayment. This reduction puts the cost of mortgage insurance on an FHA loan on par with that of a conventional mortgage.

This decrease in costs for borrowers results from the FHA mortgage insurance fund being in very healthy financial condition. This is wonderful for the FHA, especially considering that just 10 years ago the agency was operating without adequate reserves.

Also effective Jan. 1, the FHA adopted the standards of private mortgage insurers by automatically canceling the annual mortgage insurance premium once the mortgage is paid down to 78 percent of the original appraised value of the property.

Cancellation of PMI received much attention in recent years when consumers and regulators objected to private mortgage insurers requiring coverage on loans long after the loan-to-value ratio had been reduced to an acceptable level.

Congress reacted by enacting policies that established an automatic cancellation of private insurance once the loan-to-value ratio reached the 78 percent benchmark. FHA, which was not covered by this law, has now followed suit and we as an industry applaud the agency for doing so.

In addition, the FHA has increased the ceiling on the amount of mortgage money it will lend on a piece of property. In high-cost areas, the maximum loan amount is now up to $239,250 for a single-family home. The loan limit varies by county and by number of families. FHA will lend up to a four-family home, so please contact CFS for details on mortgage amounts in your area.

The FHA program has been serving future homeowners for almost a century. In 1999, the FHA insured 1.3 million homes, with a total of $125 billion in mortgage loans. About 80 percent of these loans were made to first-time buyers, 40 percent of which were to minority households.

This is an important program and I am very pleased to see that the FHA has progressed along with private sector in staying competitive.

South Shore resident Carol Bulman is chair of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association and is president of Norwell-based Conway Financial Services (CFS). If you have questions about home financing issues, call CFS at (781) 681-9400 or (888) 831-1181.

Albert Megna Going To Europe To Honor 'Yankee Division'

Quincy resident and World War II Army veteran Albert Megna leaves for Europe April 2 to take part in the 26th Infantry "Yankee Division" Association's two-week commemorative tour of France, Luxembourg, and Belgium, where some of the division's greatest achievements took place.

Highlight of the trip for Megna, a "Yankee Division" soldier who was wounded Dec. 28, 1944 in the Battle of the Bulge, will be ceremonies April 8 at the "Yankee Division Memorial Church" across the street from the Aisne-Marne Cemetery in Belleau, France.

As chairman of the YD Trust Fund, Megna has spearheaded efforts to raise restoration funds for the church, which was destroyed in 1918 in heavy fighting during the Battle of Belleau Woods but was rebuilt in 1929 by the Yankee Division, serving as a memorial to the division's nearly 3,000 war dead.

Roughly $30,000 has been raised over the past few years for the refurbishment of the church, primarily from YD Trust funds, contributions by the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Corps of Massachusetts, and private donations.

Megna will make the trip with YD Trust Treasurer Vincent Saccone of Lakeville. Major General (Ret.) Joseph Saladino, a peacetime commander of the "Yankee Division," was originally scheduled to travel with them but will make the trip at a later date.

In 1996 Megna visited the "Yankee Division Memorial Church" and replaced the flags of the six New England states, which had been placed there after reconstruction along with a "Yankee Division" flag and a 48-star American flag.

Megna brought the retired New England flags back to Quincy and presented them to Paul Harold, currently president of the Quincy City Council and Register of Deeds for Norfolk County, in honor of Harold's father Joseph Harold, Sr., a member of the Yankee Division and soldier in the Battle of the Bulge who was awarded The Bronze Star and three Battle Stars as well as a rare Battlefield Commission during his World War II service.

Known as "Mr. Veteran" for his advocacy on behalf of fellow veterans, Harold served as state adjutant for the Massachusetts Disabled American Veterans (DAV) for 43 years and served two years as national adjutant.

He died in 1994 when, while walking to Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, he was struck by an automobile.

The flags are now housed in the Joseph Harold, Sr., Veterans Archives of the Quincy Historical Society.

According to YD Association records, the division was organized in 1917 in Boston from units of the New England states and a quota of National Army troops from Camp Devens, Massachusetts.

During WW II the division served with the 3rd Army under the command of General George Patton.

TREATMENT OPTIONS FOR BUNION-ARTHRITIS COMBO

A bunion typically occurs way to align the joint and lessen pain.

(MTP) joint, which connects the first metatarsal and the big toe's proximal phalanx bone. This location is also a common site for arthritis, which results when the cartilage covering a joint wears down. Most bunions are accompanied by some arthritis, due to the joint's misalignment. The bunion-arthritis combination can impede mobility and cause pain, and treatment can be confusing. The patient can begin by wearing shoes with a wider toe and shorter heel. Anti-inflammatory medications can also help. If not, bunion surgery may correct the deformity and alleviate symptoms. For more severe cases, fusion surgery for the arthritis may be the best

There is no reason to suffer and continue to experience foot discomfort from bunions and the other myriad conditions that can affect your feet. Our approach is gentle and caring and we welcome your call for family foot care. Patients can be seen at our main office in Randolph at 999 North Main Street, as well as at the Quincy Medical Center, where we offer free valet parking. All appointments are scheduled by calling 781-986-3668. I am also affiliated with the Brockton, Milton, Good Samaritan and Carney Hospitals.

P.S. Fusion surgery may limit mobility in the big toe, which could affect shoe selection.

ters in with Merrymount Park which, like Pageant Field, is protected by an Adams Family deed restriction barring development.

Not so with the Nike site, argued Cedrone, who said she planned to distribute copies of a March 27 letter from City Solicitor Stephen McGrath saying as much to commission members at their Tuesday night meeting.

According to Cedrone, the property referred to as the Nike Site was originally part of Merrymount Park, and subject to Adams Family deed restrictions, but those restrictions were removed when the federal government took over the property for military use.

When the parcel was deeded back to the city, Cedrone said, the federal government placed its own restrictions on it, but removal of those restrictions would be the decision of the Secretary of the Interior.

McGrath's March 27 letter, a response to a March 20 memo from Cedrone, says that "the Secretary of the Interior may dispose of public lands to a municipality for any public or recreational purpose. This was what occurred when the Nike site was deeded to the City ... In sum, the restriction may be removed from the deed after an application to the Secretary and the Secretary consents to the change in use."

Koch, who called removal of the deed restriction by the Secretary of the Interior "improbable," countered that the land was not removed from its earlier restrictions and indeed had two sets of restrictions, one by the Adams Family and one by the federal government. "So it's an even tougher stretch," Koch said.

Koch further protested that taking the 6.6 acre parcel would be the start of the park's downfall, given that discussions over land needs for the new high school have ranged between 10 and 20 acres. "In all reality, if they take the complex, they're taking Adams and Pageant Fields as well."

The Nike site, said Koch, was taken in the 1950's by the federal government but, as the Cold War waned, became less and less vital to the nation's defense.

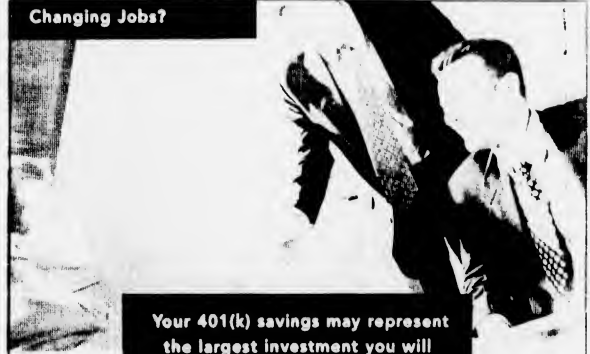

In the 1970's, Koch's father Richard worked with then Congressman James Burke and Adams descendant Thomas Boylston Adams in reclaiming the land for the city, which finally happened in 1978 with Congressman Brian Donnelly.

"The land is deeded (by the Secretary of the Interior) for park and recreational purposes in perpetuity," Koch said.

SPRING CAR CARE

Is Your Automobile Ready For Summer?

(N) Spring is one of the prime times for automobile maintenance. That first wash and wax on a warm Sunday afternoon is liberating. Winter's gloom (to say nothing of grit and road salt) is literally washed away. Store the snow shovel, gloves and heavy boots until next season. Surely summer can't be far away.

Some preparation now will help ensure that your summer driving plans go as smoothly as your envision them. The experts at the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE) offer the following tips on getting your vehicle ready for summer:

- Read the owner's manual and follow the recommended service schedules.
- Have hard starts, rough idling, stalling, etc., corrected before the hot weather arrives.

- Flush and refill the cooling system (radiator) according to the service manual's recommendations. The level, condition and concentration of the coolant should be checked periodically. (Be sure to let the engine cool down before removing the radiator cap.)

- If you are not a do-it-yourselfer, look for repair facilities that employ ASE-certified automotive technicians.
- The tightness and condition of belts, clamps and hoses should be checked by a qualifying professional.

- Have a marginally operating air conditioner system serviced by a qualified auto technician.

- Change the oil and filter as specified in the owner's manual. (Be sure to properly dispose used oil.)

- Replace other filters (air, fuel, PCV, etc.) as recommended.

- Check the condition of tires, including the spare. Let tires "cool down" before checking air pressure.

- Inspect all lights and bulbs; replace burned out bulbs.

- Replace worn wiper blades. Keep plenty of washer solvent on hand to combat summer's dust and insects.

For a free brochure with summertime automotive tips, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-sized envelope to: ASE Summer Brochure, Dept. NU-301, 13505 Dulles Technology Drive, Suite 2, Herndon, VA 20171-3421.

ASE was founded in 1972 as a non-profit, independent organization dedicated to improving the quality of automotive service and repair through the voluntary testing and certification of automotive technicians. ASE-certified technicians wear blue and white ASE shoulder insignia and carry credentials listing their exact area(s) of certification. Their employers often display the blue and white ASE sign.

For more information visit www.asecert.org.

Auto Advice

(N) Every driver should perform several easy safety checks before any trip and follow some important rules. For driving safety tips, log on to www.castrolusa.com and "Ask the Expert."

Increasingly, automotive repair and service is becoming a high-tech profession, according to the officials with the non-profit National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE). For a free brochure with information about certified automotive technicians, visit www.asecert.org.

Quincy Bantam A's Aim To Light-Up Atlanta

Undefeated Ice Hockey Team To Compete For National Championship

The Quincy Youth Hockey Bantam A team recently earned a 2-1 victory over Charlestown to win the Greater Boston League championship and finish with an undefeated season.

Quincy now heads to Atlanta, Ga., April 3 to compete in the National Championships.

Quincy finished the season with a 28-0-2 record, as it also captured the District 3 and State championships. The second-year players on the team have not lost a game since December 1999 — a stretch of over 40 games.

Quincy got on the board first with an unassisted, short-handed goal by Matt Grazioso, Charlestown scored the equalizer later in the first period. Late in the middle frame, Matt Germain netted the game-winner with an assist from Grazioso.

The defense turned it up a notch and standout goaltender Nick Manning came up with a game-saving glove save late in the third. A strong team defensive effort contributed to the win.

In Atlanta, Quincy's first opponent will be The Afton Americans from St. Louis, Mo. It will then play the host team, Atlanta Fire, representing the Southern district, and move on to play the New York State champion.

The quarterfinals will begin Saturday, April 6 with the top four teams in the

Quincy Youth Hockey thanks team sponsor Quincy Rotary Club for all of its support, and would also like to thank everyone who made a donation to help defray the cost to send the team to Atlanta.

Senior Women Advance To Nat'l Tourney

The Quincy Youth Hockey senior women's team recently captured the Massachusetts State Championship held in Concord.

The team will now advance to the National Tournament to be held in Minneapolis, Minn., in April. It is looking for any sponsors or donations to help defray the cost.

If you would like to support the women's team, make checks payable to Quincy Youth Hockey, c/o Christine Barrett, 17 Clifton St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Crime Prevention Tips At ATMs

Keeping Your ATM Card Secure

1. Treat your ATM card like cash. Always keep your card in a safe place. It's a good idea to store your card in the card sleeve you received from the bank. The sleeve protects the card's magnetic strip and helps ensure that the card functions.

2. Keep your "secret code" a secret. Your ATM card will only work with your personal identification number or PIN. Memorize your code. Never write it on your card or store it with the card. Never tell your code to anyone. And never let someone else enter your code for you.

3. Do not give out any information about your ATM card over the telephone. No one needs to know your secret code, not even your financial institution.

4. Report a lost or stolen card at once. Even though your ATM card cannot be used without your secret code, promptly report a lost or stolen card. You will be issued another card promptly.

5. Check your receipts against your monthly statement to guard against ATM fraud. You get a receipt every time you make an ATM transaction. Verify each transaction by checking the receipts against your monthly statement.

Helping Children With Special Needs

By CINDY WARREN,
LICSW

If you had a child that had special needs, such as feeding, vision or hearing problems, who could you turn to for help in supporting these needs? If you found your child having difficulty learning to sit up, stand, walk or talk, where could you find a therapist specifically trained to assist your child?

Fortunately, there are places you can turn to for help—they're called early intervention programs, and there is one right here in your own community called Step One Early Intervention.

What Is Step One Early Intervention?

Step One Early Intervention is a program that provides educational and therapeutic services to children from birth to 3 years old. It also helps parents recognize and understand their child's particular developmental needs, and suggests ways to help their child grow.

CINDY WARREN

Those enrolled in an Early Intervention program are families with infants and toddlers who:

- Have feeding, vision or hearing problems.
- Are slow to sit up, stand, walk or talk.
- Have behavior or attention difficulties.
- Were born with a disability or health condition that affects their development.
- Are at risk for delay due to prematurity.
- Are at risk for delay due to family problems such as homelessness, substance abuse or family violence.

The professionals on the Step One Early Intervention team include developmental educators, social workers, psychologists, nurses, music therapists, speech language pathologists, physical and occupational therapists, and teaching assistants.

In addition to the early intervention program, Step One also offers an Integrated Toddler Enrichment Program, which is a developmental play group for children between 18 and 36 months of age. This is open to children enrolled in the Step One Early Intervention program as well as other children in the community. It provides a structured learning environment with many opportunities for children to choose, play and interact with friends.

How Much Does It Cost?

Step One Early Intervention services are provided at no cost to families. They are paid for by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, MassHealth, health insurance companies and health maintenance organizations (HMOs).

Where Do I Go For Services?

The services of Step One Early Intervention are offered in the home, at our center in Quincy and in other community settings such as child care programs.

If you need help understanding and meeting the individual special needs of your child, call the Step One Early Intervention program at (617) 774-1040 for more information.

Cindy Warren, LICSW is the director of Early Childhood Services for Step One Early Intervention, a program of South Shore Mental Health.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

How often do you express a doubt? How often do you have doubts about your abilities or doubts about other people? It is healthy and wise to have doubts at times about certain things, but when doubts become chronic and cloud simple reasoning, then doubting has deteriorated to a sickness of skepticism.

We all know people of poise and serenity; we see them with all the trappings of faith and dignity and we doubt whether these persons ever have a doubt about anything. They seem so sure of themselves. . . . But, they too have doubts at times.

To doubt is only human. This was true from the days of the Psalmists to and through the days of Thomas and is true today. When we find ourselves gripped with uncertainty, we are bound to have doubts. But promiscuous doubting should not be.

Doubts torment us only because we have too little faith. This is true whether it applies to people, science, religion or anything else. Obviously then, the best way to reduce doubts is to increase faith. Sounds simple? It is. . . .

Mosquito Control Project To Begin Application

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that the 2001 larval control program will begin in Quincy on or about April 2.

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project will be conducting larval control applications from early April through October in wetland areas where mosquito larvae breed throughout the season.

The larvicide (treatment of mosquito larvae during aquatic development) is applied through use of backpacks, briquettes, and mist blowers.

The larval control agent used by the project is Bti (Bacillus thuringiensis israelensis).

This is a non-reproducing bacterium which is fatal to mosquito larvae but has little or no impact on other aquatic life.

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project and Quincy Health Department will issue an additional notice in May before early morning residential fogging applications for the control of adult mosquitoes begins.

For further information, contact the NCMP at (781) 762-3681.

Would Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance Work?

City Studies Models For Affordable Housing

By CRAIG SAITERS

Planning Director Richard Meade will submit a preliminary report to Mayor James Sheets by the week of April 16 addressing the possible pros and cons of inclusionary zoning.

The report will study nearby communities, including Boston, which have implemented inclusionary zoning ordinances and what effect, if any, those laws have had on both new affordable housing and new development.

"There are so many variables attached to it (inclusionary zoning), so we need to look at models and see how it works and if it works," Meade told The Sun Tuesday.

Council Wants More Info On Luxury Apartments

Acting in its role as special permit granting authority, the City Council kept open Monday night's public hearing on The Reserve at Marina Bay, a proposed six-story, 108-unit luxury apartment building on Seaport Drive.

Citing primarily traffic concerns as well as the need for the Planning Board to discuss the proposal at its April 11 meeting, council members scheduled the remainder of the meeting for April 17 at 6:45 p.m.

Affordable housing and labor issues were also brought up as concerns during the meeting.

Dennis Harrington, a former city councillor and an attorney for developers Breakwater, LLC, of Quincy, led a presentation on the proposal. The Reserve at Marina Bay, Harrington said, was actually a re-permit of two parcels of land which had been approved by the council in 1999 for Newton Senior Living, which had plans, never realized, to build two senior residences totaling 137 units.

According to Harrington, the new plan combines the two parcels of land to build one six-story building of 108 units on a five-acre site. The residences would be split evenly between one-bedroom and two bedroom apartments and be serviced by 216 parking spaces.

Amenities, such as a pool, were also part of the design, which in-

Municipal Elections Sept. 11, Nov. 6

Preliminary elections for the city will take place Tuesday, Sept. 11 and municipal elections will be held Tuesday, Nov. 6.

The City Council Monday night approved the schedule for elections, which affects the offices of mayor, councillors at large, ward councillors, and members of the School Committee.

Polling places in all 30 city precincts will be the same as last year, said City Clerk Joseph Shea. Polls are to be opened at 7 a.m. and closed at 8 p.m.

Although Shea noted concerns over certain polling places — specifically precinct 3 in Ward 1, predict 1 in Ward 4, and precinct 3 in Ward 6 — the 120-day advance notice required for any changes prohibited relocation this year.

"I'm afraid it's too late to do anything this year," said Shea, who added that those sites, and possibly one or two more, would be addressed for the 2002 elections.

Rabies Clinic Saturday At Animal Shelter

The Health Department will hold a Rabies Immunization Clinic, rain or shine, Saturday, April 7, from noon to 3 p.m. at the Quincy Animal Shelter, 56 Broad St., next to the Bryan VFW Post and Father Bill's Place.

The clinic is offered at the minimal cost of $8 for each cat or dog.

Rabies is an infectious disease transmitted through bite wounds mainly to dogs or cats from wildlife such as raccoons, bats, skunks and foxes. It can be transmitted to humans from and exposed cat or dog that has not been immunized.

Rabies is now a permanent fixture among wildlife in Massachusetts but it is estimated that less then 30 percent of the cats and 80 percent of the dogs in the Commonwealth are currently vaccinated.

Vaccinating your dog or cat and keeping your pets up to date on their rabies shots is the best way of keeping the disease from entering your home.

THE CAPTAIN BENJAMIN BEALE HOUSE

Junior League Fundraiser There April 21-May 29

Historic Beale House To Be Redecorated For Adams Historical Park

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board issued a special 30-day all alcoholic license Tuesday to the Junior League of Boston 2001 Decorator's Show House for a fundraising event supporting charitable contributions in the greater Boston community.

Boston's top designers will showcase the latest in interior design and home decor and refurbish about 21 rooms at the historic Beale Estate on Adams St., adjacent to the Adams Mansion. It is part of the Adams National Historical Park, and when completed it will ultimately house the business offices of the National Park Service of Quincy. The Visitor's Center of the National Park Service will remain at the Presidents Place.

The license is pending that all regulations from the Fire, Health and Building Departments be adhered to.

Captain Beale of Squantum a skilled naval officer, businessman and political figure had the Beale Estate built between 1790 and 1792.

The Beales had social connections with the Adams family as well as political and business connections. They lived in the house for 150 years and maintained it as originally built.

The National Park Service purchased the estate in the 1970s to protect it and the Adams' properties from the threat of development. They have agreed to the use of the Beale House for the 2001 Junior League.

According to Pam Odeen-Lodato of the Junior League, starting on April 21 through May 29, there will be a large tent in front of the estate, a small boutique selling home decorating items, and food catered by Gourmet Caterer's of Boston.

Walter White, director of inspection services told Odeen-Lodato to apply for a building permit for the tent.

Decorating of the rooms will include painting, wall papering, furnishings and drapes...but there are just on loan. After the Park Service moves their business offices there, they will have to provide their own furnishings according to Odeen-Lodato.

The public will be invited from May 5 through May 25 Tuesday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m. On Saturdays it will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and on Sundays from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. It will be closed on Mondays.

Although Board Chairman Joseph Shea called the project a "great event" and "exciting" he said he feared a parking problem that the tours will create. After suggestions by board members to park at the new Marriott at Crown Colony with a shuttle bus or the old Shaw's on Quincy Ave., Odeen-Lodato said she inquired at both areas and received negative answers.

Shea said the board plans to meet with Jack Gillon, traffic engineer.

Managers from the Marriott said it would still be under construction, hoping to open by May 15, while Stuart Steele of the Quincy Municipal Credit Union said the property at Shaw's is probably getting ready to be under construction at that time for the new credit union. He also mentioned the issue of liability.

Odeen-Lodato said she will urge customers on the weekends when she expects the bulk of the crowd, to park at the T station on Burgin Parkway.

The board will meet April 17 to finalize the event.

Tickets for the estate tour are $20 prior to May 5 and $25 May 5 and after.

The cost of private tours and group sales is $50 per person.

For more information on arranging a group tour, call 617-422-1907.

Durkin Resolve Seeks More Tree Plantings

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin introduced a successful resolution at Monday night's City Council meeting which calls for additional tree plantings throughout the city.

Durkin said he agreed with Mayor James Sheets that the city needed to reduce expenses in each department but added that "the relatively minor cost of the funding needed for tree plantings is a worthwhile and non-recurring expenditure."

Eatery's Request For Beer, Wine License Continued By Board

By MARIE D'OLIMIO

A request from Charles S. Debreczeni, owner of Anna's Hungarian Kitchen, 258 Willard St. for a beer and wine license was continued until April 17 or May 1.

Chairman Joseph Shea read a letter from Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico who said he opposed the license.

Debreczeni said he tried in vain for more than two months to reach D'Amico.

He said when he finally heard from D'Amico, he had nothing but "negative input" with about four abutters. Debreczeni said he thought it was "illogical" that no one was in favor since he had a petition signed by 16 persons in favor of the beer and wine.

In fact, he told the board that because he serves food on the "spicy side" patrons have been asking him why he doesn't serve beer or wine.

Bruce Wood, owner of the building said when Debreczeni signed the lease, it was only for breakfast and lunch, and said he was opposed to a beer and wine license because the eateries formerly "The Egg & I" and "Depot Diner" were traditional breakfast and lunch restaurants.

However, Debreczeni disputed Wood's statement and showed the board the lease which stated he could serve breakfast, lunch and suppers.

Promising to only serve beer and wine with meals, he said he would have no bar and would cut down the number of seats to store some of the vases of beer and wine.

Marlin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Professional and Business Center Association said although not disputing between landlord and tenant, she said in order for Debreczeni to compete with other small restaurants, he should be allowed to serve the proper beverage, if he is going to grow successfully. She said it was "necessary and vital" to his business.

Police K-9 Unit Dogs Get Bullet Proof Vests

Three K-9 police dogs from Quincy and one from Braintree received the ultimate in protective gear the other day --- bullet proof vests.

The $650, lightweight K-9 Bullet/stab protective vests were presented at the Police Academy in the Quincy Police Department. Mayor James Sheets accepted them on behalf of the city.

The vests, which are made of the same materials as the vests worn by police officers, were donated by local sponsors in conjunction with the non-profit Massachusetts Vest-a-Dog, which plans to equip all K-9 units in the state.

The vest will not only protect their wearers from bullets and knives but also from blunt trauma, a more common K-9 injury. A total of 73 of the state's 235 K-9 dogs are now equipped with protective vests.

Wal-Mart of Quincy doated two vests, one for Quincy and one for Braintree; Victor and Octavio Carvalho, owners of several Dunkin' Donuts franchises, and the Clasby family of Milton, each donated a vest to Quincy.

K-9 dogs receiving the vests were:

Licka, a 9-year-old Belgian Malinois, partnered with 30-year Quincy Officer

Thomas Connors.

Janus, a 5-year-old German Shepherd, partnered with 22-year Quincy Officer Richard Churchill.

Bae, a 3-year-old German Shepherd, partnered with 13-year Quincy Officer Scott Smith.

Rex, partnered with Braintree Officer Tim Cahoon.

Quincy New Headquarters For State Democrats?

Having decided to relocate its offices outside of Boston, the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee has narrowed its choice of potential headquarters to two: Quincy and Medford.

Monday night, City Councillors asked that that short list be made even shorter, with the "City of Presidents" the obvious choice.

A unanimously approved resolve authored by Council President Paul Harold urged the Democratic State Committee and its chairman, South Shore resident Philip Johnston, to relocate their headquarters to downtown Quincy.

The resolve cited the many Boston businesses which have relocated to Quincy because of reduced rental costs as well as easy access to highways, public transportation, and parking

The resolve also made note that Quincy "has been a Democratic stronghold since 1960" and that John Quincy Adams, although he pre-dated existing political parties, is "recognized as one of the founding fathers of the modern day Democratic Party."

An official invitation from both the City Council and Mayor James Sheets will be sent to the Democratic State Committee

Don't Blame The QHS Siting Committee

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The problems associated with the site of the new high school are not the fault of the Siting Committee, but the task the committee was given. The decision to lock in Central Middle School to the Coddington Street site and having no discussions on whether the Quincy School System may need only one high school in my opinion was a mistake.

The committee was given directions that did not take the system as a whole into account. The restrictions that were given did not allow for the discussion of other sites. The committee was given the task of finding a site for the new high school, not the task of finding a site for the new high school.

The same ideas as I'm sure many people have, that may or may not be viable, although because of the committee's guidelines they were not allowed to address these other ideas or options. If the committee had the ability to look at the Quincy School as a whole the committee would have had the opportunity to discuss all ideas and other alternatives regarding the future of the Quincy Public Schools and we may not be limited to the sites we are left with.

This committee could have been the perfect place to have such a dialogue.

I hope that the final decision will be made to benefit all the students of the City of Quincy.

A Vote For George

If Quincy had a Hometown Hero election, who would get your vote?
How about George Burke?

Burke has been that -- a hero -- in the eyes of many Quincy residents since he saved the historic Colonel John Quincy tankard in January.

But there are a few other things he has done with much less public awareness that would pile up some votes, too.

BU RKE

But first, that 234 year old tankard which was one of 11 pieces of colonial silver auctioned off in New York by United First Parish Church to pay for needed repairs to the church building.

The tankard, crafted in 1767, was bequeathed to the church by Colonel Quincy, grandfather of Abigail Adams and great-grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

He's also the man after whom Quincy is named.

And the reason we pronounce it Quin-zee and not Quin-see. Because he pronounced his name that way.

The 11 pieces of silver went on the auction block at Sotheby's in New York in January. Burke, after reading a Quincy Sun article describing the pieces, zeroed in on the Colonel Quincy Tankard.

The tankard was listed in the auction catalogue at $30,000 to $50,000.

Burke got on the phone in his office and started bidding. Someone else obviously wanted the tankard, too. Before what turned into a bidding war was over, Burke shelled out $160,000 for it.

But it cost him more than that. There was a $21,000 commission to Sotheby's and $9,087.50 in New York state taxes. Plus insurance and other expenses. Final price tag was close to $200,000.

"But it was well worth it," says Burke who has a deep affection for Quincy, having served as a city councilor, state representative and Norfolk County district attorney and is now one of the city's most successful and well known practicing attorneys.

"This tankard is an important and direct link to Quincy's history. It belongs here. And now it is going to stay here," he says.

Together, the 11 pieces of silver brought in $2.7 million, considerably more than expected. But the Quincy tankard, thanks to Burke, was the only piece that came back home.

Burke so far has allowed it to go on display twice. First in the window of The Quincy Sun in February and at the Quincy Historical Society last weekend. Under police security by Mayor James Sheets who is so pleased the tankard is back in Quincy that he no doubt would give Burke a hero vote.

Typical reaction at both displays:
"Isn't it wonderful what George did!..." "Imagine being willing to spend all that money to save a part of Quincy's history!..." "In my book, he should be commended." Etc.

Burke would like to have the tankard shown to students in all the classes in Quincy schools and is working on the planning for that with School Supt. Eugene Creedon and Sheets.

A permanent display site for the tankard has yet to be determined. Sheets suggests the Quincy Room in the new addition to the Thomas Crang Public Library.

"I just want to be sure that whatever site is finally selected, it is a well secure place and one where the most people can easily get to see it," says Burke.

Meanwhile the tankard is in the custody of Sheets who keeps it safely tucked away in a vault between displays.

Saving the tankard is probably Burke's most publicized community good deed.

But he has been doing a few other nice things quietly down through the years.

For example, he paid for the installation of the lighting at the Fenno St. tennis and basketball courts.

And gifted a fitness center at Quincy High School where he was a member of the class of 1950. He also donated a basketball court at the South Shore YMCA. And picked up the tab for renovations to St. Ann's School which reportedly ran in the neighborhood of $150,000. He also sponsors youth basketball, hockey and soccer teams.

And, again this year, he is funding six more $1,000 scholarships to Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates who will be attending his alma mater, the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. This will bring his scholarship total to $55,000 -- $1,000 each to 55 QHS and NQHS grads going on to UMass.

They call him "Trigger" at UMass where he was a high scoring big basketball star in the 1950s as Julius Irving who followed him there. The pair wore the same jersey No. 32 which has been retired in their honor. Two No. 32s hang from the rafters in the Mullins Center.

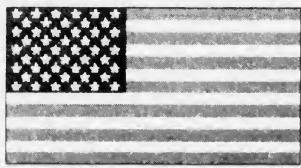

Burke not only was named to the UMass Sports Hall of Fame, but the Hall of Fame was named for him.

He is also in the Quincy High School Hall of Fame. And the third such honor is coming up. He will be inducted into the Thayer Academy Sports Hall of Fame Saturday, May 19 during Reunion Weekend.

He did a post graduate year there in 1951 and set new basketball records for the school in that short time. Deserving honors.

Now, about that hometown hero...

Original Koch Club Members Sought For 50th Flag Day Parade

The Quincy Flag Day Committee seeks the original members of the Koch Club youth sports organization to participate in the 50th annual Flag Day Parade.

This year's parade will be held Saturday, June 16 at 6:30 p.m.

In recognition of the 50th anniversary of the Flag Day Parade, the committee hopes to contact as many of the original members of the Koch Club as possible to participate as a single marching unit in this year's parade.

The Flag Day Parade was founded in 1952 by Richard Koch. He led his contingent of young people from the Koch Club through Norfolk Downs before conducting a flag-raising ceremony at Cavanaugh Stadium.

Original Koch Club members would be those members of the Koch Club youth sports organization who participated in the inaugural Flag Day Parade in 1952. Original Koch Club members Edward Keohane, William Phelan, and Robert Campbell currently serve on the Flag Day Committee.

Original members of the Koch Club should contact the Flag Day Committee at (617) 376-1254.

Those original members who cannot or do not wish to participate in the parade are still encouraged to contact the committee

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 postcard showing the parsonage of the Swedish Lutheran Church on Cottage Street in Quincy Center. The church, now known as the Faith Lutheran, was across the Square on Granite Street. Cottage Street, which was mostly residential houses, ran from Cottage Avenue to Revere Road through what is now the Hancock parking lot. The parsonage and all the surrounding houses were taken by eminent domain and demolished when the city expanded its off-street parking in 1953. This east-side parking area was named the John Hancock Parking Area in honor of one of Quincy's illustrious sons, the first signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Don't Renovate, Build A New Quincy High School

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I am writing to express my support for the need to build a new Quincy High School. I attended the recent school committee meeting. Listened in dismay as one of the most vocal critics of the new building plan presented her ideas on why renovation is the way to go.

It's just not practical to expect that all of the wonderful programs at QHS will be able to continue if we renovate. Here is a recipe for disaster: have the culinary students take their classes in the biology labs! Or have the auto body students repair their cars in the library. I do not want my child exposed to the dust and construction chaos that will inevitably occur during the renovation process.

Let's hear from the families who have children attending QHS. I believe the majority of these families support the idea of building a new high school, not renovating Quincy High.

Beth Scanlan
Sea Avenue

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The new Quincy High School should not be built at the Department of Public Works site because of potential toxins buried there.

Hasn't the city learned from its mistakes with the former Bethlehem Steel site, or is the city ignoring the concerns of parents and children?

Without using park land, I like the Quincy College site because of its proximity to the "T" and the main library. In addition, the question of renovating the present high school, I don't think, has been fully explored and researched.

The USS Greenville: Who's To Blame?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Several weeks ago on the TV program "The Edge" hosted by Paula Zahn, a congressman stated that then President Clinton authorized 16 civilians, all oilmen, to go aboard the nuclear submarine, USS Greenville.

Since the commander of the navy's pacific submarine fleet, Rear Admiral Albert H. Konetzni, Jr., blames Commander Scott D. Waddle, the skipper, for failure to adequately raise the submarine to its periscope depth and by not confirming sonar contact in the area, Waddle's squadron commander, Capt. Richard L. Snead had, also, gone ahead with the voyage solely for the civilians even though it contradicted policy.

Let's face it, the Secretary of the Navy, at that time, can't be court-martialed, but Clinton's order had to clear him. Waddle, Konetzni, Jr., and Snead should be court-martialed.

Recently, the Board of Inquiry said a petty officer could be to blame. Naturally, the lower man on the totem pole always is to blame.

Quincy's Yesterdays

20,000 Shoppers At Bargain Center's Anniversary Sale

By PAUL HAROLD

Opening day of the Bargain Center's anniversary sale attracted 20,000 shoppers to downtown Quincy, requiring 13 extra policemen to handle the crowds and the traffic. It was the single biggest volume day in the 15 year history of the store.

April 5 - 11

49 Years Ago

Despite the crowds there were no reports of lost children or other difficulties. The police detail was reduced to seven extra men for the remaining days of the sale.

Fifty high school girls were hired to supplement the sales force, totaling 300 for the sale days.

CROSS HARBOR EXPRESSWAY PROMOTED

Rep. Nathaniel Hurwitz of Cohasset promoted a plan to build a cross harbor expressway, connecting Dorchester to Quincy to Weymouth by a series of four bridges. He urged Quincy businessmen to lend their support to the plan that would relieve traffic bottlenecks that have plagued South Shore commuters. The estimated cost of the project was $35 million.

The planned roadway and bridges would begin in Dorchester, crossing the Neponset River north of the existing bridge, cutting across the Squantum causeway and run along Wollaston Beach to Fermo St. From there it would connect by a causeway and bridge to Route 3A in N. Weymouth.

DAY 26 IN BUS STRIKE

The bus strike by Eastern Mass. Street Railway bus drivers was in its 26th day, with a further impasse in sight. Howard Gates, president of the AMT bus drivers' union, inquired what the company would offer in return if the union withdrew its demands of a funded pension plan.

The company's representative said they would renew then offer of a 13-center an hour raise and a two year contract. They would hold firm on their demand that the union accept furloughs of drivers where there was a reduction in service.

QUINCY-ISIS

Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa offered a compromise plan for the new Furnace Brook School. The school committee favored purchasing the Rice estate on Adams St. while the planning board favored the Spinelli land between Adams St. and Furnace Brook Parkway. Della Chiesa suggested that instead of building one big school two smaller schools be constructed, one on the South Central Ave. playground, the other on Faxon property off Carroll's Lane and Whitwell St. . . Robert Ford of West Elm Ave. passed the bar exam. His brother Joseph was also an attorney. . . At Quincy City Hospital a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Theodore DeCristofaro of Mudock Ave. . . The Julia Pollson memorial rooms were dedicated at the Adams Shore Community Church. Rev. Paul Radernacker was pastor. . . Six members of the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church attended the evening broadcast of the Rosary from the residence of Archbishop Richard Cushing. They were John Shaughnessy, Robert Foy, Jr., William Macdonald, Timothy Purcell, Robert Spillane and Francis Leary. . . George McDonald was installed as vice president of the Snug Harbor Association. . . City Solicitor Arthur Burgess finalized papers for the sale of the land adjacent to the Quincy Depot to the city for $60,000. There were plans to use the property for the construction of a new city hall or a bus terminal. . . An estimated 1,000 people attended the music department's program at Quincy High School, featuring a 50-piece band and 155 mixed chorus. Ivar Nelson was music director with Margaret Tuthill as assistant director. . . Winfield Strout was in competition with Abdo Hassan to lease the city-owned land on the Southern Artery next to the police station. The land had been used in the past as a vegetable garden for the city home. . . Dr. Harold Case, president of Boston University, was the main speaker at Thousand Dollar Silver Banquet for the Atlantic Methodist Church. The church was celebrating the 25th anniversary of the church building and the 60th anniversary of the Methodist Society of North Quincy. . . Mrs. David Swartz was the outgoing president of the Quincy B'nai B'rith. . . Atty. Howard Berry presented the Lions Club with a check for $500 for eye research. It was from the estate of the late Episcopal minister, Rev. Walter Smith.

other entrants sufficient time to plan their various units based on the winning theme.

Theme winners ride in the parade, which will be held this year Nov. 25, and receive an appreciation gift from the sponsoring Quincy Festival Committee.

Library Exhibit Details 'The Long Road To Justice'

By CRAIG SALTERS

When discussing the importance of Long Road to Justice: The African American Experience in the Massachusetts Courts, a multimedia exhibition currently on display at the Thomas Crane Public Library, project chairman and state Associate Superior Court Justice Julian Houston points to an exhibit panel listing the state's African American judges and the curious and intentional space between the first entry and the last.

"Seventy-five years," says Justice Houston, referring to the time period between Massachusetts' first full-time African American judge, George Lewis Ruffin in 1883, and its second, Olympic medalist and Quincy resident Edward O. Gourdin in 1958.

Justice Houston served as keynote speaker at Thursday's ceremonies celebrating the library exhibit, which also featured remarks from Mayor James Sheets, Weymouth Mayor Michael Madden, Quincy College President Sean Barry, and First Justice of the Quincy District Court Mark Coven.

"There are moments here that will make your heart soar," Justice Houston told the roughly 150-member audience, which included students from both Quincy and South Quincy High Schools. "And there are moments which will make you hang your head in shame."

As an example of the former, Justice Houston discussed the 1783 court decision in favor of slaves Elizabeth Freeman and Quock Walker, essentially making slavery illegal in Massachusetts almost one hundred years before the Civil War and the Emancipation Proclamation.

As an example of the latter, he noted the Supreme Judicial Court's 1849 decision on Robert v. The School Committee of Boston, which affirmed racial segregation in schools and set a precedent for the "Jim Crow" laws of the South.

Both cases are detailed in the exhibit, which runs until April 23.

Long Road to Justice is being presented by the Justice George Lewis Ruffin Society. It is sponsored jointly by the Quincy District Court, the city of Quincy, the town of Weymouth, and Quincy College and is part of the court's efforts to educate communities on the history of the state's justice system.

The touring exhibit uses historical artifacts, photographs, court records, interactive features, and video footage to chronicle the experience of African Americans in the Massachusetts justice system as it pertains to the issues of slavery, education, and overall inclusion into the justice system.

FIRST JUSTICE MARK COVEN of the Quincy District Court reminded Thursday's audience that discrimination, although greatly reduced, was still a concern in today's judicial process, citing the examples of racial profiling and inequalities in sentencing. "We must constantly re-dedicate ourselves that all men are created equal," Justice Coven said.

"The exhibit is designed to challenge you, make you think, make you re-examine assumptions about the world in which you live, about yourself," Justice Houston said.

Patrons of the exhibit will see numerous displays on the relationship between African Americans and the Massachusetts Courts, including: Anthony Burns, the last fugitive slave returned to slavery from Massachusetts; Justice Ruffin, who earned his living as a barber before becoming the first African American graduate of Harvard Law School in 1869; and Edward W. Brooke, the first African-American elected Massachusetts Attorney General and the first popularly-elected African American senator since the era of Reconstruction.

"Things have changed since 1783, since 1850, but in order to appreciate just how much has changed, we must understand what happened in the past," Justice Houston said.

First Justice Coven, who has made community outreach a priority since coming to Quincy last year, thanked Justice Houston for his remarks and called the exhibit's topic "a critical one."

and one that has not been explained to any of our communities in any specific detail."

Calling discrimination "a very personal experience," Mayor Sheets recalled describing examples of racism from his own life and lamented the "odyssey of shame" of the African American experience which, he said, "has adversely affected the history of this country for many centuries."

Quincy College's Barry, noting the incredible diversity seen every day at the college, praised the exhibit for its educational value.

"This exhibit is a candid discussion that sometimes, in our history, we made mistakes," Barry said. "The key is to learn from those mistakes."

Long Road to Justice will be on display for three weeks at the Thomas Crane Public Library and then continue to travel to courthouses across the Commonwealth, returning to Boston at the United States Courthouse at Fan Pier in July 2002.

The public may view the exhibition during normal library hours: Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Call ahead to confirm availability at (617) 376-1300.

COMMUNITY OUTREACH is one goal of Long Road to Justice, a multimedia exhibit at the Crane Library. Judge Edward Gourdin First Black Superior Court Justice From Quincy

By CRAIG SALTERS

The city of Quincy has more than its fair share of history, with its world-famous granite quarrying and shipbuilding industries and the well-documented accomplishments of the Adams and the Hancock families.

Not as well known, however, are the accomplishments of Quincy resident Edward O. Gourdin (1897-1966), whose story is discussed in detail in Long Road to Justice: The African American Experience in the Massachusetts Courts, a multimedia exhibit currently on display in the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The African American Gourdin, who was born in Florida but raised and educated in Cambridge, distinguished himself in many fields: a graduate of both Harvard College and Harvard Law School, he set a world's record in the running broad jump in 1921, becoming the first athlete to broad jump more than 25 feet. He later won a silver medal in the broad jump in the 1924 Olympic Games in Paris.

During World War II, Gourdin served as a commanding officer of the 372nd Infantry Regiment, one of the Army's African American units. He later retired in 1959 from the Massachusetts National Guard with the rank of brigadier general.

Despite an athletic world's record and the military rank of general, Gourdin's greatest success came in his law career. After serving 15 years as an Assistant United States Attorney, Gourdin was named special justice in the Roxbury District Court and in July of 1958 was appointed by Governor Foster Furcolo to the state's Superior Court, the first African American to hold such a position in Massachusetts.

Gourdin's swearing-in ceremonies were attended by Thurgood Marshall, then chief counsel for the NAACP and later the first African American justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Throughout much of his career, Justice Gourdin lived on 80 Presidents Lane and was described as a "good neighbor," serving as chairman of National Library Week in Quincy in 1965.

Newspaper reports of the day show Gourdin as the guest of honor at the 1962 Bench and Bar Breakfast of the Temple Beth El Men's Club. At the breakfast then Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa praised Justice Gourdin and wife Amalia as "two of Quincy's wonderful citizens, of whom we are all proud" and presented the couple with a history of Quincy.

Justice Gourdin died in Quincy City Hospital in 1966 and funeral ceremonies were held in Christ Church Episcopal. At the time of Gourdin's death, then Mayor James McIntyre said:

"I appeared before Judge Gourdin as an attorney and I found him to be a gentleman, a very thoughtful and very judicious man. His death will be a great loss to the bench and to the city."

Special Tax Relief Available To Storm Disaster Victims

Norfolk County income taxpayers may be eligible for special tax relief from the Internal Revenue Service under a disaster declaration sign by the President covering the snowstorm of March 4 and 5.

"If you had property damaged or lost in an area the President declared eligible for federal disaster assistance, you may be able to get a tax refund due to your unreimbursed loss, from our agency now," said IRS spokesman Peggy Riley.

The counties of Berkshire, Essex, Franklin, Hampshire, Middlesex, Worcester and Norfolk were designated as federal disaster areas by President Bush. Taxpayers who have not yet filed a 2000 tax return can claim the unreimbursed disaster loss on that return. Form 4684, "Casualties and Thefts," must be attached to show how the loss was figured.

Those who have already filed can amend their return by filing a Form 1040X, "Amended U. S. Individual Tax Return." Taxpayers may also wait until they file their 2001 tax return to claim the disaster loss.

"It is important for persons who suffer personal property damage to document the extent of the damage after the disaster," noted Riley. "Photographs and detailed inventories are every helpful."

For more information, call IRS tax assistance at 800-TAX-1040 (800-829-1040).

State Education Board Chairman Visits Wollaston, Squantum Schools

IMPROVED MCAS scores, and the methods behind them, were two of the reasons James Peyser, second from right, chairman of the state Board of Education, paid a visit to the Wollaston Elementary School. Joining Peyser on the tour were, from left: Richard DeRistofaro, assistant superintendent of schools; Principal Elizabeth Bostrom; and Eugene Creedon, superintendent of schools.

STUDENT PROJECTS of the Squantum Elementary School were points of discussion for Board of Education Chairman James Peyser and Squantum Principal Donald Houghton.

JAMES PEYSER, chairman of the state Board of Education, listens to Grade 1 students at the Wollaston Elementary School during a recent visit. Peyser toured both Wollaston and Squantum Elementary schools and met with students, teachers, and administrators in an effort to understand both schools' dramatic improvement on the MCAS.

Dr. DIANE WILLARD (left), Grade 3 teacher at the Squantum Elementary School, and her students are visited by state Board of Education Chairman James Peyser, along with Special Assistant Melanie Winklosky, in recognition of the school's improved MCAS scores.

LINDA BECK, Kindergarten teacher at the Squantum School, wearing an apron made by one of the Squantum School parents, explains the importance of parent involvement and volunteering to state Board of Education Chairman James Peyser. At left is Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon, who said Peyser's visit marks the first such visit by a Board of Education chairman to Quincy in Creedon's 35-year involvement with the school system.

WOLLASTON SCHOOL students respond to questions posed by Grade 1 teacher Judy Burke and James Peyser, chairman of the state Board of Education. Between the 1998 and 2000 MCAS tests the school's scores in both math and science went from the "needs improvement" to the "proficient" category.

MARY ELLEN GEARY, Grade 2 teacher at the Wollaston Elementary School, discusses students' work with James Peyser, chairman of the state Board of Education, during Peyser's recent visit.

Council Thanks DA Keating For 25 Years Of Service

The City Council Monday night unanimously approved a resolve congratulating District Attorney William Keating on his 25th year of public service.

The resolution, authored by City Council President Paul Harold, will be presented to Keating at a testimonial given in his honor by friends, colleagues, and supporters later in the week.

Keating began his public service in 1977 as the state representative from the town of Sharon. He was elected to the state Senate in 1985, representing part of Suffolk, Norfolk, and Bristol Counties during his 13 years in the Senate.

Keating was elected District Attorney for Norfolk County in 1999.

The resolve emphasizes Keating's leadership in the areas of criminal justice, victims' rights, and public safety, noting his acceptance of the John F. Kennedy Library's Daniel H. Fenn award in 1986 and the naming of Keating as "Legislator of the Year" by every major police, veterans, and judicial association in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

RESTORATIONS BY COMPUTER

With CEREC (Chairside Economical Restoration of Esthetic Ceramics) technology, tooth restoration has entered the computer age. This technology utilizes a camera, computer and milling machine to fabricate a precise tooth-colored, single-tooth restoration. CEREC enables the dentist to create everything from veneers to full crown in a single office visit, without impressions, temporaries or second office visits. This is accomplished by using a special camera to take a picture of the damaged tooth, the image of which is then displayed on a screen. The dentist then uses CAD (Computer Aided Design) technology to design a restoration, which is then milled from a ceramic material using CAM (Computer Aided Manufacturing) technology. Within one hour, the patient can enjoy a beautifully restored tooth.

This column on CEREC has been brought to you in the interest of better dental health. We welcome you to the 21st century of modern dentistry and to an unparalleled level of service in your search for a beautiful smile. We hope you will come to share our philosophy that regular dental care is a wise and sound investment in your total health. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule a dental appointment. Act now to keep your teeth for a lifetime. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Because it is so precise, CEREC enables the dentist to salvage more of the patient's tooth when fabricating a restoration.

Alan Cousin Candidate For Ward 3 Seat

Alan H. Cousin of 44 Farrington St., North Quincy, who describes himself as a conservative political activist, announces his candidacy for the City Council Ward 3 seat.

"There are issues we must face and face fairly as a city," Cousin said in making his announcement. "For years we've been hearing about affordable housing. It's an important concern, but we need to do the right things about it, not things that will hurt our community. On the City Council, I will oppose government mandates that can only harm the affordable housing market in Quincy. Yet the streets and sidewalks of Ward 3 are crumbling. On the City Council, I will fight any increases in city spending and property taxes that are not absolutely necessary."

ALAN COUSIN

Cousin, 41, is a 10-year resident of Ward 3. He was born in Boston and grew up in Rockland, graduating from Rockland public schools and Harvard University. He is employed as information systems director at the Italian Home for Children in Jamaica Plain. From 1991 to 1993, Cousin was a full-time regional representative, based in Quincy, for Local 1164 of the American Federation of Government Employees. In 1995, he helped establish the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum Volunteer Association in Quincy, and served as its first secretary-treasurer. Last year he became chairman of the Quincy Ward 3 Republican Committee. He founded and chairs Quincy Citizens Against Rent Control, and is a member of the Small Property Owners' Association and Citizens for Limited Taxation and Government.

Bryan Connolly Candidate For Ward 4 Council Seat

Bryan C. Connolly of Gridley Street will officially announce his candidacy for Ward 4 city councillor Friday, April 6 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Connolly said: "I believe that Ward 4 is ready for a new perspective, one that I want to provide."

"Ward 4 needs leadership with vision. As Ward 4 councillor, I will bring a more proactive than reactive approach to city government. My philosophy is to think long term and see the big picture when addressing issues facing my ward and the city."

"The current approach to traffic in Ward 4 is one issue that needs to be tackled with a broad vision for the community as a whole. When traffic problems are addressed one sign at a time or one intersection at a time, you often create more problems than you solve. Rather than shifting traffic problems from one street to another or one neighborhood to another, I would work to develop a comprehensive plan that addresses traffic in the ward as a whole."

"With thousands of additional cars coming to Ward 4 as a result of High-point and other recently approved development projects in the ward, the traffic situation is only going to get worse. I want to provide a proactive approach to addressing traffic problems that employs a broad vision for all of Ward 4's neighborhoods."

Noting recent increases in tax rates and property assessments in Quincy, Connolly expressed concerns about taxes and finances in the city.

"With a potential economic downturn looming, I want to make sure that the city thinks long term and handles its budgets with a responsible vision for the future of the city and its taxpayers," he said. "I want to make sure that Quincy remains an affordable place to live and raise a family."

Education will also be one of Connolly's main priorities.

"In my mind, nothing is more important to the future of a city than the education of its children," he said. "A top-quality education system not only provides youths the skills they need to succeed in life, but also provides many ancillary benefits to the city and its residents. I will always be a staunch advocate for providing our teachers and principals the tools and resources they need to provide the best education possible."

Having worked for large and small business, a non-profit social service agency, and local government, Connolly said he believes his diverse professional experience would provide a valuable perspective on the City Council. Connolly currently works as director of communications for O'Sullivan & Associates, a Quincy-based government and public affairs firm. He previously served as an external affairs coordinator for Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Boston, an agency that provides services to the poor and to families in need of assistance across Greater Boston.

Before joining Catholic Charities, Connolly worked as a business analyst for Andersen Consulting, a multi-national business consulting firm. Connolly also formerly worked in the public information office at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Connolly credits his education and upbringing for instilling a strong personal commitment to public service. A current student at Boston College Law School, Connolly is a graduate of the University of Notre Dame, Boston College High School and St. Mary School. He graduated cum laude from Notre Dame in 1996 with a B.A. in government. In 1992, he won the Keough Award at B.C. High, an annual award given to the school's top overall graduate from the city of Quincy.

"I believe that my diverse professional experience combined with my education has prepared me well for the challenge of serving Ward 4 through the City Council," Connolly said.

A lifelong resident of Ward 4, Connolly has been active in community service. He currently serves as secretary of the Ward 4 Democratic Committee. He has served as a Thanksgiving food drive coordinator for Catholic Charities and as a director of the Archdiocese of Boston's Central American Hurricane Relief Effort.

Connolly received the Eagle Scout Award in 1991 as a member of Boy Scout Troop 32. He is a member of the Quincy Lodge of Elks and the Greater Quincy Knights of Columbus Council. He is the son of Paul and Patricia Connolly and the brother of Kevin and David Connolly.

John Keenan Announces For Councillor At-Large

John F. Keenan announces he is a candidate for the City Council, seeking one of the three at-large seats.

Keenan, 37, is the financial coordinator for the Norfolk County Advisory board, which oversees county spending for the 28 communities in Norfolk County, including Quincy. He previously served as executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets for nearly four years, starting in 1997.

Keenan resides at 37 Hobomack Road with his wife, Dr. Jeanne Hopkins, and his three children, Christopher, 7, Timothy, 5, and six-month-old Kevin.

In his announcement, Keenan stressed his experience in local government.

"Since being appointed by Mayor McCauley in 1988 as chairperson of the Mayor's Commission on Handicapped Affairs," said Keenan, "I have continuously served the city in various capacities. As a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals, as a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Concourse, and most recently as the Mayor's executive secretary, I have gained unique experience in local government. I am anxious now to put that experience to work as a councillor-at-large."

Keenan said the focus of his efforts as councillor would be on city-wide issues, such as finance, long-term planning and the initiation of programs to ensure the better delivery of essential city services.

"How successful the city is at delivering city services and improving our quality of life depends on how well the city manages its financial resources," Keenan said. "If we keep the city financially solid, and develop and implement well-managed programs, the entire city benefits. The quality of life here in Quincy can keep improving."

A 1982 graduate of North Quincy High School, Keenan attended the Wollaston Elementary School and Central Junior High School.

He entered Harvard University, where he studied government. He graduated from Harvard with honors in 1986, and then attended Suffolk University Law School, graduating in 1989.

As a graduate of the Quincy Public Schools, Keenan said he is committed to providing essential resources and state-of-the-art facilities to teachers and students.

"The role of the City Council relative to education is somewhat limited by statutes and ordinances," he said. "But I feel that the City Council has an obligation to work with the School Committee to provide them with the resources needed to guarantee our students quality education."

Keenan noted he has been a strong proponent of a new Quincy High School, and has advocated for a new building on Coddington Street, calling that site the best available in the city.

"I think the high school issue is one which really highlights the role of the councillor-at-large," Keenan said. "Ultimately, the City Council must ensure that taxpayer dollars are being spent wisely, and that the financial concerns are balanced with the educational needs of the students and teachers."

In an analysis provided to the High School Siting Commission, Keenan estimated that to build the school on the DPW site would cost the city at least $10 million more than to build on the Coddington Street site. "I believe that the Coddington Street site best meets the educational needs of the students and the fiscal obligations of the entire city," he said.

Keenan said he is opposed to siting the new high school on Pageant Field. He was opposed to the use of Faxon Park as a site for the high school as well.

"Park land is limited in this city," said Keenan, "so we should not be taking it for schools when other, more suitable spaces for such uses are available. Parks should not only be preserved, but we should be doing everything we can to improve them as recreational areas for our children, and as quiet walking areas for children, parents and grandparents. We live in an increasingly urban city. Our parks should be protected."

Prior to serving as executive secretary, Keenan was a practicing attorney. He passed the bar in 1989, and concentrated his practice in civil litigation. In 1991-1992 he worked as a public defender at Quincy District Court. He is admitted to practice in all Massachusetts state courts, the Federal District Court for the District of Massachusetts, and the Federal First Circuit Court of Appeals.

Keenan is a member of the Merrymount Association, the Ward 1 Democratic Committee, the Quincy City Club, and the Harvard Club of Quincy. He served as a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee for the Quincy Concourse, as a member of the Board of Directors of Quincy Neighborhood Housing, and served for seven years as a member of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

"Whether you are a young family like mine or seniors like my parents who call Quincy home in retirement, we all want the same things," Keenan said. "We want good schools, clean parks, tree-lined side streets, programs for our children and seniors, vibrant local business communities, police and fire response just seconds away, the efficient delivery of essential services like trash collection and street and sidewalk repair, and reasonable taxes."

"It seems like a tall order, but with a keen eye on finances, sound judgment, a willingness to make tough decisions, and a commitment to quality government, we can have all this, now and for the future. I want to offer my government experience, my energy, and a fresh perspective to help make sure it happens."

Harold Proposes Naming Street To Honor Papile Family

Council President Paul Harold introduced a resolve at Monday night's City Council meeting which would change the name of Atlas St. in Quincy Point to Papile Lane.

If passed, the resolve would also name the intersection of Washington St., Fowler St., Pond St. and Atlas St. in honor of the Papile family.

The resolve was referred to the Ordinance Committee of the City Council and the city's Planning Board.

Harold called the honor a "most appropriate" one for the Papile family, which he called "one of the most remarkable families in the city of Quincy."

Of particular note, Harold said, was the family's distinguished service during World War II.

Raffael and Lucia Papile who came from Torre dei Passeri, Italy and settled on Harkins St. in Quincy Point became the parents of 16 children.

Seven of the sons, William, Albert, Leo, Ralph, Angelo, George, and James, now a city assessor, went off to fight for their country in World War II.

No opposition is expected to the name change, given that Atlas St. is a "paper street" with no residences and that the current name honors no other Quincy individuals or families.

cluded five one-story parking garages at the rear of the site to act as a buffer between the apartments and the area referred to as the Jordan Marsh site.

Affordable housing advocates went on record at the meeting asking councilors to impose an affordable housing component to any potential PUD permit, similar to an affordable housing ordinance currently in Somerville.

Weymouth State's Ann Yeomans, who is also a member of the Quincy chapter of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization, said it was always good to see new housing in the city but urged councilors to impose an affordable housing component "in the spirit of civic duty."

Former City Councilor Michael Cheney, a representative of the South Shore Building Trades Council, spoke in opposition to the proposal, arguing that the developers had not met with the organization to discuss the hiring of union workers for the project, specifically Quincy residents.

Breakwater's Harrington took issue with the statement, saying that a meeting on local hiring had been scheduled for Friday, at Cheney's request, and that the meeting simply hadn't happened yet.

Calling city concerns on traffic — particularly as pertained to East Squantum St. and Hancock St. — "most reasonable," Harrington reiterated comments that developers would agree to possible mitigation on a "fair share" basis.

Joseph Finn Candidate For Councillor-At-Large

Joseph Finn of 15 Williams St., North Quincy, is candidate for city councillor-at-large.

Finn will make his official announcement at a kickoff event Wednesday, April 5, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Fours, Cottage Avenue, Quincy Center.

Finn, 45, is the former director of Father Bill's Place and the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

He is presently executive director of Shelter, Inc., a great Boston non-profit agency that provides services, residential programs and housing for homeless individuals, families and children.

He is an attorney and a member of the Massachusetts Bar. He has an advanced degree in sociology from the New School for Social Research. In 1996, he was awarded an honorary doctor of humane Letters from Bentley College for his application of business and management principles to the problem of homelessness.

Finn notes that he is the only one of the presently announced non-incumbent candidates to have run for councillor-at-large in 1999.

Finn said he ran at that time to stress the need for change and a more planned approach toward the sustainable development of the city.

"I believe that the principles I articulated during the campaign have since been affirmed and that the problems we presently face, increased property taxes, cuts in city budgets, and a perceived decline in basic services such as road and sidewalk repair and educational needs are proof of this," he said. "In this campaign I will again forward the agenda of the working families of Quincy."

Finn and a committee of volunteers have been canvassing the city since November regarding the issues confronting Quincy voters.

"I wanted to be certain that I had some idea of what voters felt the important issues confronting them were," Finn said.

He said he visited well over two-thirds of the city and found the response significant.

"People are concerned about the state of their streets and sidewalks, their increasing property taxes, quality education for their children and the belief that they have not seen the benefits of the so-called recent prosperity. I believe they share my belief that it is time to get back to the basics of city government," he said.

Another issue confronting Quincy, Finn believes, is affordable housing.

"I am pleased that the City Council is deliberating an ordinance to address the problem of affordable housing," he said. "The recent efforts to establish an inclusionary zoning ordinance are long overdue. The unique character of Quincy is being impacted by the fact that the cost of housing has far outpaced salaries. It is a shame when those reared in Quincy, the sons and daughters of Quincy families, need to seek housing elsewhere."

Finn said he hopes that any ordinance will provide both incentives and requirements that will actually produce the much-needed housing.

"In order to establish our goals we need to strike a positive balance between the interests of developers and the needs of the citizens of Quincy. Given my experience and background I look forward to the opportunity to add my expertise to this effort," he said.

Finn is the former chairman of the board of directors of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance and a member of the board of directors of SERVE New England. He is a coach of Quincy Youth Lacrosse.

Finn is married to Dolores McMillan Finn and they have four sons, James Patrick, 9, Conall, 6, Michael, 3, and Keith, 1.

The campaign kickoff will be a family friendly event and children are welcome. Those wishing to attend or seeking more information may contact Joe Finn Campaign Treasurer Sue McCarthy at 617-786-1619.

Adams Historical Site Preps Staff For Heart Health Measures

There were nearly a half dozen non-fatal heart attacks at the Adams National Historical Park last season and, as a result, the staff is now certified in use of the Automated External Defibrillator (AED) and Cardio Pulmonary Resuscitation (CPR).

The training was organized by Occupational Health Services at Quincy Medical Center in response to heightened awareness that treatment in the first few minutes is essential in minimizing the impact of a heart attack.

"We are very pleased to see the staff at the Adams National Historical Park be so proactive in this vital safety initiative," said Christine Cadejan of the Occupational Health Service at QMC.

"Not only does the training benefit employees while at work, but the trained employee is able to react more quickly and with greater knowledge at home and in public places as well. This knowledge saves lives."

Marianne Peak, superintendent at the park, said "there were four or five incidents last season that gave us reason to consider the AED and CPR training when it was suggested by Quincy Medical Center.

"Fortunately, none of those incidents were serious enough to require use of this equipment and or medical technology but nonetheless it was a wake up call; it is important to be prepared."

Cadejan, who is a nurse practitioner, lay people can be trained to use the new AEDs in just a few hours, with a certified trainer and the proper equipment. AEDs have become more affordable and may make sense for even a small company.

First-Time Homebuyer's Workshop April 21

Neighborhood Housing Services, an approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold an accredited and NABH Certified First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in collaboration with Massachusetts Co-Operative Bank Saturday, April 21 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Roche Bros. Supermarket, 100 Falls Blvd., Quincy. Attendance at this workshop is necessary to receive a homebuying certificate which is required by most lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants and other special first time homebuyer financing options.

Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first time buyers through the homebuying process, including down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants, which are available throughout the South Shore area.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. Focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

For more information and to register for the workshop, contact Janice Tucker at (617) 770-2227.

Reverse Mortgage Seminar For Seniors

The Quincy Council on Aging and Neighborhood Housing Services will host a Reverse Mortgage seminar for seniors April 23 at 1 p.m. at the Squantum Gardens Senior Center.

A relatively new kind of reverse mortgage program, the Home Equity Conversion Mortgage (HECM) is available for homeowners over the age of 62.

It is for those who own their home with little or no outstanding mortgage or liens and who agree to attend a free educational session with a government approved counseling agency.

Topic and questions to be discussed at the seminar include:

- What is a Home Equity Conversion Mortgage?
- How is the homeowner and their families protected?

- What are the eligibility requirements?
- How much can I borrow against the value of my house?

For those concerned about the rising costs of independent living, and want to remain in their home for a long time to come, a reverse mortgage may be the solution.

Those attending the free workshop will have the opportunity to ask questions, meet with an approved counselor from Neighborhood Housing Services and a representative from the Bank of New York, one of the leading lenders of Home Equity Conversion Mortgages.

For more information regarding reverse mortgages, contact Debbie Kidd, housing coordinator, Neighborhood Housing Services, at (617) 770-2227, ext. 24.

SPRING CAR CARE

'Intelligent' Tires In The Near Future

By WARREN HOLMES
(NAPS) Andreas Esser knows that more and more American drivers are concerned about the safety and reliability of their tires, with all the attention on the tire industry in recent months.

But Esser and his colleagues at Continental Tire North America (CTNA) are addressing those concerns with new technology that would have been unimaginable even a few short years ago.

"Most people think of tires as nothing more than commodities that enable a vehicle to move," says Esser, vice president, Original Equipment Business Unit and Product Development at CTNA, based in Charlotte, N.C. "In the very near future, they will think of tires as monitors, sensors and communicators that give them critical, safety-related information."

Executives at his company, part of German-based Continental AG, are convinced the tire is one part of the car whose potential has been largely untapped.

The Intelligent Tire

According to Esser, with technology now available and innovations on the way, the tire of the near future will be "intelligent," able to gauge its environment, identify potential problems and then communicate with the driver.

"The tire of the future will be fully integrated into the chassis system of the vehicle, working together with brakes, steering and other components," he says.

Continental engineers have already given the tire a "voice," an electromagnetic mode of communication that conveys important information about acceleration, braking and steering. This "talking tire" is one component of the company's Sidewall Torsion Sensor (SWT) system, which uses magnetized rubber and special sensors to monitor the forces transmitted by a moving tire. The SWT, which has already demonstrated its effectiveness in a prototype car, promises to help drivers achieve better control, detect brake defects and other benefits.

Continental is now working to integrate the SWT into currently available technology developed by Continental-Teves, a leader in brake and chassis engineering: the Electronic Stability Program (ESP), which senses unstable driving conditions and makes corrections automatically. The company anticipates the SWT will be on the market in the U.S. within the next four years.

Will The Flat Tire Be A Thing Of The Past?

An "intelligent tire" is also able to minimize the chances of tire failure. The most frequent cause of tire failure — and a contributor to many accidents — is the gradual loss of air that goes unnoticed by the driver. Two different systems from Continental detect slow leaks of this kind and let the driver know about it.

The Tire Pressure Monitoring System (TPMS) does this with pressure sensors, wireless data transmission and an electronic control unit. The Deflation Detection System (DDS), which is currently available in Europe, relies on sensors integrated into Continental's anti-lock brakes system.

With an eye on the future, researchers at Continental are also exploring ways to make the tire even smarter — including a sensor based on changes in the tread pattern, chemicals that allow the tire itself to adapt to driving conditions and other innovations. For more information on the latest tire technology, check out the company's Web site at www.conti-online.com.

Housing Trust Fund Top Priority For GBIO

Increasing the state's Housing Trust Fund by $25 million is the top priority of the Quincy chapter of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO), which held a meeting recently at United First Parish Church attended by more than two dozen residents.

The additional $25 million would be on top of the annual $20 million presently allocated in the five-year state program, which is designed to facilitate the building, renovating, and preserving of affordable housing.

Increased aid for education and after school programs were also discussed as goals of the organization.

The meeting originally had been intended as a roundtable with Quincy Legislators. Unfortunately, state Sen. Michael Morrissey and state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ronald Mariano, and Stephen Tobin did not attend the meeting, with only Rep. Ayers sending his regrets in a letter asking GBIO members to meet with him in his office.

GBIO member Ann Yeomans joined many members in expressing disappointment in the Quincy Legislative Delegation for not attending the meeting, although she added that the meeting, overall, "went pretty well."

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett of United First Parish Church, a leader in the Quincy GBIO, added that a working dialogue had been established with Mayor James Sheets on the issue of affordable housing and that city discussion on the matter was moving toward consensus.

City Calls For Bids On Replacement Fire Truck

A replacement ladder truck for the Quincy Fire Department has been put out to bid and could be available by early 2002.

Specifications for the new ladder truck, said Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, call for a 100-foot mid-mount aerial truck.

The new ladder truck, Gorman said, is scheduled to replace an existing ladder truck at QFD Headquarters at the Central Fire Station but will be designed so as to fit in any fire station in the city.

Gorman said he expected two or three companies to bid for the job and that cost would be in the range of $600,000, which is the amount already appropriated by the City Council.

Academy Award Nominee Film At First Parish Church

Eight short subjects, the best of the 2001 Boston Underground Film Festival, including an Academy Award nominee, will be shown as part of the South Shore Independent Film Series Thursday, April 12, at 7 p.m. in the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St.

The Oscar nominee for the best animation is "Rejected," a strange comedy about Cable TV's wants in animation.

Other films on the playbill include:

"Atlas Gets a Drink," animation about a monster; "Dog Days," an apocalyptic drama; "The Birth of Independent Film," a comedy about motivation for making indies; "Minotaur," stop action animation inspired by mythology; "Trace," the most abstract of the evening; "White Noise," man and rodent living in harmony; "Zen and the Art of Landscaping," an hysterical look at a dysfunctional family with landscaping issues.

Admission is $5. Combined running time is about 85 minutes. Refreshments will be on sale.

Americans Lack Awareness Of Prostate Condition

Approximately 10 percent of men in the United States are unaware of the existence of prostate cancer, a leading cause of cancer death in men, according to a survey conducted by the American Cancer Society. The survey, which was conducted among men aged 50 and older, found that only 10 percent of men knew that prostate cancer was a real condition. The survey also found that only 10 percent of men knew that prostate cancer was a leading cause of cancer death in men.

There are three kinds of prostatitis: acute bacterial, chronic bacterial, and non-bacterial. Acute bacterial prostatitis comes on suddenly and can have severe symptoms that may require hospitalization, whereas chronic bacterial prostatitis may have no symptoms other than those of a recurring urinary tract infection. Bacterial prostatitis can be treated with antibiotics.

Although prostatitis and prostate cancer can exist at the same time, prostatitis is non-cancerous and there is no evidence that it leads to cancer. Yet 85 percent of survey respondents who considered themselves "knowledgeable" about prostatitis incorrectly believed that prostatitis is an indicator of cancer.

Other survey results include:

- 84 percent of survey respondents had never heard of prostatitis.
- Only 17 percent of those with some knowledge of prostatitis know that about 50 percent of men will have prostatitis in their lifetime.
- 16 percent of those with some knowledge of prostatitis believed (incorrectly) that both men and women can develop prostatitis.

- Women, by a margin of nearly 20 percent, consider themselves either somewhat or very knowledgeable about this exclusively male disease, and

- While 60 percent of those with knowledge of prostatitis know that antibiotics are used to treat prostatitis, many falsely believe that surgery (58 percent) and chemotherapy (39 percent) are appropriate treatments for the condition.

The survey, conducted by Wirthlin Worldwide, was sponsored by the American Foundation of Urologic Disease (AFUD), Bayer Corporation and The Men's Health Network.

"Men's uttering with prostatitis often don't know what hit them," said Tom Bruckman of AFUD. "Our goal is to get men talking about this illness - with their urologists, with their wives, so they can get the best treatment."

To receive a free brochure about prostatitis, its symptoms, diagnostic tests and available treatments, call the Bayer toll-free line at 1-800-206-6300. Consumers can also obtain information on prostatitis via the Internet at www.afud.org or www.menshealthnetwork.org.

Steve Barrett Memorial Blood Drive April 21

The American Red Cross is asking all eligible blood donors in Quincy to give blood Saturday, April 21 when the bloodmobile comes to St. Joseph's Church, 22 Pray St., for the second annual Memorial Blood Drive, a tribute to Steven Barrett.

Born and raised in Quincy, Barrett graduated from Quincy High School in 1995. He was captain of the golf, baseball and hockey teams. He graduated from Westfield State College in 1999 with a criminal justice degree. He was a policeman for the island of Nantucket and was killed in a car accident shortly after working a shift. He was 22.

"This blood drive means a great deal to our family," said Steven's father, Chris Barrett. "I've donated blood for many, many years, and Steven used to donate blood as well. This drive is perfect for Steven's memory because helping people is what Steven was all about."

Last year more than 200 people donated blood in memory of Barrett. This year, 230 are expected. Donor hours are from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

"Only five out of every 100 people give blood, and the number of new donors decreased dramatically last year," said Cathy Pray, director. "First-time donors are urgently needed to replace donors who have moved away or become ineligible to donate."

The best way to give blood for the first time is to come with a friend who is experienced in the donation process. New donors usually find the procedure easy and painless and most will come back regularly to donate.

"The biggest obstacle seems to be overcoming that initial fear," Pray said. "That's why we're counting on our regular donors to help by bringing a friend to this blood drawing."

Most people can give blood through the American Red Cross. Potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, in good health and weight over 110 pounds. In most cases, donors may give if they are on medication, but should know the names of these medications.

For more information call the American Red Cross at 1-800-448-3543. Appointments are preferred. Call Chris Barrett at (617) 471-3743 or Eddie Barkhouse at (617) 1233.

Experienced Presidents

Full Of Optimism

By CHRIS POISSON

If you have been following Quincy athletics since the fall, you must have noticed the senior class' hunger and determination to turn the football and basketball programs around.

The football team played well down the stretch and showed signs of a promising future, while the basketball team finished two games short of the tournament but was one of the most exciting teams to watch in the league.

It's now April, the official start of the baseball season, and although it's still considered a rebuilding year on Coddington Street, there are six seniors on the team that want to win more than a few games.

Co-captains Dave Centrella and John Lupo, Pete Turowski, Mark Robertson, Brad DiMartino and Joe Duffy, who all played football, basketball or both, were on last year's team that went 1-17 — the second straight one-win season for the Presidents. Add newcomers Joe Callahan, Joe Thorley and Matthew McDowell, and the nine-member senior class wants to do some landscaping on the diamond.

"Chemistry has really come a long way with the kids," said head coach Michael Draicchio. "We've had some down years. I think this is a group of seniors that really want to turn this program around."

And the make-over began yesterday (Wednesday) when Quincy opened the season at Hanover at 3:30 p.m. and it will continue today at Randolph at 3:30 p.m. The home opener is next Tuesday against Taunton.

There's optimism on the ballclub this year. Let's face it, when you win one game there's really no place to go but up. Although they're still quite young, there is some experience with 10 returnees.

"We're young but I think we have more experience than we did last year," Draicchio said. "The kids have really worked in the off-season to prepare themselves. Hopefully we can get off to a good start. The league is going to be real tough. I think we can win if we're on. I really do. If everything falls into place, I think we can win."

If the Presidents are going to win, it's going to start with their pitching. The staff is loaded with arms, young and old. Lupo, an honorable mention to the OCL all-star team last season, is the best of the bunch.

"John has put the most time in," Draicchio said. "His heart is with baseball more than the other sports. He's going to be the guy we look at a lot on the mound. There's no pressure on him. I think he realizes that."

There's no pressure because he does have some help. Turowski and sophomore southpaw Rob Muollo and Anthony Boyle will also get their share of innings, while Centrella will come out of the bullpen. Robertson, Thorley, junior Dave Germain and sophomore Craig Keenan are also available.

"There's some good things happening," Draicchio said of the team's pitching.

Defensively, Draicchio is not sure where everyone will play or how solid the team will be because Quincy didn't practice on a field until Monday afternoon. But he did make note of a few players who can flash some leather.

"I can't really predict anything now because we haven't been on a field yet," Draicchio said at last Friday's indoor practice. "We have some guys that can really play, like Centrella, Lupo. The Thorley kid should be able to fill in the spot at middle infield that would really be helpful for us."

"There's a kid that can play," he added about Thorley, who'll start at shortstop. "A couple of years ago when he was a sophomore he was a starting shortstop for Wareham. There's a kid that has some experience."

Duffy will start behind the plate with DiMartino serving as the backup when not playing first base. Turowski could also see time at first. Germain and McDowell are the second basemen, and Lupo and Keenan will be at third. Robertson will see time in the infield and outfield.

The outfielders are Centrella, Turowski, Boyle, Muollo and freshman Matt Germain. Dave's younger brother, McDowell and Callahan can also play out there.

Offensively, the Presidents will be led by Centrella, who made the all-star team last season with his bat and speed. He'll either be the leadoff hitter or bat No. 2. Lupo, who batted over .300 last season, will also be at the top of the order.

"Those two guys are going to be the go-to guys," Draicchio said. "I think Lupo is a kid that is really going to have a great season for us, not only pitching-wise, but defensively and at the plate. "Dave is a leadoff hitter. It's a possibility he'll be there again. He stole a lot of bases last year and didn't get caught once."

Thorley, who Draicchio described as a hitter with "incredible quick hands," and Turowski can also hit, while Duffy and DiMartino have excellent power. Draicchio also feels Dave Germain has improved from last year.

"I think Germain's a guy that is going to hit the ball," Draicchio said. "As a freshman he was the best hitter at the JV level. I think it was tough for him to step in as a sophomore and have to start last year. But percentage-wise he's on the base just as much as anybody else. He walked more than anybody. He's going to be a guy that's up in the top of the order."

Quincy seems to have some nice things to build on with its offense and pitching, which is good for the future, but for the seniors — in particular the six from last year — the future is now.

"Our goal is to try and get this program moving in the right direction," Draicchio said. "But we can make some noise if everybody is on."

Excited Red Raiders Have High Expectations

Home Opener Wednesday Vs. Brighton

By CHRIS POINSON

It's a new season, a new team, a new coach, and a new set of expectations. The North Quincy Red Raiders are excited to begin their season on Wednesday night at 7:15 p.m. against Brighton at Canton. The team is looking to build on the success of last year's team, which finished as the state runner-up in the Class of 2000 tournament. The team is looking to build on the success of last year's team, which finished as the state runner-up in the Class of 2000 tournament.

North Quincy returns only six players from last year's 12-10 squad that reached the second round of the state tournament, and only three of them were in the starting lineup on Opening Day a year ago.

"I think we're going to have a very good team this year," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "We're very enthusiastic and excited about the season. The team has a lot of high expectations. The only thing is that we have a lot of juniors that are first-year varsity players."

But the Class of 2002 has the potential to be just as good as, if not better than last year's seniors. Led by three-year member Pat Bregoli, the juniors include Neal Gavin, Steve Collyer, Steve Pizzi, John Fidalgo, Charlie Vidoli, Dennis Thomson, Wayne Moynihan, Dan Duggan, John O'Connell and Mike Beetham.

"It's really a high caliber junior class," Taglieri said. "It's a focused group. These guys come and practice hard and do whatever it takes to get ready."

North Quincy hosted Brighton in the season opener Wednesday at 3:15 p.m. and it travels to Canton today to kick off a five-game road trip.

"We have five games on the road in the beginning, so we're going to have to learn to take the show on the road and be prepared and go about our business," Taglieri said. "If we come to play we're going to be a very competitive team. We're looking to make the state tournament. We shoot for the stars. These kids want to win the Old Colony League title."

As it stands now in early April, the stars may need to be aligned for that to happen. But by late May this team could conceivably be a contender.

"There's a lot to be learned and as the season moves on I hope that we're a better club than at the start," Taglieri said.

With the uncertainty of the 13 rookies, the one thing that is certain is senior co-captain Keith Doherty. One of the top players in the OCL, the left hander is no doubt the ace of the pitching staff.

"He's a premiere player in the Old Colony League," Taglieri said. "We're expecting a lot out of him. He's expecting a lot out of him. He's been working very hard, like the rest of the ballplayers. He's in great shape and ready to go. He's the No. 1. When he's ready to take the ball, he'll get the ball."

Last season Doherty joined a pair of seniors, Matt McCann and Rob Celata, in the rotation to form a powerful triad. This year's rotation is similar to the Red Sox's after Doherty (a.k.a. Pedro), who do the Red Raiders have? The answer: O'Connell, Feetham, Pizzi, Collyer and possibly Gavin and senior Bryan Thorton — all newcomers.

If you look up the middle, the pitching staff should benefit from a strong defense. Senior co-captain Chris Lockhead, one of the best defensive players on the squad, returns at shortstop.

"A lot of the times you judge a team up the middle and with Lockhead returning at shortstop that makes it comfortable," Taglieri said.

Doherty will man center field when not on the mound and Fidalgo or senior Vin Tracetti will be behind the plate. Fidalgo is a promising catcher from the JX level and Tracetti is a football player/boomer playing for the first time this spring.

"He's played baseball before but his boxing career kept him out of baseball," Taglieri said. "He's looking to finish his athletic career at North Quincy on a high note. He's a good addition."

Rounding out the rest of the infield are O'Connell and Gavin at first base, Duggan and Thomson at second base, and seniors Chris Doherty, Sean Crowley, Todd White, a newcomer, and Vidoli at third.

Doherty, who plays the hot corner well, is penciled in as the starter, but will miss the first few games with a shoulder injury.

"He's hurt right now," Taglieri said. "He has shoulder problems. He's been working hard to get back. He'll probably miss the first few games. We have guys battling to fill in that spot."

The outfielders are senior Mike Keddy, Feetham, Thorton, Moynihan and Bregoli, who will most likely be the starting right fielder.

Bregoli is the X-factor on the team. A strong defensive player with a lot of speed, Taglieri is counting on him at the plate this year. With two years of varsity experience under his belt, Taglieri believes he can make an impact with his bat, which would be a big boost for the offense.

"He's a tremendous outfielder and has great speed and runs the bases very well, and we're looking for him to step up and hit the ball for us," Taglieri said.

"He's a tremendous outfielder and has great speed and runs the bases very well, and we're looking for him to step up and hit the ball for us," Taglieri said.

The Red Raiders lost a lot of thunder in their lineup due to graduation, but that same lineup was also inconsistent last year. Taglieri doesn't really know yet what kind of offensive team he'll have this season. Keith Doherty is the only proven hitter.

"We certainly did [struggle offensively]," said Taglieri about last year. "All I can say is the kids are working on it. The first time it's of these kids get up, it's going to be their first varsity at-bat."

Although North Quincy is lacking in terms of varsity experience, Taglieri feels the 13 newcomers are talented enough to help get the Red Raiders into the playoffs for the fifth time in six years.

North Quincy Girls' Track Team Takes On Silver Lake Today

Despite winning the Old Colony League Conference championship meet last season, head coach Geoff Hennessy is anything but optimistic about the early going of the North Quincy girls' track team.

"We lost key people to graduation, especially the distance crew, and several didn't return or went out for other sports," Hennessy said. "Several are injured or not eligible academically until next report card. Add the lousy weather on top of that and I can't expect miracles against the league powers Falmouth and Silver Lake, which host us in the first week."

Falmouth Tuesday in the season opener and will take on Silver Lake (today) Thursday at 4 p.m.

The Red Raiders' only home meets are April 25 against Bridgewater-Raynham and May 15 against Quincy.

Junior Allie Facey is recovering from a back injury suffered in the soccer season and is not expected back until after school vacation. Sophomore Erin McFarland is also returning from a back injury.

"We might be a significantly different squad come championship time, but that's how I coach," Hennessy said.

Helping Hennessy this year is new assistant Tom Giannakos. The Milton High School and Boston University graduate is also an assistant girls' soccer coach with Paul Bregoli's tournament-qualifying program. He'll be primarily working with the middle distance crew.

Others assisting on a volunteer basis are Claire Quilty (throwers), Ken Shurtluff (high jump) and Jeremy Gott (sprints). Boys' coaches Peter Chrism and Damien Kellogg will also assist.

"We have lots of adversity on the one hand, but we have a top notch staff and a strong nucleus of kids willing to work hard," Hennessy said. "This is Class A. The Old Colony League, nobody's going to have an easy go of it."

Hennessy feels Falmouth has improved overall with great distance runners. Silver Lake is loaded with depth with over 100 girls.

Bridgewater-Raynham is talented. Barnstable, hot off winning the All-state indoors and the All-state cross country in 1999, has nine stars who can rack up points every where.

"We're not a dual-meet team, never have been, never will be," Hennessy said. "We peak at championship time. That's when it really counts."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARI

Did you know that you can develop nothing that does not exist first of all in your mind? It is your thinking that is your most precious asset. Nothing outside you can possibly effect you and your fortunes as much as what goes on in your mind. What you think affects your actions. Loveable thoughts produce one result.

Thoughts of hate produce the opposite result. It is scientifically true: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Psychiatrists explain a truth wise men have known for thousands of years: Every man is the sum total of his thoughts. What a help if psychiatrists could give their major attention to producing happiness, not curing unhappiness. People turn out to be happy people because of the kind of thinking they have been doing over the years - the thoughts they plant are the thoughts they harvest. Could any parent do his child a greater service than to make sure the right seeds are planted during the planting season? Self-confidence, self-respect, faith, confidence in others, kindness, humility, courage, honesty, love, unselfishness, tolerance, sincerity - are seed-thoughts that will choke out weeds and blossom in their time.

Social Security Trust Funds Gain One More Year Of Solvency

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The Social Security Board of Trustees has released its annual report on the long-term financial health of the Social Security Trust Funds. The 2001 Trustees' Report projects that the Social Security program will remain solvent until 2038 — one year later than reported last year.

"The additional year of solvency is good news," said William A. Halter, Acting Commissioner of Social Security. "However, we should both maintain fiscal discipline and move forward on a bipartisan basis to strengthen Social Security to face the challenges presented by the Baby Boom generation's retirement."

Social Security ran a surplus of $153 billion in 2000 and ended the year with $1,049 trillion in assets. Annual Trust Fund revenues are projected to exceed expenditures until 2016, a year later than estimated in last year's Trustees' report.

"Social Security is the major source of income for two-thirds of older Americans and virtually the only source of income for one-third of older Americans," said Acting Commissioner Halter. "In a real sense, Social Security is the most important income security program in American history. We should utilize this period of Social Security surpluses to fashion the legislative changes necessary to extend the solvency of the system for future generations."

Beginning in 2025, assets of the combined Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and Disability Insurance Trust Funds will be drawn down to pay benefits until the funds are exhausted in 2038. Over the 75-year long-range actuarial period, the projected actuarial balance is a deficit of 1.86 percent of taxable payroll, compared to 1.89 percent projected in 2000.

Based on the most recent experience, the Social Security Trustees made some small adjustments in the demographic and disability assumptions used in last year's report, resulting in the one-year change to the exhaustion date of the combined trust funds. Data accumulated since last year's report indicate that the death rate declined recently at a slower pace than estimated for the 2000 report. An update of disability data resulted in a lower overall rate of disability incidence than was projected in last year's report.

In their 2001 Annual Report to Congress, the Trustees also reported the following:

- The Old-Age and Survivors, and Disability Insurance Trust Funds paid benefits amounting to $407.6 billion in calendar year 2000, and there were 48.4 million beneficiaries on the rolls at the end of the 2000. In 2000, an estimated 154 million people worked in jobs covered by Social Security;

- Income to the combined Trust Funds amounted to $568.4 billion in 2000 and expenditures were $415.1 billion, increasing the assets of the combined funds by $153.3 billion to $1,049.4 billion at the end of 2000;

- Interest earned on the invested assets of the combined Trust Funds was $64.5 billion in 2000, representing an effective annual interest rate of 6.9 percent. The average interest rate on the new securities purchased by the Trust Funds was 6.2 percent; and

- Administrative expenses were $3.8 billion in 2000, or about .6 percent of total income for the year. For OASI, administrative year expenses were about .4 percent of total income for the year.

The Board of Trustees is composed of six members, four of whom serve automatically by virtue of their positions with the federal government: the Secretary of the Treasury, who is the managing Trustee; the Secretary of Labor; the Secretary of Health and Human Services; and the Commissioner of Social Security. The other two members are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate to serve as public representatives: John L. Palmer and Thomas R. Saving.

Security At Walk-Up ATMs, Part II

1. Always observe your surroundings before conducting an ATM transaction. If you are driving to an ATM, park as close as possible to the terminal. Observe the entire area from the safety of your car before getting out. If you see anyone or anything that appears to be suspicious, leave the area at once.

2. If an ATM is obstructed from view or poorly lit, go to another ATM. Report the problem to a financial institution that operates the ATM.

3. When possible, take a companion along when using an ATM, especially at night.

4. Minimize time spent at the ATM by having your card out and ready to use. If the ATM is in use, give the person using the terminal the same privacy you expect. Allow them to move away from the ATM before you approach the terminal.

5. Stand between the ATM and anyone waiting to use the terminal so that others cannot see your secret code or transaction amount. Once you have completed your transaction, take your money, card, and receipt and immediately move away from the terminal.

6. If you see anyone or anything suspicious while conducting a transaction, cancel your transaction and leave immediately.

7. If anyone follows you after making the ATM transaction, go immediately to a crowded, well-lit area and call the police.

If you follow these common sense tips, your chances of being a victim at an ATM will be greatly minimized.

The Assisted Living Option

By CAROL TAYLOR

Assisted living is a housing option for seniors who don't require around-the-clock care of a nursing home, and choose to live in a community where they can maintain their independence, receive assistance with care, and improve their quality of life.

Assisted living offers seniors their own apartments, three meals a day, weekly housekeeping, an emergency call system, availability of 24-hour staff, activities, and some personal care assistance.

Prior to the development of assisted living, the alternative housing option for seniors was care in a nursing home setting. Today, a senior in need of some assistance with the activities of daily living such as dressing, bathing, or a reminder to take medication, can opt to choose a more independent lifestyle in an assisted living environment.

Residents have the option of being as active or as private as they wish. Many seniors choose assisted living communities that are closer to their families so they can enjoy frequent family visits. Seniors who once lived alone and often felt isolated, now enjoy making new friends within the assisted living community. Assisted living is a wonderful option for many seniors. The best way to see if this is an option for you or your loved one is to visit an assisted living community and experience firsthand the benefits of this new option in senior healthcare. For more information, please call the Welch Care Connection at 1-800-698-0304.

Rabies Prevention Tips

Health officials prevent rabies.

- Make sure your dog and doghouse are rabies vaccinated. Unvaccinated dogs and cats in particular are more likely to come in contact with rabid wildlife and therefore pose a greater risk for rabies to their owners.
- Do not feed your pets outdoors as the presence of food could attract wild animals. Never feed wild animals, especially near your home.
- Avoid wild, stray or unfamiliar animals, especially raccoons, skunks, foxes and bats.
- Avoid any animals, domestic or wild, that behave oddly, appear sick or injured or appear unusually frightful. Reports of any odd behavior or animal should be reported to the animal control officer and/or the Health Department.

- Avoid keeping skunks, raccoons or any other wildlife as pets, as no rabies vaccine exists for wildlife species.
- Discourage wild animals from your property by eliminating sources of food and harborage. Garbage should be stored in sturdy, durable covered containers prior to municipal pick-up. Secure your home from nesting wildlife by making sure all potential entry points are in good repair. Hire a professional exterminator to safely remove any nesting bats from your home.
- Avoid touching dead, sick or injured animals, but if you must, be sure to wear heavy gloves and use sticks or other objects to move the animals, thus protecting yourself from direct contact.

• If you are bitten or scratched by an unfamiliar animal, do not try to figure out if the animal is rabid, but immediately wash the wound with soap and water. Then contact your physician, at once, to decide if rabies treatment will be necessary.

Additional information is available by calling the Quincy Health Department at (617) 376-1273 or the Massachusetts Department of Health's Division of Communicable Disease Control at (617) 983-6800.

Sheets said he made the request of Meade during a roundtable discussion with developers, affordable housing advocates, and city officials.

"I asked him (Meade) to create a model of just how an affordable housing ordinance would work in Quincy and to look at other communities," Sheets said.

One key issue, Sheets said, is the balance between ensuring affordable housing for low and moderate income families while keeping developers interested in the city.

"As a result of inclusionary zoning (in the other communities), has there been a change in developer interest?" asked Sheets. "At what point is the inclusionary zoning ordinance a disincentive where a developer says, 'I won't develop in Quincy.' Then everybody loses."

The city has no affordable housing component right now but a proposal currently in the Housing Committee of the City Council would require new developers to set aside 10 percent of new units, or the cash or land equivalent, for affordable housing.

In its current form, the ordinance would apply to all planned unit developments (PUDs) and variances of 10 units or more.

Some, including Quincy members of the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO), have argued that the proposed ordinance as written is too weak and that on-site affordable housing should be mandated.

Meade said the issue of on-site versus off-site affordable housing will be addressed in the study. However, as a personal opinion, Meade said allowing off-site affordable housing gave developers more options and could also add to affordable housing stock in the city.

"I'm of the opinion that if there's a Housing Trust Fund available, the city can purchase a single or a two-family (for affordable housing)," Meade said. "The city doesn't have much space for new development, but we have 38,000 to 39,000 units that could be positioned to make them affordable, either for purchase or rental."

Meade said the report will take a close look at the city of Boston, which recently implemented its own affordable housing regulations, to see what the net effect was on affordable housing stock. "We want to see how many units have been built or made available (since implementation)," said Meade.

In addition to Boston, inclusionary zoning communities to be studied include: Cambridge, Somerville, Newton, Brookline, Lexington, and Ipswich.

According to figures from the Department of Housing and Community Development, which Meade said were roughly six months old, the city has 3,182 eligible 40B units, representing a percentage of 8.46 of the city's total housing stock.

In order to avoid developers seeking a state comprehensive permit, which bypasses local authority in the permitting process, a community must have at least 10 percent affordable housing.

Meade cautioned that the city's percentage of affordable housing may actually shrink slightly, given that eligible 40B units have remained constant while new census figures could show a rise in the total number of units in the city.

GETTING STARTED

If your vehicle will not start with the turn of your ignition key, the problem could be your starter. First, eliminate other potential culprits by turning on your headlights and trying to start your car. If the headlights are observed to dim while doing so, suspect a bad battery or corroded battery terminals. If, however, your battery and battery terminals are in good shape, you should hear the starter solenoid click with each turn of the ignition key to the start position. If, after performing these tests, you are unsure of the problem, and your starter has over 50,000 miles to its credit, consider replacing it along with the starter solenoid, either as preventive maintenance or to correct the problem.

Next time you need work done on any system, bring your car, truck or SUV into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our highly trained, ASE Certified technicians will assure you of a job well done. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. You can trust us to get you back on the road quickly. HINT: The starter turns the engine. If your engine turns over, therefore, the starter is not bad.

CONGRESSMAN TIM ROEMER (left), a sixth-term Democrat from Indiana, visited the Adams Mansion Monday along with Adams family descendant Peter Boylston Adams and Congressman William Delahunt to garner support for a proposed national memorial in Washington, D.C., honoring the contributions of the Adams family. Roemer, a longtime Adams family scholar who is co-sponsoring the bill with Delahunt and Senator Edward Kennedy, took a tour of the mansion along with several other historic sites in the city. In the foreground of this photo, taken in the Stone Library, rests the four books stolen but recovered from the historic site, including the famous Mendi Bible given John Quincy Adams by the freed captives of the Amistad slave ship.

After 5-Hour Council Hearing 'Village' Plan Still A Thorny Issue

By CRAIG SALTERS

Despite a productive and sometimes heated public hearing on the matter before City Councilors Monday night, the issues surrounding a proposed apartment complex in West Quincy are anything but settled.

After hearing nearly five hours of testimony Monday night, the City Council, acting as special permit granting authority, closed the public hearing portion of a P.U.D. permit application for The Village at Quarry Hills, a proposed 324-unit apartment complex in West Quincy next to the Quarry Hills Golf Course.

This gives the council 90 days to make a decision on the controversial proposal, submitted by the Texas-based Finger Cos. and then attorney Dennis Harrington; if no decision is reached, the permit is automatically granted.

Roemer: 'The Time Is Right' Adams Memorial In Washington Gains Momentum

By CRAIG SALTERS

"Monuments, mausoleums, and statues will not be erected to me," predicted John Adams, a founding father and second president of the United States, who for all his achievements knew he was not embraced in the national imagination.

But 200 years later, a movement is afoot to honor not just John Adams but the contributions of the entire Adams family with a suitable memorial in Washington D.C.

The drive to honor Quincy's first family gained momentum Monday when Congressman Tim Roemer, a sixth-term Democrat from Indiana and a devoted student of the Adams family, paid a visit to the Adams Mansion accompanied by Congresswoman William Delahunt, Mayor James Sheets, Weymouth Mayor David Madden, and Peter Boylston Adams, a member of the Adams family.

"I feel like a kid in a candy store," said Roemer after his tour of the mansion. "The National Park Service does a wonderful job explaining a jewel of a story that most Americans don't know anything about."

If Roemer has his way, however, more Americans will know the story of the Adams generations. Last week, Roemer and Delahunt introduced a bill into the House of Representatives

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

A HISTORY LESSON

In our country's earliest days, there were no dentists and many dental problems led to brown, rotting teeth and tooth loss. People had their teeth pulled by a barber or whoever provided the service. Many Americans had lost all their teeth by the time they reached age 20. Native Americans of the time, however, had healthier, white teeth. This can be explained by differences in diets. The Native American diet consisted mostly of meats and vegetables while the European diet contained carbohydrates and sugars. This should serve as a lesson for us today. It supports the dentist's advice to stay away from sweets as much as possible, as well as sticky starches. And, of course, brushing and flossing are key.

We would like to stress the importance of regular dental checkup. Identification of the types of bacteria in the mouth may snap into place in the mouth.

P.S. During the mid-1800s, only the rich could afford false teeth. These were made from ivory pieces attached with gold wire to two gold plates put together with a spring that enabled the teeth to snap into place in the mouth.

Harold Says Quincy Democratic Choice For New Headquarters

Quincy reportedly has won out over Medford as the new home for the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee headquarters.

City Council President Paul Harold told The Quincy Sun Tuesday:

"It is my understanding from the highest sources that Quincy has been selected over Medford, the only other contender still in the running."

Harold, who is Norfolk County Register of Deeds and a Democratic State Committeeman, said, "Barring some unforeseen development, the Massachusetts Democratic Committee is coming to Quincy."

Harold said he sees no unforeseen development coming unless the Massachusetts Democratic Committee should change its mind for some reason and remain in Boston. But he doesn't think that will happen.

The Quincy site is the SAR Building on Granite Street in Quincy Center where three district attorneys, William Delahunt, Jeffrey Locke and William Keating had their Quincy offices. Keating, the current D.A., still has an office in Quincy Center.

"Having the state Democratic Committee located in Quincy would be most prestigious for the city," Harold said.

Harold said the Quincy location is ideal for many reasons including easy access to highways and the MBTA Red Line. It is most convenient, he said.

"And the fact that Quincy is a Democratic stronghold and has been since 1960 makes the city an appropriate home for the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee," he said.

A Harold resolve urging the state committee to relocate to Quincy was unanimously approved by council colleagues at its April 2 meeting.

Official invitations from both the city council and Mayor James Sheets were to be sent to the state committee.

OPINION

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

It's Getting Interesting

There doesn't seem to be any heavyweight challenger willing to stand in the way of Mayor James Sheets as he seeks an historic seventh term this year.

But the city council election picture keeps getting more interesting and should help make up for the lack of a mayoral main bout.

Five challengers have already stepped forward for four of the ward seats.

And there are already three contenders for the council at-large seat Paul Harold is vacating to devote full time to his new duties as Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

A mixture of new and familiar names should bring out a pretty decent vote.

A tip of the hat to the new faces who are putting some zip into this election year:

Doug Gutro and James Mullaney, both making their political debuts as candidates for the Ward 5 council seat now held by Steve Durkin.

Bryan Connolly, another political newcomer, running against Ward 4 incumbent Mike D'Amico.

Alan Cousin, also making his first run, against Patrick McDermott in Ward 3.

John Keenan, Sheets's former executive secretary, isn't exactly a brand new political face as he runs for councillor at-large. But he has only been a candidate once before and that was back in 1987 when he won one of the two nominations for the Ward 5 seat by one vote over Kevin Burke but lost by 250 in the final to Charles "Chuck" Phelan. That's long enough to qualify him as Bruce Ayers in the final.

Mahony, making her first run in 1999 in Ward 6, is giving it another shot this year.

Could get more interesting.

Another ward candidate or two may step in. And there may be a woman candidate yet for council at-large.

ANYWAY, IF YOU'RE thinking of running for anything this year, nomination papers will be available in the Election Department at City Hall, Monday, May 7.

They must be returned by 5 p.m., Tuesday, July 24. You need 50 valid voter signatures city-wide to run for mayor, council at-large or school committee. And 50 for ward council -- all of them in the ward where you are running.

ONE WHO WON'T be picking up nomination papers is former councillor Peter Kolson.

"I won't be running this year," he says. "I'm just going to take a break from the action to take care of a few personal matters."

Kolson served 10 years as Ward 1 councillor, during four of which he was also council president.

He lost out in a bid for a council at-large seat in 1999. Kolson, who has been active both politically and civically in the city for 20 years, says he feels he still has a lot to contribute to the community.

He says he will consider running two years from now. "I'll see what the political picture looks like then. Maybe councillor at-large. Possibly mayor. Or state representative. We'll see how it looks in 2003."

A FUNDRAISER RECEPTION for Frank McCauley, running for re-election as a councillor at-large, is set for Wednesday, April 18.

It will be held from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the Common Market, Willard St. Tickets are $50 per person and can be purchased at the door.

McCAULEY

HE'S KNOWN BY some 65 million people in Britain, Scotland and Ireland but Dr. John Reid managed to quietly slip into Quincy recently virtually unnoticed. Reid is the new Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and was visiting Boston as a speaker at a number of St. Patrick's Day dinners.

Reid's job is to preside over the finalization of the peace talks in Northern Ireland, re-organizing the Ulster police forces and getting the IRA to destroy its weapons. That should keep him busy.

But what was he doing in Quincy that Sunday morning?

He was at Bad Abbots to watch the live telecast of a Scottish soccer match.

SUDDEN THOUGHT: Bet if Alexander Graham Bell was around today, he'd find those 10-digit telephone numbers a pain in the butt, too.

Quincy Flag Day Committee Offering $2,000 Scholarship

The Quincy Flag Day Committee is offering a $2,000 Flag Day scholarship in honor of the 50th anniversary of the Quincy Flag Day Parade.

Any high school senior who lives in Quincy is eligible to participate.

The topic of the essay contest is "Why We Celebrate Flag Day." The essay must be 750 words or less, typed and in English. All essays can be returned to "Quincy Flag Day Essay Contest," c/o One Merrymount Parkway, Quincy 02270. The deadline for submittal of all essays is Friday, May 11 by 4:30 p.m.

A panel of independent judges will be chosen by the Flag Day Committee to review all of the essays.

The prize money for the contest was donated by Ed Keohane, chairman of the Quincy Partnership.

Keohane, the proprietor of Keohane Funeral Home, is a member of the Flag Day Parade Committee and was one of the original participants in the inaugural Flag Day Parade in 1952.

"This scholarship contest hopes to instill in a new generation of Quincy youth a strong sense of patriotism that was instilled in us by the Koch Club and Richard Koch," Keohane said. "I hope this contest helps carry this legacy of patriotism into the new millennium."

The winner of the contest will be invited to read the winning essay during the flag-raising ceremony to be held in conjunction with the Flag Day Parade on Saturday, June 16.

For information on the Flag Day essay contest call 617-376-1254.

READERS FORUM

Hats Off To Atlantic Middle School

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I wanted to thank The Quincy Sun for letting readers know about some recent good news for Atlantic Middle School (Atlantic Middle School Honored by NCTE, March 22).

Five students from last year's eighth grade along with two teachers and myself traveled to New York City on March 16 to receive an award from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association at Columbia University.

The students who edited last year's edition of the Atlantic Middle School's Young Writers' Literary Magazine did a great job. They continued an Atlantic tradition. This was the second year in a row Atlantic students have landed a Silver Crown and the third time the National Council of Teachers of English have given Atlantic its "highest award."

All of Quincy ought to be proud of such an honor. As eighth grade language arts teacher Patricia Dunne, the magazine's advisor, said,

"We are the only middle school in the country Columbia is awarding one to (this year). The kids are excited."

Excited they should be. With all the bad news we keep hearing about schools, this is great news.

I enjoyed going down to New York to watch the former Atlantic students pick up their well-deserved honors. As a substitute teacher at Atlantic, I know this honor is a great one. The students deserve all the credit along with teachers such as Pat Dunne who encourages her students to do the best they can.

The success of the endeavor is the teamwork played by students and teachers. As someone who has been writing since my teen years, I encourage kids to write and express their ideas.

The Young Writers magazine at Atlantic Middle School is one of the very best in the country. I didn't just say that. They said that at Columbia University.

County Government And The Need To Save It?

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

City Council President Paul Harold announced a few weeks ago that he would not seek re-election to the council. Councillor Harold will be missed on the council; over the past five years he has been the one person the citizens of Quincy could count on to ask the tough questions. Paul raised our concerns with the shipyard and the lack of money being put into the project by MHI. Paul has looked at things with the future in mind. Thanks for the years of public service to Quincy.

County governments all over Massachusetts have become insolvent, with many in bankruptcy or no longer supported by the cities and towns of the county. Some cities and towns have voted to dissolve them. Norfolk County provides many services to the City of Quincy.

services that the city could not provide on its own. Councillor Harold, in his announcement, is showing the same dedication that earned him the respect of the voters in Quincy. Paul said that he would work to insure both the short term and long term continuation of Norfolk County, keeping the future in mind in making the decision.

I agree that the county needs Councillor Harold to give a full-time effort and that this commitment is needed in the county government.

and the registry by all that work for the county. To do less will leave county government having to react to problems instead of looking toward the future. Norfolk County needs to remain in good financial shape and those charged with caring for its finances should dedicate their full-time effort to the county, as Paul will do.

I hope as we consider selecting people to serve as Councillor at Large this fall, that we look for the candidates that are pro-active and plan for the future and end the reactive governing of the past years. Candidates that will accept this important and challenging job of guarding our tax dollars and improving the character and quality of our neighborhoods.

Thank you, Paul, for your years of service to Quincy as Councillor At Large and the work on the Ward 1 Committee and your dedication to your new duties in Norfolk County.

Quincy's Yesterdays Polio Shots Scheduled

By PAUL HAROLD

City Health Commissioner Dr. Brooks Ryder announced the schedule for polio shots for school students, following the recent success of the Salk vaccine trials. Quincy students were among the trial participants that showed an 80-90 percent success rate.

Ryder said that there would be a series of two shots and a booster shot administered over a five week period. Under the leadership of Dr. David Karp, 35 doctors volunteered for the project. The Howard Johnson Company donated space in its Dimmock St. meat commissary to store the vaccine.

HIGHEST TAX RATE IN HISTORY

Giorham Nickerson, chairman of the board of assessors, said he would announce the new tax rate in two weeks, estimated at $60; the highest in the city's history. The $8.50 increase over the last year also represented the highest jump in the city's history.

Nickerson said the rate could even go higher, depending on action by the city council on two matters pending. One was a proposed salary increase for hospital employees; the other called for the purchase of the Squantum marshes for recreation use.

'GUN' SCARE IN QUINCY CENTER

What began as a routine questioning of a 16-year-old youth on Granite St. ended in a police chase and manhunt that created turmoil in a busy Quincy Center, just after 7:30 p.m. Police Sgt. Francis Finn and Patrolman Raymond Warrington stopped the youth who fled to the Granite St. rail road bridge where he aimed a gun at Finn, saying "I'll kill you."

Not knowing it was a toy gun, Finn rolled over and fired warning shots in the air. Thinking Finn had been shot, eight patrol cars converged on the spot, with patrolmen Arthur Duffy and Dante Pettinelli first on the scene.

The youth fled to Boston where he turned himself in to police at Station 10. He had earlier in the day escaped from the Boston juvenile court where he was charged with possessing 19 sticks of dynamite.

VIRTUAL VERSUS ACTUAL

While 36% of American Internet surfers have indicated they have visited automobile-related Web sites and 65% said they plan to do so in the next year, dealerships will not suffer in the process. Only 1.6% of Internet users in this country have purchased their vehicles on the Internet, which means they prefer to do their buying in person at the dealership where they can see the vehicle and test drive it. It seems that a recent survey, in fact, shows that consumers give high marks to dealerships. Fully 94% of survey respondents say they are satisfied with manufacturer-appointed dealerships. For now, at least, prospective buyers are using the Internet primarily to compare shop and evaluate vehicles.

HINT: According to the survey mentioned above, about 5% of Internet users say they would consider purchasing a vehicle online in the future.

Finn To Kickoff Council Campaign April 25

Joseph Finn of 15 Williams St., North Quincy, will launch his campaign for city councillor at-large Wednesday, April 25.

He will officially announce his candidacy at a 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. kickoff event at The Fours, Cottage Ave., Quincy Center.

Finn, 45, is the former director of Father Bill's Place and the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

He is presently executive director of Shelter, Inc., a Great Boston non-profit agency that provides services, residential programs and housing for homeless and poor individuals, families and children.

He is an attorney and a member of the Massachusetts Bar. He has an advanced degree in sociology from the New School for Social Research. In 1996, he was awarded an honorary doctor of humane letters from Bentley College for his application of business and management principles to the problem of homelessness.

Finn notes that he is the only one of the presently announced non-incumbent candidates to have run for councillor-at-large in 1999.

Finn said he ran at that time to stress the need for change and a more planned approach toward the sustainable development of the city.

JOSEPH FINN

"I believe that the principles I articulated during the campaign have since been affirmed and that the problems we presently face, increased property taxes, cuts in city budgets, and a perceived decline in basic services such as road and sidewalk repair and educational needs are proof of this," he said. "In this campaign I will again forward the agenda of the working families of Quincy."

Finn and a committee of volunteers have been canvassing the city since November regarding the issues confronting Quincy voters.

"I wanted to be certain that I had some idea of what voters felt the important issues confronting them were," Finn said.

He said he visited well over two-thirds of the city and found the response significant.

"People are concerned about the state of their streets and sidewalks, their increasing property taxes, quality education for their children and the belief that they have not seen the benefits of the so-called recent prosperity. I believe they share my belief that it is time to get back to the basics of city government," he said.

Another issue confronting Quincy, Finn believes, is affordable housing.

"I am pleased that the City Council is deliberating an ordinance to address the problem of affordable housing," he said. "The recent efforts to establish an inclusionary zoning ordinance are long overdue. The unique character of Quincy is being impacted by the fact that the cost of housing has far outpaced salaries. It is a shame when those reared in Quincy, the sons and daughters of Quincy families, need to seek housing elsewhere."

Finn said he hopes that any ordinance will provide both incentives and requirements that will actually produce the much-needed housing.

"In order to establish our goals we need to strike a positive balance between the interests of developers and the needs of the citizens of Quincy. Given my experience and background I look forward to the opportunity to add my expertise to this effort," he said.

Finn is the former chairman of the board of directors of the Massachusetts Housing and Shelter Alliance and a member of the board of directors of SERVE New England. He is a coach of Quincy Youth Lacrosse.

Finn is married to Dolores McMillan Finn and they have four sons, James Patrick, 9, Conall, 6, Michael, 3, and Kevin, 1.

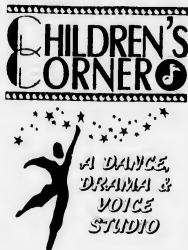

The campaign kick-off will be a family friendly event and children are welcome. Those wishing to attend or seeking more information may contact Joe Finn Campaign Treasurer Sue McCarthy at 617-786-1619.

Here Stratton, a Quincy native who attended North Quincy High, shares a moment with Quincy's Robert Noble, Senior Vice Commander of the Dept. of American Ex-POW's, who served as master of ceremonies for the program.

'A Lot Of People Were A Lot Worse Off Than I Was'

Stratton, Wife Still Aid Former POWs And Families

By TOM HENSHAW

Thirty years ago, Quincy native Dick Stratton was a Navy lieutenant commander, a prisoner of war in the infamous Hanoi Hilton, posed awkwardly in prison stripes by his Vietnamese captors to spread their propaganda to the rest of the world.

The other day, now a retired Navy captain, he was guest speaker at Former POW Recognition Day at the Volpe National Transportation Systems Center in Cambridge, telling interviewers that "my wife had it far worse than I did."

"Every day I knew who the enemy was and that sooner or later he was going to let me go home. My wife didn't know if I was alive or dead."

Meanwhile, his wife, Alice, who is First Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Force Support and Families, was conducting a seminar on "Issues and Concerns of Ex-POW Wives" for the 200 former POWs, friends and relative in attendance.

Stratton retired from the Navy in 1986 after 31 years -- 2,251 days of it spent as a North Vietnamese prisoner -- and he and his wife live in Florida, where he is a clinical social worker and active in the National League of Families of POW/MIAs.

Although he didn't belittle the tortures and trauma of captivity among the North Vietnamese, he had compassion for those fellow veterans who spent time in POW camps in other wars, many of whom were in attendance.

"A lot of people were a lot worse off than I was," he said. "Talk to some of the guys who were prisoners of the Japanese during World War II. Compared to that we were living the life of Riley."

Richard Allen Stratton was a 24-year-old non-graduate of North Quincy High School (he got his diploma later) and a graduate of Georgetown University when he joined the Navy in 1955.

He was flying an A4E "Skyhawk" off the aircraft carrier Ticonderoga on his 27th mission Jan. 4, 1967, seeking to destroy a North Vietnamese ferry, when the chain of events began that led to his nearly six years of captivity.

He couldn't find the ferry and had to settle for four large barges on the same river. As soon as a fired his rockets, began to experience a rough running engine and fire. He suspected debris from his rockets had gotten into the engine.

"I shot myself down," he said wryly.

He turned the plane for departure out to sea; saw he couldn't make it and jumped in his parachute. He was captured almost immediately. Broadcasts from Radio Hanoi confirmed his status as a prisoner of war.

He gained international notice through a photograph, accompanying his "confession" and distributed worldwide by his captors, showing him in prisoner's stripes bowing to a Vietnamese officer.

Stratton was released along with 591 American POWs on March 4, 1973. He was awarded the Silver Star, the Legion of Merit with a V, the Bronze Star with a V, the Air Medal, the Navy Commendation Medal with a V, the Combat Action Ribbon and a Purple Heart as well as the POW medal.

Former POW Recognition Day was organized by POW coordinators from Northampton, Brockton, Boston, Manchester, N.H., and Providence, R.I. It was coordinated at the Volpe Center by Haija Curtis of North Quincy, from the Administrative Service Branch of the Department of Transportation.

Chevy's New Silverado: A Revolutionary Pick-Up

(NAPS) Chevrolet is revolutionizing the pickup truck market with its new 2001 Silverado Heavy Duty (HD) pickup. The new Silverado HD, with the most powerful engine lineup in its class, offers three world class powertrains that offer unparalleled Chevy Truck power and durability. Offering the new Vortec 6000 and 8100 gas engines, as well as a completely new Duramax 6600 diesel V8, the Silverado HD offers consumers the most powerful full-size pickup they can get.

All of the new Silverado HD pickups were validated for an extended operating life of at least 200,000 miles, without any major component failures. The Vortec 6000 and 8100 and the Duramax 6600 are simply the most powerful gas and diesel engines standard or optional on a full-size pickup. That fact did not go unnoticed by MotorTrend Magazine, which voted the Chevrolet Silverado HD the "2001 MotorTrend Truck of the Year."

The Duramax 6600 and Vortec 8100 mate to new, smooth high capacity transmissions, including a standard ZF six-speed manual and the optional Allison 1000 five-speed automatic, with an exclusive grade braking feature. Both have close-ratio gearing, which provides exceptional launch, hill climbing and towing capability and economy.

"We feel that Chevrolet has set a new standard for power, performance and payload capabilities in a full-size pickup with our new series of Silverado Heavy-Duty pickup models," states John Farris, Silverado assistant brand manager.

The power of the new Silverado HD pickups is supplied by three new world-class powertrains:

- The new Duramax 6600 diesel V8 is the most powerful diesel ever in a full-size pickup. The Duramax 6600 is a state-of-the-art, 90 degree, direct injection, overhead valve, four-valve-per-cylinder, turbocharged and intercooled V8. With 300hp, 520 lb-ft of torque, quiet operation and segment-leading acceleration at any load level, the Duramax 6600 provides more power than competing diesels.

- GM's Vortec 8100 big block V8 is equally impressive. Replacing the Vortec 7400, the new big block produces 340 hp and supplies 455 lb-ft of torque. That horsepower and torque is actually more than its V-10 competition. The Vortec 8100 also provides best-in-class gas engine acceleration, major emissions improvements over its predecessor and only requires oil and filter changes for maintenance in its first 100,000 miles of operation.

- The Vortec 6000 V8 is the Silverado HD's standard powerplant. This new Vortec engine replaces the Vortec 5700, and is the most powerful standard engine in its class. With 300 hp and 360 lb-ft of torque, the Vortec 6000 clearly outperforms competitive gasoline V8s, and offers a 3 percent increase in fuel economy over its predecessor.

With the awesome power of these three new engines, combined with tough new frames, advanced suspensions and higher capacity brakes, the Silverado HD pickups provide outstanding payload capacities as well as powerful hauling and trailering capabilities. Each heavy-duty pickup is completely trailer ready with a standard handling and trailering package.

Farris concluded, "With the power, payload and performance capabilities of the new Silverado Heavy-Duty pickup, we now have the most powerful lineup of three-quarter and one-ton pickups and chassis cabs in the industry."

Daffodils: Symbol Of Spring And Hope

JOYCE KULWAHIK of WBZ-TV visited South Suburban Oncology, 700 Congress St., recently to acknowledge the center's efforts in the American Cancer Society's Daffodil Days campaign and to address local cancer patients and survivors. Kulhawik is a three-time cancer survivor and the honorary chairwoman of the Daffodil Days campaign.

DAFFODILS ARE the first flower of spring and the American Cancer Society's flower of hope. Since it began in New England in 1982, Daffodil Days has become one of the American Cancer Society's most popular special events. Jason London Works With Poor In Alabama

Jason London, son of David and Susan London of Quincy traveled to Selma, Ala., during spring break, and worked with underprivileged youth and the poor through the Saint Michael's College "alternative spring break" program.

London is a sophomore journalism major at the college in the Burlington area of Vermont. He graduated from Boston College High School.

London and nine other Saint Michael's College volunteers worked with the Edmundite Southern Missions in Selma and the surrounding communities. He worked in a variety of locations, including a soup kitchen, a clothing center, a learning center and a medical facility. Student volunteers served as teachers in the general education diploma program, and participated in programs at a local library and the Selma Youth Development Center. In addition, they worked on small construction and repair jobs and for Habitat for Humanity, a non-profit organization that builds decent, affordable homes for people in need. London lived with the Edmundite community of priests and lay people, and participated in daily prayer, reflection and general housekeeping duties.

Each year, Saint Michael's College MOVE of fice (Mobilization of Volunteer Effort) coordinates up to 10 student groups that travel to sites across the country to participate in a week of service. This year, instead of heading off to beaches and warm weather, alternative breaks, participants traveled to Hartford, Conn., Immokalee, Fla., New Orleans, La., Selma, Ala., Washington, D.C., and other sites in Kentucky, Texas, Long Island and Haiti.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Good Foods, Bad Foods And The Nutrition Game Plan

By NANCY CLARK
MS, RD

Do you choose your meals from a "Good Food, Bad Food" list? That is, do you eat apples believing they are good for you, but avoid bread because it is supposedly bad for you? Enjoy piles of broccoli (good) but pass on the potatoes (bad)? If so, it's time to think again!

Despite popular belief, the only foods that are bad for you are foods that are not food safe, or foods to which you are allergic. While a bad diet does exist, a bad food does not. That is, a diet including only "good" apples becomes a "bad diet" when the apples displace too many other wholesome foods from your daily intake. Apples in moderation are fine. Apples in excess are not.

Did a good food go bad?

Pasta is an example of a traditionally "good" food. High in carbohydrates and low in fat, pasta was considered a heart-healthy alternative to yet another meat-and-potatoes type meal. In our quest to eat a heart-healthy diet and lower our intake of dietary cholesterol and saturated fat, pasta rose to center stage. In the past few years, however, pasta has been given a bad rap, thanks to the popularity of the high protein fad diets. All of a sudden, carbs have fallen out of favor and have become the fattening enemy.

This new classification of pasta as a "bad" food is inaccurate and misleading. Neither carbohydrates nor pasta is fattening. That is, 100 calories of pasta is no more fattening than 100 calories of broccoli, apple or any other form of carbohydrates. Excess calories of any type of food — carbohydrates, protein, or fat — are fattening. Just as excess calories of pasta can be fattening and hinder your good intentions to lose weight, so can excess calories of tuna, salad or cottage cheese.

Feeding the active life

It's important to include pasta and other carbohydrate-based foods in your daily meals — particularly if you exercise, and most particularly if you will be running the BAA Boston Marathon. That's because the carbs in pasta help fuel your muscles with glycogen (a form of stored carbohydrate). Depleted glycogen stores are associated with muscular fatigue.

That means: 1) dieters who chose primarily turkey breast, egg whites and other high protein foods will lack the fuel they need to enjoy their exercise program; and 2) runners who eat too few carbs are more likely to "hit the wall" during the marathon.

As an active person, every meal you eat should be carbohydrate-based — even if you are on a reducing program. This means choosing cereal for breakfast, sandwiches made with hearty, whole grain breads for lunch, and dinners based on pasta, potato, rice or noodles. By making carbs the foundation of your daily diet, you'll have the energy you need to get through the day, the stamina to enjoy this marathon called life, and the pleasure of eating one of your favorite foods. Plus, by fueling on wholesome meals, you'll be less hungry in the evening — and that's when you can cut out the excess snacks that easily lead to weight problems.

The good nutrition game plan

Eating a variety of foods helps maintain your body's good health. Strive to eat balanced meals that include three different types of food per meal. For example:

- cereal + banana + milk
- bagel + peanut butter + yogurt
- pasta + tomato sauce + extra-lean meat

By eating a small amount of protein with each carbohydrate-based meal, you'll feel satisfied, plus you'll give your body not only the carbs it needs to fuel your muscles but also the nutrients it needs to build, repair and protect your muscles. Eat wisely, fuel well and enjoy your high energy!

Nancy Clark, MS, RD, director of Nutrition Services at Sports Medicine Associates in Brookline, helps active people win with good nutrition. She is author of Nancy Clark's Sports Nutrition Guidebook, Second Edition, and official nutritionist of the BAA Boston Marathon's Ronzoni Pasta Party.

SOCCER INJURIES: PART II

In a previous article, we mentioned that studies appear to show that most injuries related to soccer are not serious. The foot itself is exposed to trauma not only while kicking the ball, but also as two or more players battle for possession of the ball. Indoor soccer, for example, places players in frequent close contact situations against the side boards of the arena. The game is often played in modified hockey rinks. The type of foot injuries that occur include contusions (bruising resulting from blows to the skin and other structures), nail trauma (e.g., subungual hematomas defined as bleeding under the nail), sprains around joints, strains of muscles and tendons and, probably more infrequently, fractures (breaks) of bones such as the phalanges and the metatarsals. Fortunately most of these conditions can be treated satisfactorily with rest (when indicated), physical therapy, anti-inflammatory agents and other modalities. Most players improve quickly and can resume playing. It is important to reiterate that the older athlete, the more serious the injuries and the longer the recuperation periods seem to be.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

Will Receive Honorary Diplomas Aboard USS Salem Monday Girls Who Left High School To Work In Shipyard During WWII To Be Honored

Honorary high school diplomas will be presented Patriots' Day, Monday, April 16 to women who left high school during World War II to work in the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Shipyard in Quincy or Hingham.

A ceremony will be held aboard the USS Salem at the Fore River Shipyard from 10 to 11 a.m.

Among the "Greatest Generation" of teens who left school during the war to help their country were Mary Fisher and Mildred Venet.

As part of a school project, Grade 7 students in the Broad Meadows Middle School were challenged by their teacher Ron Adams to write a letter that would make a difference in the lives of people in their community. After reading in the local newspapers about diplomas awarded to WWII Veteran, Grade 7 student, Mary Bloomer, though of The Home Front and had an idea to "Remember the Ladies." She wrote a letter to Robert Keuther, Principal of Quincy High School, suggesting that the girls who left high schools like Quincy High to work in WWII ship yards like Fore River, be awarded honorary high school diplomas as a token of gratitude for their Home Front service to America from 1942-1945. She telephoned Hank Bradley, Director of Quincy Veterans' Services for advice.

The program Monday will include 14-year old Genevieve Humez-Rousseau who will sing "America the Beautiful". Mayor James Sheets and city dignitaries will offer remarks. Former Quincy High School cheerleading captain, Kerri Piccuito, now in the U.S. Marine Corps, will share insights from numerous interviews she's conducted over the years with WWII female shipbuilders.

Construction of the USS Salem was begun during WWII. Ships like the USS Salem became the new classroom of teens that left high school and signed up as wartime shipbuilders. On Monday, the USS Salem becomes their honorary graduation site as these women come full circle. Today's young Quincy women proudly honor all WWII high school girls who answered their nation's call to duty, helped shorten a costly war and opened gates once closed to women. Former crew members and volunteers and staff of the Salem will participate in this event. The public is welcome to attend this ceremony and help "Remember The Ladies" who were some of our greatest patriots on Patriot's Day, 2001.

QUINCY VISITORS -- City Council President Paul Harold recently hosted a reception at his home for 15 visiting foreign municipal leaders who were in Boston on a U.S. State Department tour. They were made honorary citizens of Quincy and presented with copies of The Quincy Sun's "Historic Quincy" supplement. Daniel Keating, Mayor James Sheets's executive secretary, is shown presenting one of the Honorary Quincy Citizen certificates to Muhammad Hussain Syed, Chief Executive for the city of Karachi in Pakistan while Councillor Harold presents a copy of The Sun supplement to Rosnah Abdul Majid, Executive Counselor in Kuala Lumpur, the capital of Malaysia. Majid was Nieman Fellow at Harvard. The visitors' Boston program was arranged by World Boston.

REAL ESTATE

MHFA Loans: Great Opportunities For First-Time Buyers

By CAROL BULMAN
President

Conway Financial Services
"Every Massachusetts resident should have access to the economic benefits and security that come with owning your own home."

These comments were made recently by Gov. Paul Cellucci in support of the programs offered by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency.

The good news for first-time buyers? That's easy: rates are low and they may qualify for a larger mortgage. But the flip side is that real estate prices continue to climb. Is there relief in sight? Fortunately, yes, there is.

Through innovative lending and federal requirements to get money out to the communities, there are many opportunities for first-time buyers. Many of them offer flexible qualifying standards and lower closing costs. The forerunner of the traditional first-time buyer programs remains the MHFA loan.

Backed by low interest rate bonds and administered through the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the MHFA has been successful in making the American Dream a reality for more than 38,000 families since its inception. The MHFA loan features a low interest, 30-year fixed-rate mortgage, generally as low as one-half of one percent below market rates.

As with most mortgages, the MHFA borrower has the choice of paying two, one or zero points. Of course the rate will reflect the option chosen. Any closing costs associated with the loan will be determined by the lender and can be ascertained up front to allow for accurate comparison shopping.

A first-time homebuyer is defined by MHFA as someone who has no had an ownership interest in a principal residence in the preceding three years. The agency has carved out an exception to this first-time buyer rule for those potential buyers wishing to purchase in areas identified as "federally targeted areas."

These areas include Boston, Chelsea, Everett, Fall River, Lawrence, Lynn, North Adams and Somerville.

The MHFA loan program has certain income and purchase price guidelines. These will vary based upon the area of Massachusetts in which the property is located.

Current guidelines for Greater Boston (these guidelines are subject to change) cap the household income at $68,900 per year for a one- to two-person household.

The price of the home must also fall within a certain range. For the Boston area, the price of the MHFA-financed property cannot exceed $211,000 for a single family, ($237,000 for a two-family, $287,000 for a three-family and $334,000 for a four-unit property.)

It's important to note that other price range limits and income ceilings apply, depending upon the property's location. Call Jack Conway Financial Services and speak to a mortgage specialist to receive further information on the MHFA guidelines.

The MHFA loan has been around for over a decade here in Massachusetts, but it has undergone some great changes in an effort to better serve the state's first-time buyers. The MHFA has a constant supply of mortgage funds available and has worked hard to keep the rate below market and the qualifying standards flexible.

A mortgage specialist will assess a customer's ability to qualify for an MHFA loan and will determine, based on a potential buyer's income, assets, job stability, liabilities and credit mortgage amounts for which they would qualify under this program.

Generally, your monthly housing expenses (mortgage principal, interest, taxes and insurance) should not exceed 30 percent of your gross monthly incomes and your housing expenses plus any monthly long-term debt you may have should not exceed 36 percent of your monthly income.

If you have attended a certified homebuyer education program, your qualifying ratios may go as high as 33 percent for your housing and as much as 38 percent to include your debts.

Even if you have not yet located the home of your dreams, you may begin the process of applying for first-time buyer financing by applying to a pre-approval for an MHFA loan with a participating lender or mortgage broker.

For more information about income financing issues, call Conway Financial Services at (781) 681-9400 or (888) 831-1181.

Quality-Based Home Inspectors

(HIT) — There are many home inspection professional organizations around the country trying to provide credibility for their members. Most of these organizations stress quantity as the determining factor in issuing their designations. When the inspector has completed a given number of inspections, the designation is awarded.

One organization stands out by providing a quality-based designation. Certification by this organization requires the inspector to submit reports for review and critique by the Institute. The reports must show the inspector is reporting at a level commensurate with the ethics and standards put forth by the Institute.

Every year, to renew their certification, inspectors must go through the process by submitting more reports for review. This annual process even involves verification calls to some of the inspector's customers.

The scrutiny these certified inspectors subject themselves to every year is the most rigorous examination to which an inspector may subject his/her reports. Many inspectors appreciate the constructive critique of their reports. These critiques help inspectors maintain quality reporting.

This institute, the Home Inspection Institute of America, Inc., was founded in 1989 to train and certify home inspectors.

The Institute has published "The Standard of Care for the Home Inspection Profession" for use by inspectors and consumers alike.

These standards are available from the Institute for $20.

The reporting system available from the Institute meets or exceeds the requirements of this standard.

A nationally recognized insurance company has recently unveiled a Home Inspection Professional Liability Policy that recognizes the Institute. The policy requires the inspector to comply with the Standard of Care for the Home Inspection Profession. Premium discounts are available to inspectors who are trained, certified and/or using the Institute's reporting system.

Home inspectors from across the U.S. and Canada, from Hawaii to Maine and the U.S. Virgin Islands have attended the six-day, 48-hour Home Inspector Training Program offered at the Institute.

Senior Certified Home Inspectors have maintained certification, without a lapse, for five or more years. These are some very serious home inspectors and are sought out by homebuyers.

To locate a home inspector near you or for more information call 1-203-284-2311.

They Met By Chance On A Train

100 Year-Old Travels From Chicago To Visit Friend

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A friendship that developed on a train ride last year to Chicago between David Pica, 21, of Quincy and 100-year-old Wayne Bender of Chicago resulted in Pica inviting Bender to come here for a visit.

And Bender came in from Chicago by train and was shown the city's historic sites and visited City and Hall and The Quincy Sun.

Last year, Pica was heading to New Mexico to see a friend and had to change to a connecting train in Chicago. Bender was traveling from Boston to Chicago after visiting friends in New Haven, Conn.

About half way in the trip, Bender had an empty seat next to him and summoned Pica to come sit beside him.

Since then they have remained friends and have kept in touch through letters.

Bender was invited to the White House last year and met with former President William Clinton in recognition of his 100th birthday.

He went to City Hall with Pica hoping to meet Mayor James Sheets but the latter was out of the city at the time. But he did get to meet Sheets' executive secretary, Dan Keating.

And he has met Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago.

Bender was born during Teddy Roosevelt's presidency and had no trouble naming each president after that during an interview at The Quincy Sun.

During the first World War he recalled he tried to pass himself off as a 20 year old when he was just 15. But he said the Army told him to "go home and grow up."

During World War II he tried to join again, but he was told he had an "essential job" of making anti-aircraft platforms.

Bender was married and had a son. His wife died in 1938 and Bender said he never remarried but has "lived on her memory." His only son died tragically in a traffic accident at age 16.

Since then, he said he has moved toward religion and now lives in a religious community housing unit. He says he "helps others" and does "Church work."

Bender, who looks and acts a lot younger than his 100 years, says he neither drinks nor smokes and eats four small meals a day. He said coffee is his favorite. For breakfast, he said it's usually eggs, pancakes or oatmeal. For lunch, a cup of soup and a sandwich. And for dinner, it's chops or meat and mashed potatoes. The other meal is a snack of some kind.

Considered by his doctors as "remarkable" Bender said he has survived burial in a coal mine in 1935 when 60 men were rescued and another time when he was hit by a car in 1991 and suffered a broken leg and injured the other. Other than using a cane when walking, he says he's "pretty healthy."

He said after the 1991 accident doctors "almost gave me up" but were "surprised" when he healed in just two months.

Sunday, Pica rented a tuxedo for Bender to wear while visiting the USS Salem. When asked why he wore the tuxedo, Bender said he had promised a friend back in Chicago to have a picture taken wearing one.

Asked about the changes he has seen in his lifetime, he replied that in the last 15 years the one that stands out is the neglect of children. He said in his day problems, especially the drug ones, were very rare.

He said he thinks the government has taken away the privilege of parents raising their children by telling them not to punish or discipline them.

Recalling his chance meeting with Pica on that train in Chicago, Bender said, "God put us together somehow."

After being driven around Quincy by Pica, Bender came to this conclusion: "You have a nice clean town here."

He planned to return home Wednesday — on the train.

Outscore Brighton, Canton 21-1 Red Raiders Hit Road After Impressive Start

By CHRIS POISSON

For the third time in three years, the North Quincy baseball team has traveled on the road to Brighton and Canton.

Varsity pitchers scored them 13 runs last week, behind a 16-run effort from senior Keith Doherty and a sterling pitching performance from junior Mike Feetham, it blew them out by a combined score of 21-1 to start off the 2001 campaign with a 2-0 record.

"It gives us some confidence," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "We've played two non-league games and now we have to gear up for the tough life in the Old Colony League. We're going on the road for four straight games and hopefully we can come out of it in good shape. The guys are anxious for league play to start. The goal is to vie for the league title."

The Red Raiders will find out soon if they're early contenders for the OCL crown as they face the league's top two powerhouses. They played Silver Lake Tuesday and today (Thursday) they battle Taunton at 4 p.m.

Powered behind Doherty's home left arm, North Quincy routed Brighton, 15-0, in the season opener last Wednesday at Adams Field. The co-captain tossed his first career no-no, while punching out 16 and walking just one. He only allowed five balls in the game. Feetham pitched a perfect game. Taglieri said, "Seven strikeouts. Only five balls were put in play against him. He had just one walk, that was the blemish. You could see he was in that groove. You don't say anything. You have your fingers crossed for something special."

Taglieri and the rest of the team certainly had their fingers crossed in the fifth inning when junior center fielder Wayne Moynihan preserved the no-hitter with a sensational diving catch.

Offensively, North Quincy showed patience at the plate as it took advantage of 11 walks and four hit by pitches. "We benefited from their pitchers' wildness," Taglieri said.

The Red Raiders also showed they can hit the ball. In the third inning, they sent 12 men to the plate and scored eight runs to break open a 5-0 game. Senior right fielder Mike Keddy stroke a three-run triple to highlight the offensive frenzy.

Junior left fielder Pat Bregoli was a catalyst as a leadoff hitter, going 2 for 3 with two RBIs, two runs scored and two walks. Moynihan went 1 for 4 with an RBI, a run scored and a walk, and Doherty walked three times, was hit by a pitch and scored two runs.

The next day, Feetham, in his varsity debut, followed up Doherty's no-hitter with an equally impressive outing. The right hander pitched 4 1/3 innings, allowing only two hits and one run while striking out two and walking four. He also picked off a runner at second base.

"Outstanding," Taglieri said of Feetham's first varsity game. "Basically threw strikes. He did get a little tired at the end. He walked a couple of guys. But he did very well. I'm really encouraged with his performance."

Feetham did run out of gas in the fifth inning with North Quincy holding a 6-0 lead. After getting the first out, he yielded a single and the next batter reached on an error. That seemed to rattle the rookie as he walked the next two batters to force in a run.

Taglieri brought in junior Steve Pizzi from the bullpen and the first-year varsity player induced a grounder for a 6-4-3 double play to get out of the jam. Pizzi finished out the game with 2 2/3 innings of no-hit relief.

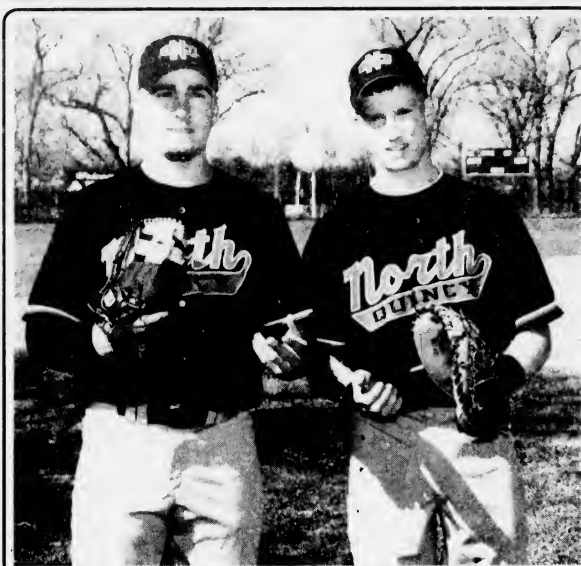

"Steve Pizzi came in and did a superb job," Taglieri said. "He came in and shut them down."

North Quincy showed again that it will be strong defensively. It turned two 6-4-3 double plays, with junior second basemen Dennis Thomson and Dan Duggan each teaming up with senior shortstop Chris Lockhead for a twin-killing.

"We were talking to the team about making routine plays and that's what they're doing," Taglieri said. "Chris Lockhead is playing outstanding at shortstop. Dennis Thomson and Dan Duggan each turned a double play. It's stuff that we work on so it's nice to see it show up in a game."

Bregoli once again set the table at the top of the order with two hits, a walk, three runs scored and a stolen base. Keddy, who batted sixth in the opener, moved up to the No. 2 spot and went 2 for 4 with an RBI and a run scored. "The top of the order is doing very well," Taglieri said. "Pat Bregoli has been getting on base for us. That's what we're looking for out of the leadoff spot. We bumped Mike up to the two spot. He had a couple of hits."

North Quincy held a 1-0 lead in the third inning before it scored three runs. Lockhead, who knocked in the first run with a sac fly, belted a two-run double to left-center. The Red Raiders added two more runs in the fourth for a 6-0 lead.

NQ Pitcher Hurls Gem On Opening Day Keith Doherty No-Hitter A Baseball Masterpiece

Although Keith Doherty didn't get to watch Hideo Nomo's no-hitter against the Baltimore Orioles last Wednesday night (he doesn't have NESN), the North Quincy left-hander certainly knew what Nomo felt like after the final out.

That's because the senior co-captain had just tossed his own no-no hours earlier in North Quincy's season opening, 15-0 win over Brighton at Adams Field.

"Relief," Doherty said after North Quincy's 6-1 win over Canton last Thursday, one day after his first career no-hitter.

Doherty said he realized he was working on a no-hitter after the first or second inning; unfortunately, so did his teammates.

"Everyone kept telling me and that didn't make it any better," Doherty said. "I was like, 'You don't tell the pitcher that. You just don't.' That's like a legendary baseball rule. You just don't do it." About three kids came up to me."

Doherty has pitched no-hitters in Babe Ruth and Little League, but he said, "Those don't count. This is different."

Indeed, his masterpiece not only handed the Red Raiders a win on Opening Day, but it also set the tone for the rest of the season. The staff's ace did what an ace is supposed to do. Well, he did way more than he had to do.

Doherty allowed only five balls in play, while striking out 16 and walking just one, which came in the fifth inning to break up his bid for a pitcher's dream, the perfect game.

"It kind of stunk that I didn't get the perfect game, but I'm not complaining about the no-hitter," Doherty said.

Nor should he. In a pitcher's bid for a no-hitter, there always seems to be that one outstanding defensive play that keeps it intact. Nomo almost lost his in the ninth, but second baseman Mike Lansing saved the day with a lunging backhanded catch on a flare to short center field.

Doherty almost lost it the fourth inning, except junior center fielder Wayne Moynihan decided to act like Jim Edmonds when he robbed a Brighton player with a spectacular grass-surfing catch.

"It was unbelievable," Doherty said. "It was like ESPN SportsCenter. I was like, 'There goes my no-hitter. There it goes. I'll have to settle for a one- or two-hitter.' But he just went full extension, laid out. It was amazing."

Doherty threw about 95 pitches, keeping the opposition off-balance with a mix of fastballs and curves. Although it was his first start of the year, he turned in a herculean performance as he got stronger and stronger as the game went along. He struck out the side in the third, fifth and six innings and fanned eight of the final nine.

"I don't think he would have pitched that long if he didn't have a no-hitter," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "I probably would've got him out of there. The kid had a no-hitter, so what are you going to do."

"He only threw about 95 pitches. That's really not too bad for a kid that is as strong as he is and in as great shape as he is. He could probably go 150. He's all business out there."

Brighton seems to bring the best out of Doherty, who has baffled them the past two seasons. Last year he was on the mound in the 8-0 shutout in the second game of the year.

"We have had blood with them, kinda," Doherty said. "We almost had a bench-clearing brawl when I was a sophomore. There was a play at the plate and one of their kids took out our catcher. And that was at the end of the game and we won. Then the benches cleared and it almost got ugly."

"I don't think he was thinking at all about a couple of years ago," Taglieri said. "Keith has fire against anyone he pitches against."

And Taglieri and his Red Raiders will need that fire to burn the rest of the season.

Pitching, Clutch Hits Power Presidents

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy baseball team won its first — and only — game last year in the season finale.

This year it wasted no time, picking up the first of what it hopes many wins in last Thursday's season opener.

Powered by the senior class, the Presidents showcased their No. 1 pitcher, a vastly improved defense and some clutch hitting to knock off Randolph, 5-2, on the road.

On Monday afternoon, Quincy's offense sputtered as it fell to Hanover, 6-0, to even its record at 1-1. The game was originally scheduled as the season opener last Wednesday, but Hanover's field was not yet ready for play.

Quincy met Taunton Tuesday in the home opener and today (Thursday) it hosts Barnstable at 4 p.m.

"It was a real big confidence builder," said head coach Michael Draicchio of the team's first win. "I'm very pleased. We're working hard and good things will happen. The senior class really wants to win."

If they play like they did in the season opener, they will win their share of games. If they play like they did Monday, wins will be hard to come by.

Quincy managed only four hits — singles by junior Dave Germain and seniors

Baseball

Dave Centrella, Joe Thorley and John Lupo — and never put a runner in scoring position.

"We have to hit," Draicchio said. "We have to get runners in scoring position. Defensively we're going to be good, particularly on the left side."

Senior Pete Turowski started on the mound and pitched four innings, allowing five runs (3 earned). Sophomore Rob Muollo allowed one run in three innings of relief.

"I think it hurt when we got down and had to try and come back," said Draicchio, whose team fell behind 3-0 in the second inning. "I was hoping we could get a lead and go from there."

In the season opener, Lupo tossed a complete-game five-hitter, allowing one earned run while striking out five and walking just one. The right-hander has been asked to lead the staff and performances like that sure help.

"He pitched a real good game," Draicchio said. "They really only had two solid hits off him."

Although Randolph's sticks were stale, Quincy wasn't exactly smacking the ball (six hits) either. But its hits were timely and it also did the little things.

Quincy posted a trifecta in the top of the first. Germain and Centrella (2 for 4, 2 runs) reached on singles and Thorley (1 for 3, 2 RBIs) followed with another single to knock home Germain.

Turowski walked to put men on the corners. Lupo reached on a fielder's choice to score Centrella. Senior Mark Robertson (1 for 3, RBI) then plated Turowski with single to center for a 3-0 lead.

Randolph scored an unearned run in the bottom half and could have had more if it weren't for Centrella. The left fielder threw out a runner trying to score from second base, as he fired a bullet to senior catcher Joe Duffy in plenty of time.

"It wasn't even close," Draicchio said. "Duffy put the tag on several feet up the line."

Quincy got one run back in the second. Muollo led off with a single and moved to second on Germain's sacrifice bunt. Centrella reached on an error and Muollo took third on the play. Thorley drove him in with a sac fly.

In third, Randolph touched up Lupo with a single and double to pull within 4-2. But that was all it would get. Quincy added its final run in the fifth when Centrella doubled and later scored on a wild pitch.

Sophomore third baseman Craig Keenan manned the hot corner flawlessly in his varsity debut, fielding six grounders and a pop-up.

Amy Jellison, Makini Thompson On Jr. Olympics Volleyball Team

North Quincy High School varsity volleyball players Amy Jellison and Makini Thompson are two of the team leaders on this year's Smash 18 U's Junior Olympics volleyball club.

Based in Newton, the Smash program includes some of the best high school players in the state, including three first-team coaches' all state selections.

One of them is setter Jellison, a four-year starter and member of the 1999 state championship team, who is the team leader in assists. Sophomore middle hitter

Thompson is among the team leaders in blocks and kills.

Kin Yun of Quincy is the assistant coach. She is an assistant women's volleyball coach at Brandeis University.

This year Smash 18 U's team, currently the top-rated team in the New England Power League, is attempting to repeat as the New England Regional Junior Olympics champion. It has won three of four tournaments, including the most recent at St. Michael's College in Colchester, Vt.

It's 39-6 match play record includes a fifth-place finish out of 50 teams at the Early Bird Extravaganza held in January at the Philadelphia Convention Center and a fifth-place finish at the New England Regional Tournament at UMass-Amherst in March.

Smash 18 U's will continue the season with several more Power League matches. In addition, the team will participate in national competitions at the Northeast Qualifier in Baltimore, Md., later this month and at the East Coast Championships at Penn State in May.

North Quincy Softball's Mission: Improvement

By CHRIS POISSON

While the North Quincy soccer and basketball programs have flourished the past several years, it's no secret the softball program has struggled.

After last year's 1-19 campaign, head coach Bob Doyle, still a little bit miffed about his hockey team's loss in the tournament, is determined to get the softball team up to par with the other varsity clubs.

"The girls' athletic programs at North Quincy are really strong right now," Doyle said. "They've been successful in the fall and winter seasons. I don't want it to die out in spring."

The Red Raiders fell to Randolph, 27-1, in their season opener last Thursday at home. Aside from what happened on the field, Doyle believes part of the problem stemmed from a chaotic practice schedule to the junior prom the following day.

Whatever the reason, there is one thing that is certain — they were embarrassed. And after the game, Doyle held a team meeting to address the issues and re-emphasize the team goals.

"I told them there's now way I'm going to be on the embarrassing end of games like that this season," Doyle said. "We accepted losing last year and we weren't working hard in practice. I personally should share some of that blame. We still had fun last year, but I want them to be more serious. I told them we're going to work extremely hard. I think they can handle it."

North Quincy played Silver Lake Tuesday and today (Thursday) it hosts Taunton at 4 p.m.

North Quincy's weaknesses have been its pitching and offense, which you kind of need to win ball games.

"Our pitching doesn't match up against the opposition," Doyle said. "That's what separates us from our opponents. Lack of offense production hurt us last year and we're looking to improve in that area too."

The pitching staff includes senior tri-captain Nicole Grazioso, juniors Alyssa Hawksley and Kristen Connors, and sophomore Lauren Struzik. Grazioso, Hawksley and Struzik — the top three in the rotation, respectively — have worked with a pitching coach and Doyle feels they'll show improvement this season.

"Nicole has definitely improved," Doyle said. "She and a couple of others went to Barry Needham's pitching camp in the South Shore. I'm going to try to get him to come down to some practices and work with our pitchers."

Senior tri-captain Jen Conley, an Old Colony League all-star last year, anchors the infield at shortstop and is the team's best offensive player.

"I'm looking for her leadership to filter down to the younger players," Doyle said. "She doesn't want to endure another year like last year."

Quincy Working On Fundamentals And Future

With no freshman team, the Quincy varsity softball squad is really young this season with five starting sophomores and only three seniors.

But the age factor might not be so bad considering some players on last year's successful JV team have moved up to the big club.

"We're a very young team and we will be for a lot of years," said head coach Mike Feeder. "We're happy with the team so far. For the most part they're playing above their age."

Although Quincy fell to Notre Dame Academy, 7-3, in the season opener Monday afternoon, Feeder felt this team played a great game. Yeah, he wants his team to win games this year, but he's looking more towards creating a powerhouse program for the future.

"We're looking at the big picture," Feeder said. "We're looking to have a good program for 10 to 12 years, not one or two years and then have to rebuild again. We want to build for the future."

Softball

Our goals are to work on our mechanics and fundamentals game after game."

Quincy played Taunton, the defending Old Colony League champs, Tuesday and today (Thursday) it heads to Barnstable. On April 18 it will travel to Braintree before finally taking on Silver Lake April 23 in the home opener.

Against Notre Dame, sophomore right-hander Stacey Andrew started on the hill and went the distance while striking out 10 batters. Andrew, who tossed a no-hitter against North Quincy last season at the JV level, is the staff's ace this season who will shoulder much of the load. Freshman Rachel Sorenson is Andrew's backup and will also get her share of innings.

"Stacey is a good one," Feeder said. "She's a one-stop athlete and pitches all year long."

The Presidents scored first in the second inning when sophomore Diane Gilbody (3 for 4) laced an RBI single to center field. The game was tied at 3 after four innings of play before Notre Dame scored three in the fifth on a home run. It added its final run in the seventh.

Sophomore Liz Campbell, who played a strong game at first base, ripped a triple in the first inning. The Presidents, however, just couldn't come up with the clutch hits in this game, leaving 10 runners on base.

Most Blessed Sacrament Basketball Champions

The Most Blessed Sacrament girls' basketball team of Houghs Neck recently capped an undefeated season by winning the Sarah Division (ages 10-12) championship with a 13-12 victory over St. Mary's C.

Coached by Julie and Amy Gibbons, MBS battled hand against St. Mary's C the second place team in the division infamous for its buzzer beating shots, great outside shot and speed.

Michelle Wright led the team with fastbreaks and layups, her trademark, as well as Emily Milone's. Brooke Bergstrom controlled the offense by keeping the ball in motion. Carolyn Spada and Cristi Silcox hustled to tie up the ball and maintain possession.

Katie O'Neil showed her versatility by playing all positions. Christine DiStasi and Minnie Marshall were strong defensively, as MBS played man-to-man the entire game. Desire Alexander and Lauren Milone controlled the boards with fierce rebounding.

MBS opened the playoffs against St. Boniface. Trailing by seven in the first half, MBS came back and sealed the win with a foul shot and layup by Spada in overtime.

MBS then knocked off St. John's, a fast team with fresh talent, in another nail-biter, to reach the championship game.

In the outfield, senior Casey Rudge, a newcomer, is in left field, sophomore Casey Loman in center field and Connors in right field. Doherty can also play out there.

Although the ultimate team goal is to make the state tournament, Doyle wants the team to more competitive and improve upon last year.

"Our goal is to make the state tournament, like it is every year," Doyle said. "But realistically, I wouldn't mind if we finished in the middle pack this year. Our goals are simply to improve on last year's record and rid ourselves of the acceptance of losing. We need to re-acquire a hard work ethic mentality."

Marathoner Christine George Running To Help Urban Youth

After years of cheering for runners in the Boston Marathon, Christine George of Quincy will finally take to the streets April 16 to raise money and awareness for Thompson Island Outward Bound, an organization serving urban youth from the Greater Boston area.

Vice President at Hunnean Management Company, George got her chance to run through co-worker Steve James, who is now involved in his third marathon for Thompson Island Outward Bound. Each runner has committed to raise at least $2,500 for the organization.

"I always wanted to run the marathon," George said.

CHRISTINE GEORGE

"My cousin did it and that inspired me, and then I watched Steve do it for the past two years. I'd always poke around and ask him questions and this year he encouraged me to actually do it."

"Just to finish will be a huge personal accomplishment, but it's nice to be able to do it for Thompson Island," she added. "It's really a tremendous place for kids."

Thompson Island Outward Bound is a non-profit educational center that instills self-confidence and compassion in urban youth through adventure programming like ropes courses and expeditions.

It's a privately-owned facility that is also part of the Boston Harbor Islands national park. Students from Boston public schools participate in five-day expeditions there during the school year, and courses are available to other youngsters and adults year round.

Individuals Sought To Carry 2002 Olympic Torch

Chevrolet, a presenting sponsor of the Salt Lake 2002 Olympic Torch Relay, is searching for individuals with inspiring stories to carry the flame and represent the Olympic Spirit on its 46-state, cross-country trip.

Quincy residents have a little over two weeks left to nominate someone to carry the Olympic Flame during its journey to the Opening Ceremony.

Through April 30, Chevrolet and its 4,300 dealers across the country will provide every American with the chance to share in the U.S. Olympic experience by nominating an individual to carry the torch — one of the most important symbols of the Games.

"Thousands of Torch-bearer nominations have already been submitted at Chevrolet dealerships across the country and online at www.chevy.com," said Mac Whisner, Chevrolet director of truck advertising and promotion.

Chevrolet will select about 3,000 torchbearers, who will each carry the flame approximately 0.2 miles, or about one lap around a field track. Individuals interested in nominating someone to run with the flame should visit one of Chevrolet's dealerships or www.chevy.com for a nomination form.

The nominations, including a 50- to 100-word statement, will be judged on the following criteria: individuals who have inspired others; who serve their community in an exemplary manner; who embody the Olympic Spirit of achievement through sport and friendship; and who have inspired others encountering and overcoming adversity.

The nomination forms can be submitted through the Internet or U.S. Mail. The minimum age is 16; however, those submitting nominations over the Internet must be 18 or older. Nominations must be postmarked by April 30.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

After the darkness of Calvary, came the light of the resurrection. Now, in these days of division and upheaval, all things seem dark, too... that's why it's important for us to remember that Christ has conquered death and has shown us the way to obtain life everlasting for ourselves.

Death can and does occur in many ways. It always has and always will. In human experience and in our human weakness, certain words are sometimes used in connection with death. Words such as tragic... pathetic... absurd... are emotionally sponsored. They are usually spontaneous and unthinkingly uttered.

The story of Easter is one of triumph - over death. The story refutes the words so often used. There is nothing tragic, pathetic or absurd about the triumph over death. It is not a tragic story. Nor is it a pathetic or absurd story. It is not a fictional story; it is factual. And it is a beautiful story that has been told time and time again through the centuries since the Crucifixion. It is a story of truth that has sustained the Church in every generation since then.

Death brings separation - and sorrow for the separation. But only for a time. Neither the separation or the sorrow is final. The story of Easter is a story of the defeat of death through the promise and power of God... And both the promise and the power have been proved...

Adams Memorial In Washington Gains Momentum

which would create a non-profit to raise funds for an Adams memorial in the nation's capital. Currently, no such memorial exists.

Senator Edward Kennedy would sponsor the bill in the U.S. Senate.

In introducing Roemer to the guests assembled in the Stone Library on the grounds of the Adams Mansion, Delahunt praised his colleague for his "passion for the Adams family" and presented Roemer, who will not seek re-election, with a two-volume biography of John Adams, the gift of former City Council President Peter Kolson.

Roemer was also presented with an historic Quincy necktie by Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, who spoke of the generations of Adams' who lived in the house until the 1920's, the estate's 14,000 volume library, and the "legacy" of Adams family members.

It was Peak who mentioned the somewhat dour prediction of John Adams concerning his place in history, adding that, in this instance, she hoped the founding father was mistaken.

Roemer, a native of South Bend, IN, and a graduate of Notre Dame University, said the time was right for a national memorial to the family, which, in addition to John Adams has produced sixth president John Quincy Adams and scholars, diplomats, and patriots such as Abigail and Louisa Adams, Samuel Adams, Henry Adams, and Charles Francis Adams.

"You cannot separate the history of the Adams family and the history of the United States," said Roemer.

Calling it "non-controversial" issue, Roemer said the bill would go through the committee process of both House and Senate. If approved, the non-profit would work with the three federal commissions to determine the size, scope, and location of the final project.

"We're not sure what it's going to look like," said Roemer, who said a realistic estimate as to cost was not possible right now.

Family descendant Peter Boylston Adams, who recalled as a child sitting in the very same library where the presentation was made, said the family supported the project.

"The Adams family supports this," Adams said. "We have a great fondness for the City of Quincy and, of course, the nation."

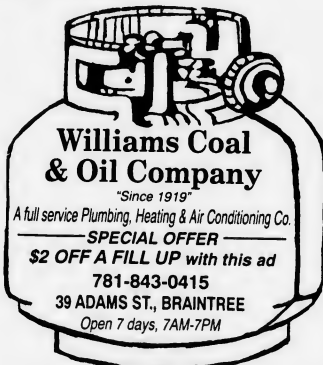

Mayor Sheets, who recognized Weymouth Mayor

David Madden and the accomplishments of that town's favorite daughter Abigail Adams, escorted his guests around the city, visiting such sites as "The Old House" and The Beale House and the Adams family crypt beneath the Church of the Presidents in Quincy Square.

One particular highlight of the tour was in the crypt, where the group met Douglas Heiner Smith, a sixth grader from Las Vegas, NV, and his parents.

Smith, it seems, was allowed to pick any spot in the country for a vacation and chose Quincy because of its intimate connection with John Adams.

The campaign for an Adams Memorial in Washington, D.C., will receive another boost when historian David McCullough, whose book on John Adams is due out in May, will speak at a kickoff fundraiser for the memorial in the nation's capital April 24.

Schedule Of Meetings For New QHS Siting Commission

The Siting Commission for the new Quincy High School announces the following schedule for the remainder of April:

• Saturday, April 21, 8 a.m. to 1 p.m., Thomas Crane Public Library Meeting Room. School Siting Workshop with Sharon Kabeletz, facilitator. Panel participants include: Hal

agement.

• Tuesday, April 24, 6 to 9 p.m., Quincy High School Auditorium: Public Hearing.

• Wednesday, April 25, 7 to 9 p.m., Parker Suite: School Siting Commission to debate all sites.

• Thursday, April 26, 7 to 9 p.m., Parker Suite: School Siting Commission Meeting to discuss and vote.

'Village' Plan Still A Thorny Issue

Although the meeting shed new light on the project, including more than 20 individuals, mostly West Quincy residents, who spoke against the permit, there was no resolution and no consensus reached.

The council is expected to hold several more working sessions to hammer out such thorny issues as traffic mitigation, drainage, density, hiking trails, easements, and union participation.

More difficult to resolve, however, is the debate as to whether 16 acres of the proposed complex's 28-acre site, the so-called Shea Parcel, can legally be used since it was purchased with state funds and originally intended to become part of the Quarry Hills Golf Course Complex.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, who led much of the questioning Monday night, argued that the Inter-Agency agreement signed in March of 1997 between the city and the Massachusetts Highway Department, which was necessary for "mobilization funds" to purchase land for Big Dig fill, clearly identified the Shea parcel as additional property to be acquired, and that a later 50-year lease agreement between the city and lessee Quarry Hills Associates, developers of the 27-hole public golf course, mandated that the developer acquire all identified property for the site.

"The Inter-Agency agreement has been modified by the city (to allow the Shea Parcel sale) but the lease agreement still stands," Raymondi said. "We are violating the lease if we approve this project."

Raymondi went on to say that he could not believe Mayor James Sheets would lobby Governor Paul Cellucci and the state for $4.7 million in funds to purchase 88 acres of additional properties only to sign an amendment to the lease allowing the private Quarry Hills Associates to dictate the fate of those parcels.

"The mayor of this city would not be that naive," Raymondi said.

Quarry Hills Attorney Dennis Harrington, a former city councillor who sparred with Raymondi over several points during the course of the public hearing, said that Quarry Hills Associates purchased the Shea parcel with loans which were then reimbursed by state funds, but that the lease agreement gave sole option to Quarry Hills as to what lands would become part of the final site.

Additional lands from Milton and the MDC, Harrington said, made 16 acres of the Shea parcel excess land, allowing it to be split and a portion considered for development.

"This was always flexible," said Harrington of the project, adding that there was still enough land to make good on all Quarry Hills commitments regarding ballfields and open space.

The problem, Harrington asserted, was that Quarry Hills was not legally required to make all lands available for recreation and open space "come hell or high water," as some would have hoped.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, who studied the agreements and issued his written opinion to councillors Monday night, agreed with Harrington that Quarry Hills was within its rights in selling part of the Shea parcel for private development.

A portion of McGrath's written opinion states:

"It was contemplated in the Interagency Agreement that parcels of land would be acquired by use of Mass Highway funds. That is what occurred. The Fifth Amendment to the Interagency Agreement permits the sale of the Shea parcel.

"It is therefore my opinion that the sale of this land by Quarry Hills to the Finger Group is legal and consistent with the Lease and the Interagency Agreement."

Attention Quincy Residents

As of April 16th, 2001 the Quincy DPW will take over the curbside yardwaste collection program from BFI.

Yardwaste may be placed curbside April 16 through December 14, 2001 on your regular trash pickup day.

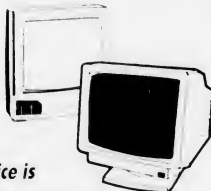

The drop-off facility at the DPW Backyard, 55 rear Sea Street, will still be open to Quincy residents Monday through Saturday from mid-April through mid-December and has been relocated so that residents do not have to drive far into the yard.

$ An incentive program is ongoing for residents who make the effort to drop off their materials and includes FREE YARD WASTE BAGS AND CASH PRIZES! $

It is mandatory that you use brown leaf bags, open barrels or cardboard boxes. No plastic bags will be accepted.

Please bundle/tie (with rope) branches and brush (in 3 foot lengths) separate from grass and leaves. Large tree limbs and heavy brush can be disposed of, unbundled, at the DPW yard.

Computer monitors & TVs, due to lead content, are now being accepted at the DPW drop off-site at 55 Sea Street every Saturday morning 9:00am-noon (except during snowstorms). Residents may drive up to the loading area of the building to place their materials on pallets. As this service is available weekly, year round, there will be no waiting.

Awarded Honorary High School Diplomas Honoring The Women Who Served On WWII Home Front

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Officers' Wardroom of the USS Salem proved the perfect setting Monday — Patriots' Day — for the city to award honorary high school diplomas to Mildred Vento and Mary Fisher, who both left high school to work as local shipbuilders during World War II.

Vento, a painter/scrafer at the Fore River Shipyard and Fisher, a welder at the Hingham yard, were honored as representatives of all "Winnie the Welders" who left their Massachusetts High Schools during World War II to work in the Bethlehem Steel Quincy and Hingham Ship Yards.

"You were only two years older than I am now (when you started work at the shipyard)," said 14-year old Mary Bloomer, the eighth grade Broad Meadows student who, under the direction of Lan-agers, we say to the "Greatest Generation" of teenagers congratulations on a job well done."

The project, Bloomer said, began when she was

To Hire Consulting Firm Sheets Ask $80,000 For Commercial Revaluation Project

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James Sheets is requesting an $80,000 appropriation to hire an outside consultant for the revaluation of the city's commercial and industrial property in preparation for the state's upcoming re-certification for Fiscal Year 2002.

The already "very complicated process" of commercial revaluation, Sheets said, has been made even more difficult with the city's economic boom in recent years.

"The residential evaluations can be handled in-house," Sheets said. "But this year we're planning to hire a company for commercial and industrial property, given that there's been so much business growth in Quincy over the past three years."

Both residential and commercial assessments must be revaluated by the city and approved by the state every three years.

The $80,000 appropriation was scheduled for discussion at Tuesday night's meeting of the City Council.

Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he would refer the matter to the Finance Committee and request additional information for review from the Board of Assessors.

According to James Papile, a 20-year member of the three member Board of Assessors, the company to be hired is Real Estate Research Consultants, Inc., of Danvers, which submitted the lowest bid.

The property tax rates for Fiscal Year 2002, which will be set at the end of this year, will reflect the 3-year re-certification by the state, Papile said.

Total valuation for the city for Fiscal Year 2001 was $5,371,145,580.

For residential property, the average valuation for a Quincy home was $154,100.

Mooring Stickers Would Help Cut Delinquent Boat Excise Taxes

A special commission has proposed the use of mooring stickers which, among other benefits, would help reduce delinquent excise taxes on boats in the city.

The proposed ordinance, considered by the City Council Tuesday night, would require local boaters to prove they had paid boat excise taxes for the year before receiving such a sticker, thereby addressing the problem of unpaid boat excise taxes in the city, which has resulted in $695,000 in uncollected taxes in recent years and no warrants issued on the matter in the past 10 years.

The measure, put forth by the roughly 20-member Maritime Commission created last year by Mayor James Sheets, is the first step in creating city oversight on boaters, which currently are relied upon to provide their own information.

"There's virtually no control at all," said commission member and Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines, adding that there really isn't an exact figure as to how many boats are out there. "In the event of a fire, accident, or other emergency, there is virtually no information to provide our harbor master or police."

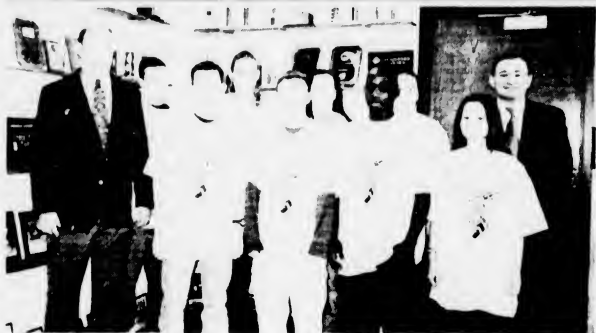

The City Solicitor's Office was scheduled to provide details of the proposal to City Councillors at Tuesday night's meeting. Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, also a member of the Maritime Commission, said he would introduce the proposed ordinance, which is expected to go to the Ordinance Committee for review.

The mooring permit proposal, Hanley said, is just one aspect of a master plan developed by the commission but was being introduced separately in recognition of the upcoming boating season.

Other aspects of the commission master plan address issues such as public safety, Hanley said.

Former Quincy Police Captain Donald Riley serves as chairman of the Maritime Commission, which has been meeting since August of last year.

New Owners, New Names For Two Restaurants

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Two restaurants in Quincy will have new owners and will be opening in Quincy this summer.

They are the former Patriot Lunch, 1356 Hancock St., and the former Seafood Express on 57 Granite St. Both received their common victualer license at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

ing.

The name of the Patriot Lunch will be changed to The Daily Grind and have a cafe atmosphere with coffee and baked goods, hot soup and sandwiches. The hours will be from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 7 a.m. to 2 or 3 p.m. on weekends.

According to Denise Mealey, who along with Mark McIntyre, will manage the business, extensive renovations have started "from scratch." They include, all new wiring, plumbing, new sinks, counter tops, new floor and ceiling, coffee makers.

The name of the Seafood Express will be changed to Thai Little Duck and feature virtually hundreds of combinations of foods from crispy spring rolls with chicken and vegetable fillings to vegetable tempura, wanton soup; and many other entrees including salads with various seafood and vegetables.

Renovations, according to Atty. Dennis Harrington will include, all new equipment, new ceilings, lighting and plumbing.

Harrington said the pizza ovens, once installed for another previous business, will be removed and other stoves installed in their place.

Harrington said there will be a chef as well as a manager and assistant manager. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. 7 days a week.

Harrington said all that is needed now is a gas and plumbing permit to continue with the renovations. Opening is slated for June 1.

Both restaurants have been closed for almost two years.

Tactics Questioned But Soliciting Gets Go-Ahead

Although questioning the "tactics" of those from TCI America, soliciting on the telephone, the License Board nonetheless granted permission for the company to call Quincy businesses and residents to benefit a the Quincy Patrolmen Association.

Addressing the License Board at Tuesday's meeting, Chairman Joseph Shea said he had received complaints that phone calls were being made before they were registered with the License Board. He added that they were coinciding with the solicitation from the Fire Department, a situation the Board "tried to avoid", he said.

Acting Police Chief Terence Kelly said a man who said he was Lou Barrett was telling people he was a police officer and questioned Atty. Peter Brooks about the recurring incident.

Brooks said he had never heard of Barrett, and if that were true, they would address the complaints and discharge the person or persons immediately.

Someone in the audience asked Brooks if it were true that last year's soliciting only netted the Patrolmen Association 10 percent of what was collected.

Although Brooks said he didn't have a figure and was asked for a "ballpark" one, he hesitated and then said "maybe about 20-30 percent."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said he was "not a big fan of telephone soliciting." He said older people get intimidated if they can't give.

He said he wishes there was a better way to solicit and said he didn't like people getting calls and said it "sends a bad message especially to the older citizen."

He said everyone should "take a hard look at this type of operation."

Joseph Keegan, who is acting vice president of the Patrolmen Association said they are dependent on this type of operation because they have no time to organize functions and other events.

He agreed with Gorman that no one is "pleased to get calls during dinner", but added if it wasn't for that type of operation, programs such as Quincy Little League, Babe Ruth, Quincy Youth Hockey to mention a few, wouldn't be able to exist.

Before the board voted, Kelly asked for assurance that no such complaints would come forth and that proper laws are followed. The board voted unanimously and gave permission for the telemarketing to continue for three weeks ending May 15.

South Shore ARC 50th Annual Dinner Dance April 21

South Shore ARC provides

On 3-2 Board Vote

Squantum Food Shop Gets Beer, Wine License

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

It didn't matter that the ward councillor opposed his getting a beer and wine license or that several opponents were sitting in City Hall chambers Tuesday, in the end it came down to the caliber of Mike Shanahan, owner of the Tedeschi Food Shop on 751 East Squantum St.

The License Board voted 3-2 in favor of a beer and wine license.

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton told the board that it was "clear that the public did not want this license."

Acting Police Chief Terrence Kelly said he "agreed with opponents" that selling beer and wine at that location would add to the traffic and problem at Squaw Rock, a hangout.

Chairman Joseph Shea read letters of opposition to the audience, including one from Rep. Bruce Ayers who was opposed.

Atty. Gregory F. Galvin told the board that since the Dollar Saver (a package store) left the area, there is a need based upon existing locations of other stores that sell beer and wine. He cited that some of the stores are in Marina Bay and are "seasonal."

Praising Shanahan, Galvin said he has a substantial background and a long history of dealing with alcohol related issues. He was a bartender at one time and also was involved in selling through other package stores before he was owner of Tedeschi's.

He told the board that there would be two employees present on weekends and nights, and that Shanahan will have the newest equipment for checking ID's, forgery, etc. He presented an 18-page petition signed by those in favor of the license.

Galvin also stressed that the store would not be a "package store" and would not compete with those in the area.

Shea also read letters from proponents as well.

After much discussion at Tuesday's meeting, Walter White, director of inspection services, made a motion to grant the request, and it was seconded by Fire Chief Thomas Gorman. Health Inspector Jane Galahue and acting Police Chief Kelly both voted against the request.

Before voting in favor of the license, Gorman reminisced about his wife's family once owning a store in Hingham similar to Shanahan's and said he didn't notice crowds of people going to purchase just beer and wine.

White said he didn't think the sale of beer and wine at Tedeschi's would make any difference to those hanging out at Squaw Rock, something he said has been going on for years and said smiling, "I think there is a statute of limitations."

Those opposing feared more traffic as well as more hangouts at Squaw Rock, plus more bottles and cans strewn around the area. However, most all of those opposed said that Shanahan was a dedicated owner who was there every day and on weekends.

Steven Cronin, one of the proponents, said he was "comfortable" with Shanahan owning a beer and wine license and called him a "hands-on owner" and no "shrinking violet" when it came to carding customers.

He said Shanahan is not responsible for what happens at Squaw Rock, but said it was the parents and police's responsibility.

One opponent, Phyllis Knight, said Squantum is sometimes known as "Paradise Peninsula" and said residents want "to keep it that way."

James Stamos, another Squantum resident and an opponent, said he owns the building next door to the store and spoke of "kids sitting on the roofs," hiding beer cases in a basement, and said he feared the sale of alcohol would only add to the problem.

Shanahan responded to the opponents and said if he

CHANGING ATF

An automatic transmission builds up a lot of internal heat from the friction of the fluid churning inside the torque converter, the friction created when the clutch plates engage, and the friction of gears and bearings carrying their loads. Consequently, it doesn't take long for the automatic transmission fluid (ATF) to heat up while the vehicle is in motion.

Under normal driving conditions, the ATF temperature will go to 175 degrees F., which is the usual temperature range at which most fluids are formulated to operate. If temperatures remain in this range, ATF will last up to 100,000 miles. If the temperature goes higher, its lubricating qualities diminish. For optimum protection, ATF (and filter) should be replaced every 30,000 miles. Maintaining your SUV, van, truck or car is important in maintaining its value. Bring it to the ASE Certified professionals at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Our friendly staff will gladly answer all your questions here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We're 'A' Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer. Open: Mon-Fri 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm.

HINT: At elevated operating temperatures, ATF oxidizes, turns brown and begins to smell like burnt toast.

Health And Safety In Our Schools

Editor: The Quincy Sun

The state department of education has instituted the MCAS program in an effort to develop a basic standard level of education for each public school student. And not the safe for no such bar standard level of safety (replace to measure the quality of school physicality).

Increasingly, we are discovering that a large number of buildings are having problems with air and ground contaminants and mold among other preventable problems.

When are our children going to be given the consideration they deserve in planning for their physical safety in Quincy? Incidents of building, guns and other weapons, and increased violence are challenging enough for today's parents. Please remove the burden of worry for us by adopting policies that deal with minimum building standards, with regard to placement of schools on even marginally questionable properties.

What kind of message do we give our future generations when we choose to gamble with their health and safety? Educational excellence begins in a healthy and safe environment.

The best location for the Quincy High School is exactly where it is now. With this knowledge, I urge Quincy officials and residents to measure this and any other criteria against health and safety for our senior high students.

It will take care of the small things, the big things will take care of themselves.

It was estimated that more than 3,000 people died as a result of the Great San Francisco Earthquake and the devastating fires it inflicted upon the city.

• On April 16, 1947, in Texas City's port on Galveston Bay, a fire aboard

A Double Promotion

You might say Jim Sheets got a double promotion at St. Ann's School the other day.

His Honor was making his third annual visit to read to the pre-kindergarten class.

He was greeted by pupil John Mulcahy who wanted to know: "Are you George W. Bush?"

Before the mayor could respond, classmate Jake Baxter answered: "No, he's the mayor of the United States."

Sheets laughed and then set the record straight.

And got right to the best part of his visit - storytime.

The school has a Letter of the Week program and the letter this particular week was "Q." So the youngsters heard stories about the letter, practiced writing it and learned to recognize the letter in words.

Being the mayor of Quincy certainly qualifies Sheets as an expert on the letter "Q."

Sheets selected to read the book "ABC" by Dr. Seuss, including the alphabet story that has the line: "Big Q, little q; What begins with Q? The Quick Queen of Quincy and her quacking quacker-oo."

"We love having Mayor Sheets come to visit us each year during 'Q' Week," says Jeanne McAllister, one of the Pre-K teachers. "He is great with the kids. They really enjoy being able to meet him -- and I think he enjoys his time with them as well."

Sheets is running for an historic seventh term this year and should have no problem racking it up.

How many more terms might he be thinking?

Well, if he keeps on having as much fun as he did at St. Ann's School and at other schools where he also likes to read to youngsters, there may be a few more in him before he turns the keys to the third floor office over to a successor.

Now, let's see, the Pre-K youngsters at St. Ann's School will be eligible to vote in about 14 years.

Good Manners, Citizenship Courses For Dogs At Armory

The New England Humane Association will teach dogs good manners, good citizenship and obedience in a five-week series of course starting Wednesday, April 25, at the Quincy Armory, 1000 Hancock St.

The course in "Obedience with Distractions" starts at 6 p.m., "Good Manners for Beginners" commences at 7 p.m., followed by the "Canine Good Citizen Course," in conjunction with the American Kennel Club, at 8 p.m.

Cost of the good manners course, which includes the teaching of beginner level commands such as "sit... stay... heel... drop it... and don't touch" and helping with such problems as jumping, mouthing and chewing, is $90 for the five weeks.

Cost of the good citizen course is $100 for five weeks and the dog must pass a series of 10 exams before he or she is given CGC status. Test items show that master and dog have taken the effort to become a well-mannered, responsible team.

JOHN CAIN'S entrance into the Ward 3 City Council race sets the stage for a second preliminary election run-off Sept. 11.

He and Alan Cousin will be challenging Ward 3 council incumbent Patrick McDermott. It will be Cain's second run for the seat.

Ward 5 incumbent Steve Durkin is also facing two challengers: Doug Gutro and James Mullaney. That will mean a preliminary fight there.

MINUTES AFTER Jane Swift was sworn in as acting Governor, City Council President Paul Harold met with her, along with other municipal leaders who are members of the Governor's Local Government Advisory Committee (LGAC).

The group presented her with an "opening day" baseball signed by all members of the committee to commemorate her first day as governor.

The LGAC comprises mayors, city councillors and selectmen who meet monthly with the governor to advise him (now her) on issues affecting local government.

Swift had a special welcome for Harold. They served together in the state senate and had offices opposite each other at the State House.

IF FRANK MCCAULEY ever invites you to take a walk with him bring your roller skates. Or he'll be a good 50 yards in front of you all the way.

He likes to walk and walk fast. Does six miles a day at a 14 1/2 minute per mile clip. Between 85 and 90 minutes for the six.

Last year he stepped off 1,432 miles, equivalent of walking to Kansas City. His goal this year is 1,500 miles. Since he retired as Executive Director of the State Retirement Department in 1997 to the end of March he has rolled up 5,637 miles. Which is like walking from Quincy to Phoenix, Ariz. and back.

He has walked the Boston Marathon route (26.2 miles) five times and the same distance here in Quincy when he couldn't get to the marathon route, raising $34,355 for the Jimmy Fund.

"It keeps me in good shape," says McCauley. "Walking is good for your blood pressure, heart and general good health."

He says he'd like to try walking across America but he doesn't think Sandra would let him.

(She might surprise you on that, Frank.)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1915 POSTCARD is a view of the top of Swingle's Quarry in West Quincy. At that time its depth was 225 feet and by the time it was shutdown as Quincy's last operating quarry in 1963 the depth had reached 350 feet. The derrick was one of dozens hovering over the hills of West Quincy. The bridge on the right was felled long ago to the bottom of the pit, and has been buried forever under the slurry from the Big Dig recently used to fill his huge quarry. Jonathan Swingle, a successful Quincy granite man, was known as the "extra dark man" because of the nearly black granite that came from here. The only other known place in the world with similar granite is Syene in ancient Egypt, from where monuments carved from it survives to this day. Some of those ancient Egyptian statues in the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston look like they could have come from West Quincy.

Supports Renovating QHS For Central Middle School

Editor, The Quincy Sun: The building in which Central Middle School is currently housed was constructed in 1894 and was used originally as Quincy High School. The building served its purpose well. Now it is hoped that Central will soon be relocated to the current Quincy High School that was constructed in 1922 as a comprehensive high school.

The best way to answer the question of where Central Middle School should be housed is to examine each of the two choices. The first choice is a historic building with a long and proud history of serving Quincy's school children. There are current Central supporters who seem to feel a strong attachment to the old building. However, is that enough to keep the Central school housed in the old building? Let's look just at the size of the school lot. Central is located on a two-acre parcel of land, serving a student population of approximately 600 students. Restoration is at least 50 percent more expensive than conventional restorations, and is estimated to cost at least $15 million. The inside will have to be completely rebuilt including a new structural system. This will force the city to downsize the population at Central and force redistricting.

It has no noticeable grass or trees on the property. The schoolyard seems to be used as a parking lot during school hours. The students will have to be bused to other schools during renovations, which will cause overcrowding in those schools. There are no recreational facilities for the students to use either during school or after school. For that matter it offers the citizens of Quincy no playing fields to use for such things as soccer, baseball or football practices.

It is currently overcrowded. It is an antiquated building that lacks many of the simple pleasures that other middle schools in the city have or will have after they are renovated. These include a cafeteria, gym, updated computer labs, appropriate science labs, etc. Aside from the fact that as far back as 1946 experts have recommended replacing the Central building not the school. Why would anyone want to house a school on a site that is obviously not in step with the 21st century? The taxpayers will not gain. The students will not gain. The parents of students who are redistricted will not gain. Any decision to restore an inadequate building and site should be seen as a choice that is based on emotion, not what is educationally sound for the children.

What will be gained by moving the Central Middle School to a beautifully renovated building? First, students will be provided with a well-built 1922 neo-classical historic building that will sit on a site of 23 acres of land. This will be net gain of 20 acres of open space for everyone in the city of Quincy to utilize. Students will also gain a campus type atmosphere. The site is already wired for cable and Internet access. The new location will provide Central students with a state-of-the-art library.

The YMCA is directly across the street; this may be seen as an asset to many working and single parents. Basically, the new site will better serve many different students but especially those students who currently attend Central Middle School. The facts seem to speak for themselves. Considering what will be gained by a number of Quincy's students, I consider the plan proposed by the building needs task force nothing short of a bargain!

An argument for a new school is based on the choice theory of William Glasser, MD. He has been writing for over 30 years about the follies of external control in our lives and in our schools. He states that every student can do competent work if a connection (friendship) is established between the teacher and student, especially those students who are the most troubling. It is my hope as a community we would stop blaming, and begin to make positive choices that will provide our students with a state-of-the-art school system that is taken for granted in many wealthy communities: smaller classes at all levels, better materials, books and computers, and clean functioning facilities.

Della Chiesa Will Not Run

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa ended speculation this week by announcing he would not seek re-election as mayor in the fall elections. He also served as state representative, but made no announcement concerning his future plans in that post.

April 19 - 25

36 Years Ago

Della Chiesa, a Republican, was one of the most popular and longest serving elected officials in the city. He served as board ward councillor and councillor at large and mayor under both Plan X forms of city government and Plan I.

He graduated from Quincy Trade as a plumber who at 17 became the youngest master plumber in the state. He started his own business at age 19, giving it up in 1953 when he was elected to the state legislature.

Following the mayor's announcement speculation began immediately on his successor. Candidates mentioned for mayor included: Sen. James McIntyre, Rep. Joseph Bonfanti, Rep. George Burke, Council President Joseph LaRocca, School Committee member Dr. Charles Djerf.

KOEGLER: OPEN RESERVOIR FOR FISHING

Ward 3 Councillor John Koegler called upon the mayor to open up the Braintree Dam for limited fishing by Quincy and Braintree residents.

The 64 acres in Braintree, that included 21 acres of reservoir, were owned by the city. It had been a reservoir for the city, but in recent years provided water for the shipyard.

It had been closed since 1964, following two drownings, but with proper policing, Koegler said generations of South Quincy residents who fished there should have the right to return.

Mayor Della Chiesa said he'd schedule a meeting with Braintree selectmen to discuss the issue.

LOUIS GEORGE VILLAGE READY TO OPEN

Gerard White, director of the Quincy Housing Authority, announced that the recently completed Louis George Village was ready to open May 1. A reported 365 applications were screened to fill the 75 units.

White said that there was an immediate need for more senior housing in the city, noting that the rising taxes and rising rents had hit the elderly particularly hard. The Louis George Village was the housing authority's fifth development.

Shepherd's Pie

I was asked recently to repeat my recipe for Shepherd's Pie which can be made with a variety of meats. I've combined beef and lamb at times. But today's calls for ground beef.

Shepherd's Pie

1 pound ground beef
1 egg
1/2 cup breadcrumbs
1/4 cup grated cheese
a couple of tablespoons chopped onion (optional)
3 cups mashed potatoes
2 cups mixed vegetables (I sometime use corn and carrots)
salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons oil for sautéing

Mix the ground beef, egg, breadcrumbs and cheese. If mixture seems dry, add a smidgen of water or soup stock.

In a large frying pan, and in the hot oil, sauté the meat mixture until lightly browned. Lower heat to the lowest on your stove. Place the meat mixture gently on the bottom of the pan.

Place the cooked vegetables and fix evenly over the meat. Top it with the mashed potatoes as though you were frosting a cake. Cover and cook on low heat for about 20 minutes until heated through and uncovered for 5 more minutes. Cut in pie-like wedges.

(This entree can be made with various meats, vegetables and topped with cooked rice instead of potatoes if desired. I have also used sweet mashed potatoes along with the white ones for a tasty and colorful look.)

Early Years Of Colonies Historical Society Topic

Historian Dr. Jack Dempsey will present a fresh look at the early years of the Massachusetts and Plymouth colonies at the Quincy Historical Society meeting Thursday, April 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy.

The period of the 1620s, according to Dempsey, is the fundamental colonial decade, not only in founding settlements but in establishing patterns. Historians and educators have often derived their basic conceptions of America from the events and histories of those crucial years.

Dr. Dempsey, an authority figure on Thomas Morton and the Merry Mount settlement, has been working recently on several other aspects of early history, particularly on the interactions between Native Americans and colonists. He will present new evidence and a fresh analysis of the people and events that made the 1620s a true turning-point in the history and histories of American colonization.

Dempsey earned his doctorate at Brown University. He has edited the only critical edition of Thomas Morton's New English Canaan and has recently published 'Good News from New England' and Other Writings On The Killings At Weymouth Colony. He has also produced documentary films and videos and will show a portion of one at the Historical Society meeting.

The public is welcome to attend. There is no charge for admission.

National Grid Sponsors Career Day

QHS Students Get Close Look At Careers In Electric Utility Industry

Most likely a future engineer, Quincy High School's Emily Lebo, 17, is excited to talk with professionals about careers in the electric utility industry. The full-day event, which was sponsored by National Grid, the largest electric utility in Massachusetts, was aimed at introducing young people to careers in the electric utility industry and encouraging them to study technical subjects. Part of the program also focused on raising awareness about electrical safety.

"Our aim is to introduce students to science and engineering careers and let them know that National Grid provides many interesting career opportunities right in their home state," said Mary Fuller, an electrical engineer with National Grid.

Fuller chaired a roundtable discussion on "Women in Technology" with 10 female engineering students. Technical engineer Lisa Hemenan, environmental engineer Beverly Axford and electrical engineer John A. Paine.

"Sharing career options with students is an important message which we hope encourages female students," said Fuller.

STUDENT KERRY L. TON tries on safety gear used to work on power lines.

"By sharing our experiences we are able to give a more personal view of what it is like to work in a technical field on a daily basis," said Paine. "It is no secret that there is a shortage of women in technical fields in the U. S. today and young female students need to be made aware of the rewards and challenges they face."

Students also heard presentations by National Grid engineers John Hoffman, Ted Wheeler, Joe Carey and Joe Cardinal on electrical safety and career opportunities.

"We have an ongoing program where we talk with students about electrical safety, which is an important issue," said John Hoffman, supervisor of operations in Weymouth. "Students also need to know about the career opportunities that a company like National Grid offers. It is a fascinating industry undergoing many rapid changes right now."

Quincy's officials, Mayor James Sheets and City Council President Paul Harold participated in the program, making introductory remarks and offering encouragement to the students.

"These types of programs are very beneficial to the students," said Mayor Sheets, a former teacher. "They offer students the opportunity to talk directly with professionals in exciting careers and to gain valuable insight into what it takes to become an engineer or scientist." The career day was hosted by Quincy High's Director of Occupational Education Emily Lebo, School-to-Careers coordinator Gail Murphy, science teacher Stephanie Head and counselor Sheri Heiden.

Disaster Field Office Is Opened Here

Over $1 Million In Checks Go Out To Flood Victims

Checks totaling more than $1 million in disaster housing grants are being distributed to victims of the recent heavy rains and flooding in Norfolk, Essex and Middlesex counties, federal and state officials announced Tuesday.

A total of $1,341,120 has been issued to 863 families as of 4 p.m. Tuesday, according to Federal Coordinating Officer Louis H. Botta. In Norfolk County, a total of $93,050 in disaster housing grants has been issued to 63 families.

"Meeting housing needs for storm victims is our top priority and this is just the beginning," Botta said. "Many more applications are being processed and damage inspections are underway."

FEMA and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) also officially opened a disaster field office in Quincy at 1200 Colony Drive on Tuesday. Botta and State Coordinating Officer Stephen J. McGrail co-hosted a press conference to announce the opening.

On April 10, President Bush declared the three Massachusetts counties a major disaster area. The declaration made residents and business owners in those counties eligible to apply for various disaster assistance programs.

The FEMA housing program provides several types of assistance. Homeowners or renters whose residences were destroyed or suffered major damage may be eligible for rental assistance to help pay for a place to live until permanent housing can be found or repairs made.

Grants for essential home repairs also are available to homeowners for basic repairs not covered by insurance to make the home livable. Examples of essential repairs may include those to electrical, plumbing and heating systems, as well as general carpentry to make a home safe and secure.

Those who sustained damage to their residence or business because of the severe storms and flooding starting on March 5 and continuing should apply for disaster assistance by calling toll-free 1-800-462-9029. Hearing- or speech-impaired applicants may call TTY: 1-800-462-7585. Hours to call are daily, 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Granted a one day beer and wine license to St. John's Church, 21 Gay St., for a spaghetti supper May 4 from 6 p.m. to midnight.

•Granted a one day beer and wine license to the Rotary Club of Quincy for their auction to be held at Quincy Access TV at the Library May 3 from 6 to 9 p.m.

•Granted permission to

The Junior League of Boston 2001 Decorators Show House to hold a fund-raiser April 21-May 29 at the Beale Estate, 181 Adams St.

•Granted a one day all alcoholic license to United Nations Association of Greater Boston for a fund raiser at the Church of the Presidents, Quincy Center May 15 from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

ENC Pilot Program For Teaching Degrees

The Professional Development Institute of Eastern Nazarene College announces a new program that will enable teachers to complete their master's degrees without leaving their school districts.

Instead, their professors will come to them.

The ENC Graduate Division of Teacher Education, in collaboration with the Weymouth Public Schools, has started a pilot program which offers a Master of Education in Elementary Education with an emphasis in reading.

If successful, the pilot program will be expanded to include other communities.

Classes will be conducted at a local school site, which should alleviate typical transportation and scheduling problems.

Enrolled students will take their 12 required courses as a group and will graduate together.

"ENC, through the Professional Development Institute, has had a lot of experience in tailoring specific inservice courses to meet the needs of teachers," said Art Woodward, PDI director and a retired administrator for the Quincy Public Schools. "Being able to attend classes in the town where they teach, whether after work, on Saturdays, or during school vacations, is a definite plus for teachers who have made the commitment to go through the rigors of completing a master's degree."

The inaugural course, which runs until May, is entitled, "Educational Issues in Today's Society" and is taught by Dr. Lorne Ransstrom of Quincy, director of the Division of Teacher Education.

Second Book On Pope John Paul Off The Press

Ray Flynn Has Third Book Coming: Boston Politics!

By TOM HENSHAW

If you liked Ray Flynn's first book, "The Accidental Pope," and adored his second, "John Paul II, a Personal Portrait of the Pope and the Man," you'll absolutely thrill to his third.

"It's the story of politics in Boston for the last 50 years," said Flynn on an informal visit to The Quincy Sun along with his grandson, James, earlier this week.

And who better to tell that story than Ray Flynn, the South Boston native who served as mayor of Boston, city councillor and state representative through the racially charged years of forced busing and the infamous Charles Stuart case.

Actually, the book on Hub politics was his original manuscript, which led to his collaboration with best-selling author Robin Moore on "The Accidental Pope," a work of fiction, which led to his second, "John Paul II," a personal memoir.

"I had the manuscript ready but the publishers didn't think there was much interest from a national point of view," he said. "But each publisher wanted a book on my four years as ambassador to the Vatican."

He had appeared with Ted Koppel on TV's "Nightline" when Moore, fresh from mega-successes with his novels "The Green Berets," and "The French Connection," called to suggest they collaborate on a book about Vatican and White House intrigue.

"That started 'The Accidental Pope,'" said Flynn. "It came out last November and for a while it was No. 5 on the best-seller list. But I still wanted to do the political book. It was something I still want to do."

"It'll be at least another year before the book is out. I don't want it to be a love letter to Ray Flynn. I want it to be about the people who were most affected by busing in Boston. I want to tell the people's side."

In the Stuart case, in which a husband killed his wife and almost succeeded in blaming it on a black man, said Flynn, "I have a lot of new material. I had access to everything because I was the mayor at the time."

The success for "The Accidental Pope" led to Flynn's current book, a February release, also written in collaboration with Moore and Jim Vrabel of Brookline, a former reporter and speechwriter.

The former mayor and ambassador will give a reading of "John Paul II" Tuesday, April 24, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Anthony's Pier Four, 140 Northern Ave., Boston. He will also speak at the South Shore Men's prayer breakfast Sunday, May 6, at 7 a.m. at Freeport Hall, Dorchester.

Flynn's relationship with Pope John Paul II goes back to 1969 when Karol Cardinal Wojtyla, archbishop of Krakow, Poland, visited the Polish Parish in Hyde Park and talked about sports and dockworkers with the newly elected state representative.

I had just been cut by the Celtics," said Flynn, who starred in basketball at Providence College. "And my father had been a dockworker in South Boston. We met again when he lectured at Harvard in 1976. Then he became Pope in 1978."

Right now, Flynn is gainfully employed as national president of the Catholic Alliance of Washington, which he describes as "a political education organization with four basic principles: Pro-life, pro-family, pro-the needy and pro-human rights."

He is getting ready for a national pay-TV panel and interview show which will debut next September. "It's family focused, the kind of show you would recommend to your daughter," he said. The pilot program features Martin Sheen of "West Wing" fame.

"Later on, we hope top have David McCullough, the author; Mario Cuomo, the former governor of New York; and movie star Faye Dunaway, who is a convert to Catholicism," he said. "The producer is Pat Roddy, who used to produce 'Nightline.'"

After 40 years in and out of politics, a career that ended in a resounding defeat for the U. S. Congress in 1998, Flynn still refuses to say with finality that he is through with politics.

"Am I through with politics? I don't know," he said. "I'd still like to be in elected office. If I thought I could make a contribution and I had the support of the people... well..."

John Cain Is Candidate For Ward 3 Council Seat

John Cain of 102 South Central Ave., Wollaston, is a candidate for the Ward 3 City Council seat.

Cain said he will make his official announcement at a 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. fundraiser Wednesday, May 2, at the Quincy Neighborhood Club on Glendale Road.

Cain, 55, is president of the Cain Corporation, a Quincy-based computer products and network solutions company.

Cain, who will be making his second bid for the Ward 3 seat, said:

"The issues I previously campaigned about continue to exist and are reinforced by more Ward 3 residents encouraging me to run."

"People want to be assured by our actions that what they say or feel about an issue will affect their councilor's behavior and decision-making process in representing Ward 3 and Quincy."

Cain said he believes that a more active approach in behalf of Ward 3 and its residents will generate better results for the neighborhood.

"With a ward that borders most of the other wards, it is important for the Ward 3 city councilor to participate in and with other ward councilors in establishing a clear set of short-term and long-term community goals that also involve input of the other councilors," he said.

"As a local business owner, husband and parent, and homeowner, my interest is more in common with the kind of City Council representation that should exist," he said.

Cain is married to the former Kathleen O'Hanley, whose family has Quincy roots going back more than 100 years.

They are parents of three children: Ian, 18, a freshman at Suffolk University; Erin, 12, a seventh grader at Central Middle School; and Liam, 8, a second grader at the Wollaston School.

Ayers Coffee Hour With Fenno House Residents

State Representative Bruce Ayers will hold a legislative coffee hour with the residents of Fenno House today (Thursday) at 1:30 p.m. at its 540 Hancock St. location.

Ayers, who regularly holds office hours in both his Quincy and State House Office, plans to meet with Fenno House residents to listen to their legislative concerns.

"I know that it is hard sometimes for the seniors, with their busy lifestyles, to arrange transportation and by coming out to visit the residents at Fenno House it makes it easier for them," Ayers said.

Ayers, who thanked Ruth

Morocco in helping to organize the coffee hour, said he plans to visit other senior housing communities in the near future.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

At What Age Should A Child See An Orthodontist?

By Dr. FRED ATTARZADEH

Most Authorities agree that 6 or 7 is a good age for your child's first orthodontic examination.

Conditions may be found that can be corrected at this early age by interceptive measures. This often will lessen or eliminate the need for held at an older age. That in turn can be a savings in the total cost of your child's orthodontic correction.

Please don't wait until your child has lost all of his or her baby teeth. There are definite advantages to correcting many problems at an early age. Waiting until all baby teeth are lost can often complicate an otherwise fairly simple problem. Let your orthodontist decide the best time to intercept or correct your child's orthodontic problem.

What is an Orthodontist?

An orthodontist is a dental specialist who has successfully completed at least two academic years of continuous advanced studies in an orthodontic program of a dental school or institution approved by the American Dental Association. This advanced training includes such diverse studies as physics, embryology, genetics, human growth and development, biophysics and engineering. Only those dentists with this advanced education can announce that they are orthodontists.

What causes crooked teeth?

Crowded teeth, thumb sucking, tongue thrusting, premature loss of baby teeth, a poor breathing airway caused by enlarged adenoids or tonsils can all contribute to poor tooth positioning. And then there are the hereditary factors. Extra teeth, large teeth, missing teeth, wide spacing, small jaws — all can be causes of crowded teeth.

Why should I be concerned about my child's bite?

A bad bite can be detrimental to the future of your child's mouth. Restorations, crowns, or bridges are often impossible for a dentist to perform without prior repositioning of the teeth by an orthodontist. Properly aligned and supported teeth are healthier, easier to clean, and therefore more likely to last throughout a patient's lifetime.

Dr. Fred Attarzadeh is a Tufts University graduate and is in private practice of orthodontics at 1050 Hancock St., Quincy. For more information call (617) 471-4600.

Preventing, Treating Arthritis

By DR. MARTIN RIGBY

Osteoarthritis is more commonly known as arthritis or degenerative joint disease (DJD). Literal translation of the word from Greek is: osteo (of the bone), arthro (joint) and itis (inflammation). In this condition the protective cartilage at the ends of bones in joints, particularly in the spine and legs, gradually wears away. The inner bone surfaces become exposed and rub together. The condition may be associated with broken bones or other traumatic incidents.

Generally, DJD develops from wear and tear in the body's weight bearing joints. The cartilage and bones cannot repair themselves quickly enough to keep up with the degenerative process. In some cases bony spurs develop on the edges of joints. These bony growths may cause damage to muscles and nerves, pain, deformity and difficulty in movement. More than 50 million Americans suffer from arthritis, one in seven people. Arthritis is the number one cause of movement limitation and probably the leading cause of disability, if you consider that people often become sedentary due to the associated aches and pains. The cause of osteoarthritis is unknown, although some people appear to have a genetic predisposition to degenerative bone disorders. In most people the onset of osteoarthritis is gradual and has no serious debilitating effect, although it can change the size and shape of bones. In other people bony growths and gnarled joints may cause painful muscle inflammation or nerve damage, along with significant changes in posture and mobility.

The primary symptoms of osteoarthritis are pain and stiffness upon awakening or after a period of rest. This stiffness tends to decrease somewhat when activity is initiated. X-rays confirm the diagnosis and reveal shrunken joint spaces or calcification at the ends of bones. Conventional medicine treats osteoarthritis is a three-phase approach: medication to relieve pain and reduce inflammation, rest of the affected area to allow tissue healing, and exercise to restore mobility and strength. A limitation of this approach lies in the fact that many of the pain relieving medications have been shown to increase the rate of cartilage destruction. They actually cause the cartilage to wear out faster, causing further pain and continued disability in the future.

Chiropractic treatment involves a doctor making a specific diagnosis followed by a trial period of manipulation of the affected joints. Chiropractic adjustments relieve pain by restoring normal joint relationships, which helps to restore the normal range of motion by increasing joint mobility. Cartilage receives its nourishment from movement and movement alone, so joint mobility is crucial. Every time a joint is moved through its range of motion, the synovial fluid within the joint bathes the cartilage, distributing nutrients throughout the cartilage surface. When movement is limited due to pain or inflammation, the cartilage does not receive an even distribution of nutrients and may deteriorate faster than if the normal joint relationships are maintained. Last, a chiropractor will prescribe exercise to increase strength and endurance. Both medical and chiropractic treatments help to manage the osteoarthritis, though neither can cure it.

Here are my recommendations to prevent or help arthritic conditions:

- Exercise. Try to walk daily. Weight bearing activity forces nutrients into cartilage.
- Stretch. This moves joints through their full range of motion, bathing cartilage within the joint in nutrient rich synovial fluid.
- Try a new supplement. Glucosamine Sulfate in combination with Chondroitin Sulfate has shown promise. It speeds the formation of new cartilage.
- Keep active. Even when pain is present, try to perform your daily activities.

Dr. Martin Rigby is a New York Chiropractic College graduate who completed his undergraduate education at the University of Massachusetts, earning his bachelor's degree in biology. Currently, he teaches biology and nutrition at Quincy College and is in private practice at 22 Billings Road, North Quincy. To contact him, call 617-328-3399.

Quincy Swings Back Into Action

Hosts Holbrook Saturday

By CHRIS POISSON

When the Quincy baseball team takes to the field Saturday morning against Holbrook, it will be its first game in 11 days — thanks to a rain-out last Thursday and with no games scheduled over school vacation this week.

For the Presidents, who have been blanketed in their last two games after a 5-2 win in the season opener against Randolph, the time off will either be what the doctor ordered or it will just prolong the early season slump.

"I don't know if that will be a problem," said head coach Michael Draicchio of his team's hiatus.

No. 1 starter, senior John Lupo (1-1, 2.39 ERA), will take to the hill Saturday at 11 a.m. looking to dust off from his last outing — an 11-0 loss last Tuesday to Old Colony League power Taunton at Adams Field.

"We haven't played since last week, so we're going to come back with Lupo," Draicchio said. "He's our best pitcher and we're going to go with him as often as we can. Hopefully, we can get a W."

Against the Tigers, Lupo kept his team in the game through four innings, but then the team burst like a balloon floating into a pine tree. The right-hander went 4 2/3 innings, allowing three runs and three unearned runs. He left the game after giving up a home run to the same kid that had already singled and double twice off him. Sophomore Rob Muollo finished out the game.

North Quincy Off To 3-0 Start

Through the first three games of the season, the North Quincy baseball team and the playoffs seems to be as safe as a bet as saying a Kenyan would win the Boston Marathon on Monday morning.

But just like the Kenyans' 10-year stranglehold came to an end, nothing is for certain — especially in the marathon-like high school baseball season where 20 games are squished in under two months.

With a huge win at Silver Lake last week, the Red Raiders have raced out to a 3-0 start, outscoring their opponents by a lopsided 29-2 margin.

Impressive, but head,

"It was a real good game," Draicchio said. "I thought Lupo pitched a great game. We didn't get him any runs and a couple errors hurt us."

The Presidents managed only one hit for the second straight game, a double by senior Brad DiMartino. Although they're not getting hits, Draicchio said they're hitting the ball, particularly the top of the order with senior Dave Centrella (.333 batting average), junior Dave Germain and senior Joe Thorley.

"Centrella and Germain are making contact; they're just not getting on base," he said. "Thorley has been hitting the ball, but he has been robbed a few times."

Defensively, Quincy has committed some costly errors in its last two games, but it has also made some spectacular plays. Sophomore third baseman Craig Keenan continues to shine at the hot corner, as Draicchio said he made a "great play" when he doubled off a runner at second to save a run.

Although the score was one-sided, Quincy played Taunton well and it's a good indicator of where the team is headed.

"Taunton and Silver Lake have been picked as the top teams in the league," Draicchio said. "I would tend to believe Taunton is the better of the two even though we haven't played Silver Lake. They have a lot of guys returning with 14 seniors. [This game] shows us where we're going."

And Quincy hopes that it will lead them to more wins down the road.

coach Larry Taglieri, like most coaches, still sees areas that need improvement if his team wants to continue on its path to the tournament.

"I've stressed to the kids that we can play better," he said. "We've made a few mental mistakes, but that comes with having a young team."

A young team as in only five returnees from last season and 13 first-year players at the varsity level. Taglieri expects some headaches this year, but if the co-captains and the top of the order keep up their pace, then they should be few and far between.

Bat To Be Presented To Quincy Legion In Memory Of Robert Brill, Jr.

The family of Robert Brill Jr., a former baseball standout in Quincy, will present the Quincy American Legion Post 95 baseball team with a new aluminum bat in his memory Saturday, April 28 at a team dinner/fund raiser.

The bat will be presented to head coach Bob Benn at the Post home from 7 to 10 p.m. Along with dinner, there will be music, raffles and a silent auction with many professional sports team items.

A former Quincy High School baseball star, Brill played for Quincy Post 95 from 1970 to 1972 before being signed by the Milwaukee Brewers and sent to the New York/Penn. League. After two years, he was signed by the St. Louis Cardinals and assigned to the Florida Coast League. He died of cancer in 1983.

All American Legion teams across the country will be required to buy new bats this season due to a change to the weight and size. Aluminum bats cost between $200 to $250 each. Post 95 will need four to six bats to start the season.

To buy a ticket ($10 per person) for the dinner/fund-raiser or to make a donation to the baseball team, contact Bob Benn at 617-472-4163, Jim Maze at 617-472-2752, Joe Brill at 617-770-4813 or Wayne Chambers at 781-899-1277.

Raiders Off To 3-0 Start

Milton Tuesday and today (Thursday) it travels to Braintree with junior pitcher Mike Feetham (1-0) scheduled to make his second start of the season at 11 a.m. Last Thursday's game at Taunton was postponed due to rain and has been rescheduled for Friday, April 27.

So far this season, seniors Keith Doherty and Chris Lockhead have played the role of co-captains admirably. In the 8-1 win over Silver Lake last Tuesday, Doherty and Lockhead did their damage from the mound and cleanup spot, respectively.

Doherty (2-0) tossed his second straight complete game, allowing just two hits, two walks and one unearned run while striking out 10 Lakers. Coming off his season-opening no-hitter against Brighton, Doherty again delivered the type of effort North Quincy needed to compete with — and beat — a team like Silver Lake.

With a shaky defense behind him, coupled with his own throwing error and balk that led to Silver Lake's only run in the second inning, Doherty was forced to get extra outs which pushed his pitch count to over 100, more than he threw in his no-hitter.

"We were a little sloppy defensively, so he might have thrown a few more pitches than he had to," said Taglieri of Doherty's second outing of the season.

"Silver Lake is one of the highly touted teams in the league," he added. "To go down there and beat them is a real positive."

Doherty was scheduled to make his third start Tuesday. In 14 innings this year, he has not allowed an earned run, while punching out 26 batters and yielding only three hits and three walks.

Meanwhile, Lockhead, the starting shortstop, continues to drive in runs as the cleanup hitter. In the seventh inning with North Quincy holding a 5-1 lead, he drilled a three-run homer to left field to seal the victory.

"He's doing the job of a cleanup man," Taglieri said. "The guys ahead of him are getting on base."

Indeed, junior Pat Bregoli has excelled at the leadoff spot and junior Wayne Moynihan (2 games) and senior Mike Keddy (1 game) have been effective No. 2 hitters. Against the Lakers, Bregoli went 2 for 3 with two RBI and was hit by a pitch and scored three runs to give him eight on the season. Moynihan went 3 for 4 with an RBI and a run scored.

"Bregoli's doing well," Taglieri said. "It's important for the guys at the top of the order to be productive."

"So far, so good."

A Message From Impact Quincy Public Health — Private Anguish

By ARTHUR
KEOUGH

Medical authorities, health practitioners, clinicians of all sorts have defined the damage of excessive use of alcohol on the body. Brain damage, liver failure and assorted organ and tissue decay are not negative effects that have been chronicled over the past 15 years as the results of excessive use of alcohol. Indeed, there is a public health threat in that over 10,000,000 people are abusing alcohol daily, weekly, monthly, yearly. (And these are the known, identified cases.)

When there is a public health threat, we usually find an organized campaign, locally or nationally, to counteract it and safeguard adults and young residents of Quincy. This is especially true when the threat is costing the business community a great deal of money. (In lost wages and medical costs, alcohol abuse cost American industry over $2 billion last year.)

But, except for the occasional commercial message in the media or the presence of an AA group at our local church or the presence of a Detox Center somewhere in a community, little public attention is paid to this most serious of public health threats. It is this as it here, vis-a-vis to common ailment.

Then there is the private anguish, the undesired perception that settles in a family. It is a domestic demon, which never goes away. Parents are destroyed; spouses are devastated; children are traumatized. Outside the family, no one knows the family, no one knows the anguish is private; the community must not know — must never know.

We talk about the quality of life when we attempt to make a judgment on the basic values of our society. The common good is what we aspire to achieve. Yet, we allow for that public health threat to exist and to grow around us. We also allow "quiet desperation" and anguish to be the state of affairs in the private corners of the lives around us.

We must stand and be counted as individuals who will not just stand by. We must get involved. Let us declare ourselves against the public health threat and be a majority of one. See your neighbor and take some of his/her anguish away; help your neighbor to be less desperate. So we are at peace. Prevention is better. IMPACT QUINCY can help you do this.

IMPACT QUINCY is the only local organization im-ping its media campaign at protecting our most vulnerable — the youth. Their activities are directed at the reduction of underage drinking among kids ages 12-17 in the city of Quincy. For almost 10 years, IMPACT QUINCY diligently fights along with different alliances and groups in our community to prevent teen drinking.

Their billboards, posters, newspapers, "Tips for Parents," monthly editorials in The Quincy Sun, cable TV commercials, education to bartenders and a close collaboration with local middle and high schools' programs is aimed at one and only one goal — to insure the decrease in the use of alcohol by teens in Quincy. Our support of their efforts will bring us closer to lowering future alcohol related statistics, improving public health and decreasing private anguish. Why not try?

The "Impact Quincy" editorials are a series of high-impact public service announcements published once a month in The Quincy Sun. The editorials, written by local officials and published health advocates, address critical substance abuse issues such as underage drinking in the city of Quincy.

Arthur Keough has been involved with Impact Quincy since the beginning of this program. He serves as a liaison between Impact Quincy and the office of the Mayor of Quincy, Mayor James Sheets.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TREATING AN ABSCESS

If dental decay is not dealt with promptly, bacteria may infect the tooth pulp. If pulp inflammation or infection is left untreated, it can, in turn, lead to an abscess. Symptoms include aching or throbbing pain in the tooth, sensitivity to hot or cold foods or liquids, pain on chewing, and fever. At this point, endodontic root canal treatment is indicated. This procedure involves removal of the nerve and vascular tissue (pulp) from the root and pulp chamber, as well as any associated decayed tooth structure. This allows the tooth to be spared from extraction. After the inside of the tooth is carefully shaped and cleaned, it is filled and sealed, awaiting a crown.

Don't wait until these procedures are necessary. Our goal is to help our patients reach their own unique and highest levels of oral health. We believe it is our responsibility to share our acquired knowledge and understanding of oral health with each and every patient, one on one. All of our patients are individuals, and as such will achieve our goal in different ways and at different paces. No two patients are alike, so no two treatment programs will be the same. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule your next dental checkup. Let us help you keep that winning smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Antibiotics will also be prescribed in the treatment of any abscessed tooth.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Have you ever noticed how some people seldom, if ever, make premature decisions? How they do not make decisions that cannot be made effective? How, if pressured for a decision, they often say "No" because they know "No" can later be changed more easily to "Yes"? Less easy to change from

"Yes" to "No"? How when they made a bad decision, they blame themselves, not others?

Lincoln illustrated a good formula for making good decisions. When he was severely criticized he said, "I do the best I know how; the very best I can; and I mean to keep doing so until the end. If the end brings me all right, what is said about me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, ten angels swearing I was right would make no difference."

On that formula there is seldom any need to hesitate, or "hem or haw." Base firm decisions on your best judgment, skills and abilities given you by God -- and do the best you can... People who make good decisions know how true this is.

Free Child ID Program At Masonic Building Saturday

Massachusetts Freemasons, in cooperation with the Massachusetts Dental Society and the Massachusetts Crime Prevention Officers Association, will sponsor a free Masonic Child Identification Program at Quincy Masonic Building, 1170 Hancock St., Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Because it incorporates ToothPrints, the Masonic

CHIP program is considered to be the most comprehensive program of its kind in the world.

The governor has proclaimed Saturday, April 21 as Masonic CHIP Day in Massachusetts and this is one of many CHIP events that will be conducted throughout the state on this day.

The event is particularly significant because ToothPrints were introduced into the Masonic CHIP program in Quincy in 1999.

Since then, it is estimated that more than 80,000 Massachusetts children have participated in these comprehensive programs throughout the state. Several dignitaries will be present to mark the occasion.

For more information call 1-800-882-1020.

rissey, and Stephen K. Marella, son of Ms. Patricia A. Marella, were accorded first honors by completing their courses with a grade of 85 or above.

Second honors for grades of 80 and above were given to Timothy M. Braga, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Braga; William B. Eagles, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Eagles Sr.; Nicholas P. Jacobson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Jacobson; Stefan L. Miranda, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence R. Miranda.

were given the license, that Tedeschi, his landlord, will completely remodel the store plus install new coolers. The beer and wine section, he said, would take only 15 percent of the store.

When Shea asked Shanahan what his policy would be on Sundays and holidays when persons are unable to purchase beer and wine, Shanahan said a curtain would cover the beer and wine and the cooler doors would be kept locked.

Two years ago, Shanahan came before the board which voted against the request. At Tuesday's meeting, he told the board that "I got beaten up," and said the reason he had the courage to return was because of the need mentioned by his customers.

Finally he told the board that opponents are "not speaking for the community," and his customers have all said they support his request.

After the vote was cast, Gorman said he wanted Shanahan to present a plan for the location of the beer and wine.

Yardwaste may be placed curbside April 16 through December 14, 2001 on your regular trash pickup day.

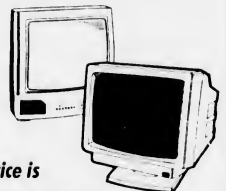

The drop-off facility at the DPW Backyard, 55 rear Sea Street, will still be open to Quincy residents Monday through Saturday from mid-April through mid-December and has been relocated so that residents do not have to drive far into the yard.

$ An incentive program is ongoing for residents who make the effort to drop off their materials and includes FREE YARD WASTE BAGS AND CASH PRIZES! $

It is mandatory that you use brown leaf bags, open barrels or cardboard boxes. No plastic bags will be accepted.

Please bundle/tie (with rope) branches and brush (in 3 foot lengths) separate from grass and leaves. Large tree limbs and heavy brush can be disposed of, unbundled, at the DPW yard.

TOE JOINT PROBLEMS

Toe joints are a common source of pain and problems in the foot. Ill-fitting shoes, systemic conditions like arthritis and poor biomechanics can contribute to toe joint problems. Gout - a form of arthritis involving the formation of uric acid crystals in and around joints - and infections can trigger heat, pain, swelling, tenderness and redness in the big toe. The big toe joint can also suffer a bunion from a misalignment that causes it to bend toward the second toe. The four smaller toe joints are susceptible to bending abnormally due to constricting shoes or excessively high or low arches. Corns may develop as the joints rub against shoes. Arthritis commonly affects the toe joints, causing pain, stiffness and swelling. Proper care of toe joint problems and other foot conditions is vital to your program of overall good health. We specialize in the evaluation and treatment of many symptoms affecting the lower extremities. Patients can be seen at our main office in Randolph at 999 North Main Street, as well as at the Quincy Medical Center, where we offer free valet parking. All appointments are scheduled by calling 781-986-3668. I am also affiliated with the Brockton, Milton, Good Samaritan and Carney Hospitals.

P.S. Your podiatrist can recommend treatment that will help relieve the symptoms of toe joint pain.

Quincy Medical Center To Host Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Management Program

Occupational Health Services at Quincy Medical Center will host the Kiwanis Pediatric Trauma Institute (KPTI) trauma management program Saturday, May 19.

The program is a nationally acclaimed continuing education course directed to anyone who deals with pediatric trauma. The targeted audience is emergency medical technicians (EMT's), Emergency Department staff, firefighters and police officers as well as nurses and school nurses who wish to enhance their skills in pediatric trauma management.

The program is approved for five hours of continuing education credit for basic and advanced EMT's, and for registered nurses six contact hours has been approved by the MNA.

The conference is being sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Quincy, Fallon Ambulance Service and Quincy Medical Center.

"The program has been touted nationally for excellence in addressing the latest thinking in pediatric trauma management," said Kiwanis President Bob Bunstein.

Dr. Octavio Diaz, chief of Emergency Services at Quincy Medical, said hosting the program at the hospital kicks off the annual EMS Week, which highlights the fine work of the men and women who are often the first medical response for accidents.

"This will be a wonderful way to kick off EMS Week and recognize these skilled professionals," Dr. Diaz said.

For more information and reservations, contact Kiwanis President Bob Bunstein at 617-479-5218 or Occupational Health Services at Quincy Medical Center at 617-376-5700.

Honoring The Women Who Served On WWII Home Front

assigned to write "a perfect business letter" describing a situation she felt was unfair. Having read about the honorary diplomas given many World War II veterans, including Quincy's, who left high school to serve in the war, Bloomer thought that the women who worked at the shipyard were also deserving.

Also recognized Monday was Fran Catrabone of Brockton, who began work in her early 20's as a welder at the Hingham yard. Together, the three women were honored as part of the city's tribute to the roughly 2,000 women who built ships and broke barriers at the shipyards during World War II.

In addition to the diplomas, the women were presented with U.S. flags which had flown from the USS Salem, a Quincy built heavy cruiser. Broad Meadows eighth grader Genevieve Humez-Rousseau led the crowded room in a stirring rendition of "America the Beautiful" and there was a moment of silence for all those lost in World War II, including North Quincy graduate William Caddy, a U.S. Marine who received the Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroism on the Pacific Island of Iwo Jima.

"Wow, I have my diploma," said an enthusiastic Vento, who dedicated the honor to her mother for allowing her to join the war effort at such an early age.

JOANNE CONDON-WALSH, executive director of the USS Salem, welcomes guests aboard ship as part of ceremonies honoring Massachusetts women who left their respective high schools during World War II to work in the Bethlehem Quincy and Hingham Shipyards.

Vento, now 75 and living in Quincy, also mentioned her many brothers and family members who served during World War II and thanked Adams and the Broad Meadows students for their hard work, predicting "another 'Greatest Generation' to take care of our beloved America."

Quincy High School Principal Robert Keuther presented the diplomas to Vento and Fisher, and officials making remarks at the ceremony were: Mayor James Sheets; Joanne Condon-Walsh, executive director of the USS Salem; Supt. of Schools Eugene Creedon; and Hank Bradley, director of Veterans Services.

Sheets praised the three women and those like them who produced enough armaments to supply Allied Forces on two fronts "at a pace and intensity unheard of" just when the world needed them most. He also thanked Adams, Bloomer, and the Broad Meadows students for "helping us to remember the sacrifice, dedication, and commitment that went into the winning the war."

Also making remarks, and making a homecoming of sorts, was Kerri Piccuito, a nursing student and corporal in the Marine Corps Reserves stationed at Fort Devens.

"I can only imagine how nervous they (the women shipbuilders) must have been," said the 20-year old Piccuito, a Quincy High School graduate who, as a student at Broad Meadows, was lead interviewer of the "Winnie the Welder" Women's Oral History Project now housed at the Schlesinger Library at Radcliffe College. "But they

THE TRADITION CONTINUES: Broad Meadows Language Arts teacher Ronald Adams shares a moment at Monday's honorary diploma ceremonies aboard the USS Salem with former student Kerri Piccuito, now a nursing student and corporal in the Marine Reserves; current student Mary Bloomer; and former student Margaret (McLean) Laforest. As a student, Piccuito served as lead interviewer in an oral history of women shipbuilders now housed at Radcliffe College. As a student, Bloomer organized the efforts to award honorary diplomas to those women who left high school early to work at the Bethlehem Shipyards. As a student, McLean led the campaign which brought the USS Salem home to Quincy. (Quincy Sun photo/Robert Noble)

MILDRED VENTO of Quincy, who left high school to work as a painter/scrapper at the Fore River Shipyard during World War II, gives thanks after receiving her honorary diploma from Quincy High School. sure did get the job done." "You are truly outstanding women," Piccuito added.

Although current Broad Meadow student Mary Bloomer is responsible for granting diplomas to Vento and Fisher and former Broad Meadows student Piccuito took the lead in telling their oral history years earlier, the line of Broad Meadows activism at the ceremonies ran even deeper, to the very ship itself.

On hand for the ceremonies was Margaret McLean Laforest, who as a middle schooler at Broad Meadows, again under the direction of Adams, founded and led the campaign to bring a Quincy-built warship home to Quincy.

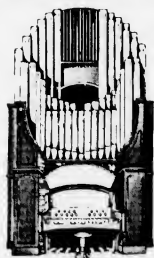

A graduate of the University of Miami, she now lives with her husband Jeffrey and their two children in Houghs Neck, but is closely connected to the USS Salem and the "can do" spirit of Broad Meadows personified by Adams.

"Ron Adams is an unbelievable teacher," she said, adding that, upon hearing Adams had won last year's Citizen of the Year presented by the Quincy Sun, she dropped everything on her schedule to attend. The self-esteem, the leadership, that's what Ron Adams teaches.

"I look at Mary Bloomer and I think, 'That was me 12 years ago.'"

As for the growing controversy as to where to locate the Salem, she also has an opinion: "I live in a house in Houghs Neck with an open dock. My neighbors and I would love it."

THE QUINCY HOMESTEAD, a handsome Colonial home at 34 Butler Rd. dating back to 1685, is being proposed by City Council President Paul Harold as the Official Governor's Mansion for Acting Governor Jane Swift and future governors.

Harold Proposes To State:

Make Quincy Homestead The Governor's Mansion

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Massachusetts reportedly is one of four states that doesn't have a governor's mansion.

City Council President Paul Harold wants to do something about that.

He proposes what he believes is the perfect place: the handsome, historic Quincy Homestead right here at 34 Butler Rd. and Hancock St.

"You wouldn't have to build one," he says. "It's already in existence. And it's already a mansion. It would need some renovation for year-round living. But it would be most appropriate as a governor's mansion. And it's nice and handy to the State House."

HAROLD

A lot handier, he notes, than Jane Swift's home in Williamstown something like 150 miles away where she is going to try to run the state while awaiting the birth of twins and then later commute.

The beautiful Colonial home, where John Hancock romantically proclaimed his love for the vivacious Dorothy Quincy by scratching "You I Love and You Alone" on an upstairs window pane with his diamond ring, and still visible today, is now state owned and under jurisdiction of the Metropolitan District Commission.

Harold hopes to convince MDC Commissioner David Balfour that the homestead would be an ideal residence for Swift and future governors.

He is inviting Balfour to come to Quincy to see for himself by touring the homestead with him. Mayor James Sheets and a representative of the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames.

The home, which dates back to 1685, is under lease to the Colonial Dames whose vintage furnishings and accessories maintain an interior lived-in historic look.

They also conduct visitor tours although last summer had to cut them to a by-appointment-only status because of a staffing problem.

Harold visualizes the governor and family living on the second the third floors with the first floor open to the public.

"It would be like the President's family in the White House," he says.

Harold first approached Balfour on the idea while they were attending the State House ceremonies at which Paul Cellucci turned the governor's office over to Swift just before leaving as ambassador to Canada.

And followed that pitch up with a letter this week in which he said:

"I believe that the Quincy Homestead would be both an appropriate Boston area home for Governor Swift and her

Cedrone Hopeful For Commission's Final Vote QHS Site Decision May Come Tonight

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Quincy High School Siting Commission could decide on its recommendation for the location of the new Quincy High School as early as tonight (Thursday), according to Christine Cedrone, School Committee member and chairwoman of the Siting Commission.

"The ideal situation would be for the commission to vote Thursday and make its recommendation to the School Committee the following Wednesday (at its meeting)," Cedrone said.

A public hearing on the controversial issue was scheduled for Tuesday in the Quincy High School Auditorium. Following the public hearing, the commission was scheduled to hold one final debate on the remaining sites Wednesday night from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Parker Suite in the rear of Quincy High School.

The expected vote tonight (Thursday) is also scheduled for 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Parker Suite.

Speaking to The Quincy Sun prior to Tuesday night's public hearing, Cedrone said she expected residents to come forward at the hearing "to let us know how they feel about the sites still on the table," which include The DPW headquarters at 55 Sea St., Faxon Field, Pageant Field in Merrymount Park, and the Park and Recreation

Police Chief Frane Continues Recuperation

Police Chief Thomas Frane, who had heart surgery Jan. 3 at Boston Medical Center, is undergoing a cardiac rehabilitation program at Quincy Medical Center, according to his office.

Frane suffered a heart attack in late December.

There is no indication as to when he will return to work.

Acting Police Chief Kelly said it all depends on the doctor's prognosis. Frane would "work at his own rate" when he returns.

Frane has been police chief for almost four years.

Kelly said he would "like to see him come back tomorrow." He said he thinks the stress of the job of police chief contributed to his attack.

Kelly said he hopes he returns soon, and that "he's in my prayers."

'Showing What We Were Up Against' World War II German Sub Joins USS Salem At Shipyard Museum

By TOM HENSHAW

Visitors to the USS Salem and its Shipbuilding Museum will be able to watch the enemy close up this summer.

The German midget two-man submarine KU-5075 will join the displays at the Fore River Shipyard just as soon as Jim Fahey, the museum's archivist, can restore the 38-foot craft, known as a Seehund (seahound), to its original condition.

The sub, which will be known at the museum simply as 075, was built in Kiel, Germany, in 1945 and captured as a prize of war in the same year. For several years it has been on display at the Submarine Force Library and Museum in Groton, Conn.

"The Germans built 285 Seehunde during the war," said Fahey. "They weren't involved in any real action but they were very effective at what they did. They were used mostly for coastal defense and to supply offshore stations. They called them 'butter boats.'"

"They were hauled up and down the coast on specially built trucks. When they spotted an enemy, they were launched, they dove, fired one of their two torpedoes, came up and were hauled away on the same truck."

In all, during the years of wartime activity (1944-45), the KU class submarines (for Kinder U-terseeboot or little submarines) sank more than 120,000 tons of Allied shipping at a frightful cost in German lives and equipment.

On New Year's Day, 1945, some 17 Seehunde sailed to attack a convoy.

Only two returned. Two were sunk by enemy action, seven were found beached, one was abandoned, one was found adrift and four disappeared without a trace.

Their score: one trawler sunk.

"We're not trying to glorify the U-boat menace by displaying the 075," said Fahey. "We're just showing people what we were up against during World War II."

Little is known of the individual exploits of the 075 but the captain, one Arnold Krug, is still alive and living in Munich, Germany, and there are about 40 members of the Seehunde Veterans Association, which is also based in Munich.

"I've written to the skipper," said Fahey, "and I'm awaiting his response to see what he has about the ship. I hope to visit him and members of the association when I go to Germany to research the German submarine U853."

Fahey plans to be in Germany seeking information on the U853, which sank Eagle Boat 56 off Portland, Maine, during the war, a loss that was originally attributed by the Navy to a boiler explosion.

The 075 is already in Quincy, stored beside the USS Salem at the shipyard. Fahey brought it here by truck in February. Just for laughs, he parked the truck in front of the Moose Lodge in Braintree and went into the bar to meet his friends.

"Anybody here," he inquired, "order a sub to go?"

GERMAN TWO-MAN submarine, called a Seehund, is dwarfed by the heavy cruiser USS Salem at the Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard. The submarine, taken as a prize at the end of World War II, will join the Salem on display once it is restored to its original condition.

May Is Mental Health Month

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
May is Mental Health Month through a designation of Congress. It is an annual, nationwide commemoration of bringing recognition to the value of mental health care and the impact it has on contributing to the well-being of our communities.

If you had a toothache, you'd probably visit a dentist. If you broke a bone, you'd seek medical attention at the local hospital's emergency room. But if you had a mental health problem or addictive disorder, would you seek help? Would you even know who to contact or where to go for that help?

Nearly half of all Americans will experience a mental health or addictive disorder at some point in their lives. But many won't seek treatment for these disorders because of the stigma associated with mental healthcare. But without treatment, the consequences can be devastating. Mental health and substance abuse disorders can tear families apart, cause people to lose their jobs, and impact the quality of day-to-day living.

The good news is help is available. South Shore Mental Health has mental health and substance abuse services throughout southeastern Massachusetts and the South Shore. With one phone call you can seek the help that you need. Just call (617) 847-1950. During May, Mental Health Month, make mental healthcare a priority after all, the wellness of your mind is as important as the physical well-being of your body.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 28, 1789, in the Pacific Ocean, Fletcher Christian, the first mate on the H.M.S. Bounty, led a successful mutiny against Captain William Bligh and his supporters. Christian and his men sailed back to Tahiti on the Bounty, and some later settled on a remote, unpopulated island. Descendants of the Bounty mutineers and the Tahitians still live on the island today.

• On April 29, 1854, by an act of the Pennsylvania legislature, Ashmun Institute, the first college founded solely for African-American students, was officially chartered. The institution was later renamed Lincoln University.

• On April 25, 1859, ground was broken for the Suez Canal, an artificial waterway intended to stretch 101 miles across the Isthmus of Suez and connect the Mediterranean and the Red seas. The massive construction project took more than a decade to complete.

• On April 24, 1916, on Easter Sunday in Dublin, the Irish Republican Brotherhood, a secret organization of Irish nationalists, launched the Easter Rebellion, an armed uprising against British rule. Although the British authorities quickly suppressed the uprising, the execution of the Eastern Rebellion's leaders and other harsh reprisals served to increase support for the nationalist cause in Ireland.

• On April 27, 1981, Xerox introduced its STAR 8010 information system, the first computer on the market to boast a mouse and a point-and-click interface. Xerox devoted nine years and some $50 million to developing the STAR, but the product failed, partly because of its sky-high price tag of $16,500.

• On April 26, 1994, more than 22 million South Africans turned out to cast ballots in the country's first-ever multiracial parliamentary elections. An overwhelming majority chose anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela to lead a new coalition government.

Quincy Homestead Governor's Mansion?

family and would be the best choice for a permanent governor's mansion for the Commonwealth.

"By designating the Quincy Homestead as the official residence, the necessary renovations and restoration would not only guarantee the future preservation of the homestead as a landmark but would also give it a new life by putting it to a modern public use."

By touring the homestead, Harold said, Balfour would see for himself "the expansive areas on the second and third floors that could be used for the family's private living quarters and the magnificent parlors on the first floor that could be used for public receptions, as well as the extensive grounds."

Harold noted he has visited governors' mansions in other states and believes "the Quincy Homestead is appropriate both in scale and in historic significance for this designation."

He said he also believes "the choice would be widely accepted among the people of the Commonwealth who would share in Quincy's important legacy from the Quincy Family."

Harold didn't mention it, but the house has secret passageways and chambers where John Hancock and other patriots reportedly hid from the British hunting for them as the Revolutionary War was simmering.

The house has a gubernatorial connection. Hancock, who wooed and won Dorothy Quincy there, became the Commonwealth's first governor under the Massachusetts Constitution.

They were to have been married there but the Revolution interrupted their plans with Hancock having to flee the British hot on his trail.

They were eventually married Aug. 28, 1775 at the home of Thaddeus Burr in Fairfield, Conn. Burr, who later became a vice president, was the uncle of Aaron Burr, who was one of Dorothy Quincy's suitors.

Hancock was a fiery patriot who as president of the Continental Congress was the first signer of the Declaration of Independence July 4, 1776. And as history tells us wrote his name in large, bold letters so King George III "could see it without his spectacles."

The first part of the house was built in 1685 by Edmund Quincy, the second, of the name. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund Quincy, the third.

The house was acquired by the Colonial Dames in 1904 who restored it and presented it to the state but continued to run it.

The house is rich in history and with the Hancock connection would make a most appropriate governor's mansion, says Harold.

This isn't the first time a permanent governor's mansion has been proposed. The Endicott Estate in Dedham was designated for Governor John Volpe in the 1960s but the idea somehow fell by the wayside.

THIS WOULD BE the Quincy address of the Governor's Mansion under City Council President Paul Harold's proposal.

Hopefully, the Quincy Homestead won't.

For the city, it would become a most prestigious address:

The Governor's Mansion, 34 Butler Rd., Quincy, MA 02169.

IT WAS A special tribute from a former student to his former teacher.

As City Council president, Paul Harold adjourned last week's council meeting in memory of Stella Krupka who was his seventh grade English teacher at Broad Meadows Junior High School.

A teacher in Avon and Quincy for 44 years before her retirement from Broad Meadows, she was also a talented calligrapher whose artistic work appeared on most area high school diplomas for more than two decades.

And, Harold notes, she also did the lettering for the Quincy Vietnam Honor Roll that is displayed in the lobby of the new City Hall.

AND THERE WAS a special tribute to Mike Guadiano whose Triangle Filling Station on Centre St. for years has been the favorite meeting place of many long-time friends who affectionately dubbed it "the City Hall of West Quincy."

Mike died last week and on the day of his funeral those friends remembered him in their own special way.

On the way from St. Mary's Church, the funeral procession passed Mike's home on Miller St. and then proceeded to the filling station. There, each vehicle in the procession, turned in, drove by the gasoline pumps in a fond salute to his memory, and then on out to Pine Hill Cemetery.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard view of the observatory on the top of Great Hill at the end of Houghs Neck. Built in 1901 the top deck of this octagonal shaped structure was over 130 feet above sea level. Being the highest point in all of Boston Harbor the tower provided spectacular views. And in the summer there was always a refreshing sea breeze here making this a most popular spot for visitors. In later years the open decks here were closed in and shingled. This is now the site of a private home.

Urges Support Of Bill Affecting Seniors

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
There is an important bill currently before the Massachusetts Human Services and Elderly Affairs Committee. The name of the bill is Equal Choice ($676) and was sponsored by state Sen. Brian Joyce.

Equal choice offers Medicaid eligible elders over 60 years old the option of receiving long-term health care at home or in an institution (nursing home). Most elders would like to age in place among family, friends, and familiar surroundings. Elders who opt for home health care can retain their independence and access to community services.

Over the next 25 years the population aged 65 and over in Massachusetts is expected to increase 48.5 percent from 843,000 to 1,252,000 people. This dramatic growth in the elderly population raises significant challenges for the Commonwealth in how we pay for and provide long-term care services.

As the largest source of payment for long-term care, the Commonwealth has a major stake controlling cost along with developing other payment sources. It also has an opportunity to restructure the delivery system to make it responsive to both the needs and preferences of consumers.

The governor's budget calls for $100 million dollars for health care, of which $68 million is earmarked for nursing home care. Surely some of this money can be re-allocated to home health care.

Many of us fortunate enough to live a long life will be facing these same problems. You can make the difference now by supporting this legislation. Please write, call, or e-mail your representative and senator and ask him/her to support Equal Choice ($676)

A Letter From 'John Adams'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I write somewhat reluctantly for it was never my want to appear vainglorious or larger than I am. (Coming from a rather short fellow that's not all that bad). I'm moved to write because it occurs to me that I must have committed some transgression, some verbal lashing, which undoubtedly was a momentary lapse in my otherwise good judgment, to warrant the placement of my likeness in a, well, less than notable place.

I am of this town, you know, my beloved Quincy. My childhood, what I learned and what I became was formed in these parts. The strain of my public career was always made tolerable by the thoughts of returning to my farm in Quincy. The air, the land, the sea, these surroundings were to me one of the chief reasons I lived as long as I did. (Even outlasting my dear friend Jefferson, if only for a minute or two).

I'm not one to brag but I thought the road I traveled was well marked with accomplishment: lawyer, diplomat, first vice-president, second president of our great Republic. Oh, and father of another president. It's said that I single-handedly wrote the Massachusetts Constitution which served as the basis for our national Constitution. Who am I to argue? And when it came time to draft the Declaration of Independence I thought it best to have a Virginian do the job. Better they claim that fame and be all the more rooted in our fight for independence.

Which brings me to the point of this letter. It seems that the one and only statue of this old patriot is tucked between two towering pine trees near the Quincy Center train stop. Not that I need a reminder of what a full life I led. But maybe my likeness will inspire a schoolchild or two to pursue the study of politics so that their sons and their sons will have the chance to study painting and poetry and music. Would it be too much to ask Quincy's leaders to give a bit more prominence to my likeness, maybe cut back those trees so I can be seen or, even, find some way to join me with my wife and son whose likeness is so wonderfully crafted and displayed in the center of town?

It seems to me that Quincy has much of which it rightfully should be proud. Its quarrying for the timeless granite stone, the great ships it built to help defend liberty, the site of the very first railroad. But it must never forget whose beacon still shines brightly for all those who come from distant lands seeking freedom, and perhaps my statue will do the reminding.

Quincy's Yesterdays Wigglesworth Asks FBI Help In Matson Case

By PAUL HAROLD

Congressman Richard Wigglesworth met U.S. Attorney General Howard McGrath requesting that the FBI help in the case of the disappearance of Danny Matson. April 26 - May 2

50 Years Ago

Young Danny disappeared from his home Jan. 19. The deep quarries around his home were searched without success. Some local law enforcement officials said that the case should be treated not as a disappearance but as a kidnapping case.

BURGIN CALLS FOR 24-HOUR AMBULANCE SERVICE

Mayor Thomas Burgin called for 24-hour hospital ambulance service following the recent death of a friend and neighbor whose transportation to the hospital in a police ambulance allegedly contributed to his death.

Burgin said his neighbor was not taken to the hospital but "shaken" to the hospital in the police vehicle. He died hours after arriving at the hospital. The individual's widow said her husband's dying words were that no one should have to suffer such type of transportation en route to the hospital and asked for the mayor to provide to 24-hour hospital ambulance service.

COUNCIL OK'S $1.6 MILLION FOR SCHOOLS

The city council approved $1.6 million for the construction of two new schools, Fermo St. and Germantown and additions to the Montclair School and Quincy Trade.

Estimated costs were $240,000 for the Fermo St. school, $106,000 for Germantown, $120,000 for the addition to Montclair and $500,000 for the addition to the trade school. At the request of the city manager, the wording in the bonding would allow for both short and long-term borrowing so the city could benefit from market conditions.

A YEAR ON BLACK'S CREEK is the title of Mary Smith's exhibit of watercolors and pastels detailing one of Quincy's most pristine areas. Smith's work will be on display at the Crane Public Library, Quincy Square, from April 28 to May 26.

'A Year On Black's Creek' Begins Saturday At Crane

The Thomas Crane Public Library begins a program of art exhibits in the new atrium with watercolors and pastels by Mary A. Smith entitled A Year On Black's Creek.

The exhibit begins Saturday and will be on display until May 26.

Smith's work is the result of several years of concentrated photography, drawing, and painting along Black's Creek. The theme is the weather and the seasonal changes in the estuary.

Black's Creek is located along Wollaston Beach Boulevard and Furnace Brook Parkway. Its shores back up to a hill in Pageant Field which offers a breathtaking, panoramic view of Quincy Bay. Low grassy tidal areas and a number of small islands provide a variety of walks and vistas. Fresh water from Furnace Brook comes down from the Blue Hills to join tidal flows into the creek at the Greenburg Bridge.

The park is full of wildlife and birds. It is also used for recreational sailing programs by the Quincy Parks Department and is one of the most pristine places in Quincy.

Although better known in Quincy and on the South Shore as a landscape architect, Smith has been drawing and painting for over 30 years. She is an associate member of the New England Watercolor Society and the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset.

In the past, she has shown her work at the South Shore Art Center, the Copley Society of Boston, the Staircase Gallery in Hingham, and the Wood's Hole Gallery in Wood's Hole. Her list show of paintings, prior to going to the Harvard Graduate School of Design, was at the Crane Library.

Smith recently won first place for watercolor in the Quincy ArtsFest.

She is president of Mary Smith Associates, Landscape Architects, located in Quincy. The firm is responsible for the design of the landscape for the new addition to the Crane Library as well as for many other significant landscapes in the Boston metropolitan area.

Twenty-five percent of the profit from the framed original artwork will be donated to the building fund for the new addition to the library. Donations will be made in the names of the purchasers as the work is sold.

DENTISTRY for the 21st century

by Steven A. Brustdn, D.M.D.

OF CONCERN TO WOMEN

It has already been established that pregnant women have a higher-than-normal incidence of gum disease, owing to raised hormone levels. This, in turn, results in dilated blood vessels, altered cells in the lining of the gums, and generally adverse conditions in the tissues surrounding the teeth. Women, therefore, are encouraged to pay special attention to their oral health before and during their pregnancies. Now, new research suggests that the same recommendation may hold true for women taking oral contraceptives. According to British researchers, who checked Sri Lankan women for gum disease, women on the pill were 32 percent more likely to suffer from gingivitis. More frequent dental cleanings and checkups may be in order for women taking the pill.

Are you or is anyone in your family expecting? Should you schedule additional cleanings? The main cause of periodontal disease is bacterial plaque, a sticky, colorless film that constantly forms on your teeth. A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. Let the expert professionals at our office help you look your personal best. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. When you leave our office feeling pleased with how you look and how well you've been treated, we know we've done our job. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. In the study mentioned above, researchers found that cases were worst in women who had more plaque on their teeth. This makes an even more forceful case for regular professional cleanings.

St. Christopher's Hospice Founder Visits City

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Dame Cecily Saunders, a physician, nurse and social worker who founded St. Christopher's Hospice in London and awarded the Order of Merit by Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, visited Quincy this week.

Dr. Saunders was given a tour Tuesday at the Church of the Presidents by Historic Tour Director Arthur Ducharme, and then escorted to the Adams Mansion.

Dr. Saunders conducted research on pain relief and emphasized the importance of comfort as its very basic elements if individuals are to be free to consider the meaning of their lives and the issues to which they may want to give attention.

Parent/Child Workshops At Crane Library In May

The Thomas Crane Public Library and the Quincy Family Network announce a new program for parents/caregivers and children ages 1-3: The Parent/Child Workshop.

The five-week series gives caregivers the chance to speak with experts in speech and language development, gross and fine motor skills, childhood nutrition, and locally available resources for families with young children.

The programs will be held Wednesdays from May 2 until May 30 from 10 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. at the main library in Quincy Square.

Each workshop features a community resource professional who will share the latest information in their field as well as answer questions. Age appropriate toys, crafts, and books will be available for children with plenty of time for playing.

Because space is limited, registration, which is underway, is required and limited to Quincy residents. To register, stop by the main library or call (617) 376-2411.

If possible, the program is intended to be a special time between caregiver and toddler. However, siblings, infant through age five, may accompany the registered participant.

CHECKING TIRE WEAR

Uneven tire wear may be due to simple over or under-inflation, or problems surrounding shocks, struts, ball joints, steering linkage, or weak springs. As a precaution against tire failure, check tires regularly.

Shoulder wear can be caused by under-inflation or hard cornering. Center tread wear usually indicates over-inflation. Cupping can be caused by an unbalanced tire condition, faulty wheel bearings, loose parts, fatigued springs, or weak shock absorbers. Camber or toe wear indicates misalignment due to loose, worn, or bent steering linkage components. Many camber and toe wear problems can be traced to spring fatigue, which causes the vehicle's frame to ride closer to the road. Diagonal

HINT: Monitor your vehicle's tire pressure every month or whenever the oil is changed.

Mass At Our Lady Of Good Counsel To Commemorate 50th Anniversary Of Rev. James Curtin Ordination

The Rev. James Curtin, former pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Parish, will celebrate a Mass at the church Sunday at 12:30 p.m. in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Rev. Curtin served as pastor of the parish for 14 years before retiring in 1999.

"No one ever really retires from being a priest," remarked Rev. Curtin, who, as a senior priest now residing in Dedham, volunteers his time between St. Bartholomew's Church in Needham and St. James Church in Boston. "Although I am enjoying more golf."

Rev. Curtin was born and raised in Watertown where he graduated from St. Patrick's grammar and high schools before entering St. John's Seminary in Brighton to study for the priesthood.

"Growing up, I always thought of being a priest," recalled Rev. Curtin, who noted a strong admiration for the priests then at St. Patrick's. "Many of my classmates did as well."

He was ordained by the late Cardinal Richard Cushing on April 11, 1951, at Holy Cross Cathedral, Boston.

After ordination, Rev. Curtin served at St. Joseph's Parish, Woburn; Star of the Sea Parish, Marblehead; Immaculate Conception, Malden; and St. Mary's, Melrose.

In 1972, in response to an appeal for priests from the Agana Diocese, Guam, and with the permission of Cardinal Humberto Medeiros, Rev. Curtin spent one year as pastor of Holy Family Parish in the village of Asan, Guam, a mostly Catholic village of 2,000 residents.

It was at Asan, Rev. Curtin said, where U.S. Armed Forces landed to liberate Guam during World War II, adding that many of his parishioners could recall Japanese occupation during the war.

On returning to the Archdiocese of Boston, he was assigned to Holy Name Parish, West Roxbury, until he was named pastor of Blessed Sacrament Parish, Walpole, in 1975. He served in that position until being named pastor of Our Lady of Good Counsel Parish on Oct. 16, 1984.

Rev. Curtin called his fifty years of priesthood "very rewarding," explaining that he has had the opportunity to be involved in all aspects of parish life, working with the young, the sick, and the elderly.

"In a regular parish there can be a wedding in the morning and a funeral later on," Rev. Curtin said. "You can go from joy to sorrow in one day."

Reflecting on his 50 years in the priesthood, Rev. Curtin said the most dramatic change in the church has been the allowance of increased participation from the laity, which he called a great benefit to a pastor.

"There's a lot of expertise to make use of right in your own parish," Rev. Curtin said.

Another sea change, he said, was the Vatican II reforms which, among other things, resulted in priests speaking English before parishioners rather than speaking Latin before an altar.

"That was a wonderful change," Rev. Curtin said. "I couldn't even imagine going back to the old way."

Rev. Curtin's Mass will be a Mass of Thanksgiving to God for his vocation to the priesthood, and for all those whom he served or who assisted him on his journey of 50 years.

Rev. Kevin Horrigan Named Pastor At St. Dorothy Parish

Quincy native Rev. Kevin Horrigan was recently appointed pastor of St. Dorothy Parish in Wilmington.

Son of the late Maurice Horrigan and Mary Horrigan, he attended St. John the Baptist Elementary School and Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree before earning his B.S. in Business Administration at Boston College. In the early 1960's he was a member the U.S. Army, completing both Airborne and Ranger training and serving in West Germany.

Following the military, Rev. Horrigan attended the Jesuit Philip Neri School before entering the seminary. He was ordained a priest in 1970.

Rev. Horrigan's father Maurice worked 47 years for the Quincy Highway Department.

McDermott Hosts Neighborhood Meeting

Ward 3C Councilor Patrick McDermott scheduled a neighborhood meeting for the Wollaston Hill community Wednesday at 7 p.m. at Wollaston Congregational Church, Winthrop Ave.

The theme of the meeting was "Bringing City Hall to the Community." McDermott invited representatives from various city departments to answer questions and listen to ideas from the community on how to better serve their neighborhood.

McDermott said the meeting is a first in a series he is conducting in order to bring government to the people it serves.

"In these busy times, with careers and families, residents do not often have the time to keep up with governmental activities," he said. "I have always felt that there must be trust between government leaders and the people. Government is only effective when it listens directly to the people it serves and takes initiative and action to bring about positive change in the community."

For more information, contact McDermott at 617-471-3366.

Mader Renews Opposition To New Logan Runway

A Massport FAA public hearing on the proposed new runway at Logan Airport was scheduled for Wednesday at the Radisson Hotel, 200 Stuart St., from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. and resuming from 6 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets and the city's representative to the Community Advisory Council to Massport and the Committee Against Runway Expansion, said she would testify against so-called runway 14/32 and urged Quincy residents to do the same.

At 6 p.m., Mader added, many communities would join at the hearing for a unified, vocal demonstration of opposition to the proposed new runway and centerfield taxiway.

Mader, a 21-year member and 19-year chairwoman of the Community Advisory Council, gave many reasons for her opposition to the sixth new runway at Logan airport, saying that the new runway would address less than one percent of the delays caused at Logan and that, in fact, only four percent of Logan flights are actually delayed for any reason.

Mader pointed to specific neighborhoods such as North Quincy, Squantum, Wollaston Beach, Merry-mount, Adams Shore, Houghs Neck, Germantown, and Quincy Point which would be affected by the new runway, with respect to both noise and the number of daily overhead flights.

On three different occasions, Mader said, Mayor James Sheets and the City Council have voted unanimously against the building of the new runway.

Massport recently released its final Supplement Environmental Impact Report and awaits FAA approval before construction of the 5,000 foot runway can begin.

Flood Insurance Can Help Homeowners Be Better Prepared

After a flood, insurance can go a long way toward putting the piece back together. Nobody, increasingly, has the time or the talent to fix everything on their own. Flood insurance can reimburse a homeowner for the cost of repairs to damaged property and help pay the cost of lost income and business.

President Bill Clinton declared that Massachusetts a disaster on April 10 following the storm and flooding March 8 to April 16.

Norfolk County has 3,700 policies in effect protecting almost $46 million in property. In the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, "10 flood insurance claims have been filed since the storms and flooding began on March 5."

Year in and year out, flooding is the leading cause of property loss from natural disasters in this country," said Federal Coordinator Officer Louis H. Bonta of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). But all too often homeowners learn after the fact that protection against flood loss is not part of their normal insurance protection package.

The recent flooding event we have experienced in the Commonwealth continues to highlight the need for homeowners to be better prepared. Flood insurance is one such tool," said Stephen McGrath, state coordinating officer and director of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency.

Important features of the National Flood Insurance Program are:

- Anyone can get flooded, and anyone can get flood insurance. Even if you have been flooded before, live in a flood zone or if your flood risk is high, medium or low, you can purchase flood insurance if your community participates in the NFIP. In order to participate, the community must adopt and enforce local floodplain management ordinances designed to reduce the risk of future flood losses. Check with your local officials to see if your community participates in the NFIP or call the NFIP toll-free hotline at 1-800-427-4661.

- Flood damage is not covered by homeowner's insurance policies. You can protect your home, business and belongings with flood insurance. You can insure your home for up to $250,000 for the building and up to $100,000 for the contents.

- Contents coverage is separate. It is not automatically included with building coverage. Ask your agent. Renters can insure their belongings, too.

- Flood insurance pays even when no disaster is declared. Statistically, federal disaster declarations are issued in less than 50 percent of flooding incidents. An NFIP policy will pay for flood damage whether or not there is a federal disaster declaration.

- Flood insurance is affordable. The average flood insurance policy costs a little more than $300 a year for about $100,000 of coverage. A policy for a dwelling in low- to moderate-risk areas may be as low as $100 a year.

- There is a 30-day waiting period before a flood insurance policy becomes effective. You can purchase flood coverage at any time, but there is a 30-day waiting period after you have applied and paid the premium before the policy becomes effective.

- Call your own insurance agent. NFIP flood insurance is sold through private insurance companies and agents, and is backed by the federal government.

- Insurance is less expensive than federal disaster loans. Average annual premiums for NFIP coverage are significantly less than loan payments, even though those loans are granted under favorable terms.

- Eligibility for secured financing to buy, build or improve structures in special flood hazard areas. Lending institutions that are federally regulated or insured must see evidence of NFIP coverage before they grant secured financing.

Bonta notes provisions in the National Flood Insurance Reform Act of 1994 require homeowners who live in communities that participate in the NFIP and receive a grant through the Individual and Family Grant program following a presidentially declared disaster, must purchase and maintain flood insurance for the life of the property. If they do not, they will not be eligible for certain types of federal disaster assistance in the future. If the property is sold, the seller must inform the buyer of the requirement to maintain flood insurance coverage.

Persons who obtain a U.S. Small Business Administration disaster loan may be required to purchase and maintain flood insurance for the life of the loan.

For complete information call the National Flood Insurance Program toll-free at 1-800-427-4661.

Massachusetts residents who sustained damage from the March storms and floods may still register for assistance by calling 1-800-462-9029. The TTY number for hearing- and speech-impaired is 1-800-462-7585. Numbers are available from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., seven days a week until further notice.

Homebuying Education Seminar Saturday

Are you thinking about buying a home in the near future? If so, then mark your calendars to attend a free seminar later this month.

The event, sponsored by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) and Jack Conway & Co. Real Estate, will feature an in-depth discussion of the buying process and mortgage financing options, including how to buy a home with a low downpayment.

Participants in the April 30 seminar also will find out how to obtain a free copy of their credit report, said Carol Bulman, president of Conway Financial Services, the mortgage-financing arm of Jack Conway & Co.

"It's a fantastic opportunity for people to learn what's available to them," Bulman said. "We encourage everyone thinking about buying a home in Boston's neighborhoods and the surrounding areas to come and have their questions answered."

The homebuying education seminar — the first in a series of sessions to be held during the coming months — is set for Monday, April 30, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Florian Hall, 55 Hallett St., Dorchester.

Special guests will include Maureen Moriarty of the MHFA, who will provide information on low-cost loan programs for first-time buyers. Founded in 1966, the MHFA is the leader in affordable housing finance in Massachusetts.

Reservations are not required, but are preferred since space is limited. To register, send an e-mail to info@conwayfinancial.com with your name, address, phone number (and be sure to reference the Dorchester seminar), or call 1-888-831-1181, ext. 376.

GETTING CHOOSY

When choosing a real estate agent to market their homes, sellers should select someone who puts their interests above all else. To begin with, this means posting the seller's home on the multiple listing service within one to two days. Limiting the listing for a few days to agents working for his or her brokerage may double the broker's commission with an in-house sale, but it does nothing to benefit the seller. Beyond that, the home should be represented with a photo listing on the Internet, as soon as possible, to give it the widest possible exposure. And, when offers are made, they should be presented promptly. Real estate professionals should expect to be held to high standards.

THE NEW ERA

REAL ESTATE is a progressive, energetic and forward-looking real estate office with sales associates who know the community and the people we serve. As a measure of our success, our sales volume has increased over 300% in the past five years. We offer sellers broad exposure to the market through the Multiple Listing Service, ads in local papers, and open houses. We have a list of pre-qualified buyers, which allows us to show homes to serious buyers. Call us at 617-328-1312, or visit us at 128 McGrath Highway for exceptional residential and commercial real estate service.

Hints For Homeowners

Cleaning Puts Spring Back In Carpets

CAUTION — You may be surprised to hear that the low down on carpets is they can be easy to keep clean and fresh.

According to Jennifer Dickey, a consumer expert at Racine Industries Inc., carpet cleaning can be made easy and hassle free with a "dry" carpet cleaning system.

Dickey recommends renting a dry cleaning system such as HOSI. She says the advantages of the cleaning machine will soon become crystal clear.

Easy Cleaning — Dickey says the dry carpet cleaning system is very effective at removing deep down soil, dust and allergens. She recommends applying HOSI Sponges Carpet Cleaner to the rug and brushing it in with the lightweight machine and vacuuming up the soiled cleaner when dry.

"Regular cleaning of just the traffic areas prevents dust from building up on the traffic paths," says Dickey.

Breathe A Little Easier

Dry cleaning can remove as much as 75 percent of dust mite allergens and 85 percent of pet allergens commonly found in carpets.

Furniture Stays Put

Since heavy furniture can stay right where it is during dry cleaning, the cleaning system may let homemakers restore the carpets in their home or apartment quickly.

The equipment requires no setup and no mixing of water and chemicals or loading with any cleaning agents. In addition, the machine's brushing action serves to pull the machine, making it easier for a person of most any size to use it.

Spots And Spills Removed As You Go — Drink and food spills usually occur within high-use areas. Regular dry cleaning with HOSI can remove many of these stains, leaving carpets clean and fresh smelling.

Keep Stairs In Use

Always a high traffic area, stairs can more easily be kept clean and in service through dry cleaning. Dickey says the machine's removable handle makes cleaning treads and risers easy — and no drying time means that stairs can be used immediately after cleaning.

Take The Offensive

Weekly vacuuming and regular dry carpet cleaning (every four to six months) may be the best defense against soil and allergen accumulation.

New Loan Rules Would Help First-Time Home Buyers

By CAROL BULMAN
President
Conway Financial Services

Our lawmakers continue to push toward lofty goals of homeownership set by the federal government, and once again the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) mortgage program is the instrument to do so.

Last year a bill was passed that lowered the required upfront mortgage insurance premium from 2.25 percent of the purchase price to 1.5 percent for all FHA borrowers. This year, the House and Senate have sharpened their pencils again through two new bills that will save many buyers even more money.

The FHA, a division of the U.S. Housing and Urban Development (HUD), insures loans made by private lenders. Since 1934, the FHA loan has helped millions of people purchase a home through mortgage programs with competitive interest rates and flexible qualifying standards.

These more lenient guidelines include a lower downpayment than on conventional loans, the option of financing some closing costs, the allowance of gifts from relatives for the downpayment, and more generous qualifying ratios.

These initiatives are now being considered in Washington, and we congratulate the lawmakers who sponsored them.

First, Rep. John LaFalce (D-N.Y.) has introduced a

CAROL BULMAN

Under the bill, called the "Homeownership Opportunities for Uniformed Services and Educators" Act (or "HOUSE"), a teacher, police officer or firefighter would put down 1 percent of the purchase price in cash. The FHA would finance the remaining closing costs.

The HOUSE program would also defer the upfront insurance premium. Each year that the person stays in the home, 20 percent of the mortgage insurance would be waived, giving an incentive for the owner to remain in the home for at least five years.

In recent press interviews, Leach said the bill provides a "direct benefit to the people who teach our children and protect our homes and our families." LaFalce added, "It is a win-win for everybody. This bipartisan legislation will help school districts and localities recruit and retain qualified teachers, policemen and firemen by significantly lowering the downpayment hurdle."

So, kudos to the federal government for its creativity and initiative toward helping future homeowners. We will watch carefully the outcome of these bills and will hope that they have a smooth journey through the House and Senate.

Carol Bulman lives on the South Shore and is chair of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association, the trade organization of the Bay State's mortgage brokers. Bulman also is president of Norwell-based Conway Financial Services. If you have any questions about home financing issues call CFS at (781) 681-9400 or (888) 831-1181.

bill that would reduce the FHA downpayment requirement for first-time buyers who complete a homebuyer counseling program.

Although the ranking Democrat was pleased with FHA's initiative this past year when the upfront mortgage insurance premium was reduced, he is calling upon the agency to do more.

LaFalce's bill would reduce the FHA loan downpayment required of eligible first-timers by nearly 1 percent. The FHA would continue to allow a portion of the closing costs to be added to the mortgage amount, contributing to the savings.

Second, a bill is on the table at Washington that will make it easier for teachers, policemen and firemen to purchase homes in the communities where they work.

If passed by Congress, this bill will reduce the downpayment requirements and mortgage insurance costs on an FHA loan for these groups of buyers. This bill is being sponsored by Sen. Charles Schumer (D-N.Y.) along with Reps. Jim Leach (R-Iowa) and LaFalce.

Quincy Group Attends In Washington McCullough Lecture Boosts Support For Adams Family National Memorial

Mayor James Sheets was scheduled to pay a visit to Washington, D.C., Tuesday evening to hear renowned author and historian David McCullough speak of the legacy of John and Abigail Adams and lend his support to a proposed national memorial to the Adams family.

Sheets was invited by Congressman William Delahunt and Indiana Congressman Tim Roemer, who are co-sponsoring legislation which would authorize a commemorative work to the Adams family, including Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, and the Adams' legacy of public service.

McCullough's lecture, which was free and open to the public, took place in the Coolidge Auditorium of the Jefferson Building of the Library of Congress. It was entitled "The Enduring Examples of John and Abigail Adams."

McCullough is the author of many acclaimed books, including a biography of President Harry S. Truman, which won the Pulitzer Prize. He is also known to millions of Americans as the host of "The American Experience" on public television.

McCullough's new biography of John Adams is due out in May.

Several members of the privately-run Quincy Partnership, which is planning a statue of John Adams to be placed in front of City Hall, also attended the event.

Among those known to be going were: Mark Bertman of Rogers Jewelry; Donald Uvanite of Allied American Insurance; Edward Keohane of Keohane Funeral Home, chairman of the Quincy Partnership; and Robert Curry of Curry/Ace Hardware.

The mayor was scheduled to travel to Washington

D.C. following a two-day meeting in Cleveland, OH, of the National Boating Safety Advisory Council, of which he is a member.

Sheets was due to return to Quincy mid-week.

Delahunt and Roemer's legislation on an Adams memorial, which would be sponsored in the Senate by Senator Edward Kennedy, would establish a non-profit to raise funds and work with the three federal commissions responsible for erecting monuments in the nation's capitol.

As yet, there is no design or estimate for the proposed memorial which, if the bill were to be signed by President George W. Bush, would have seven years after that date to be constructed.

Currently, no national commemorative honoring the contributions of the Adams exists in Washington, D.C.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS reads to a group of rapt youngsters during Read-A-Thon at the Montessori School for Early Learning at Bethany Church. Dominique Mounthou is director of the school and Kristan Bagley-Jones is president of the board of directors.

Recognizing Alcohol Problems

By TOM O'TOOLE, M. Ed., Certified Alcohol And Drug Addictions Counselor

The term "alcohol problem" refers to drinking which harms the drinker directly, jeopardizes the drinker's well-being or places others at risk. Alcohol problems range in severity from occasional binge drinking to alcohol abuse or dependence, also known as alcoholism.

Below is some information to help you determine if you or someone you know may have an alcohol problem and, if so, where to go for help.

How To Recognize An Alcohol Problem

Certain behaviors are known to be possible early signs of an alcohol problem.

ED O'TOOLE

These include:

- Drinking to calm nerves, forget worries or to boost a sad mood.
- Feelings of guilt.
- Unsuccessful attempts to cut down or stop drinking.
- Lying about or hiding drinking habits.
- Causing harm to oneself or someone else as a result of drinking.

• Needing to drink increasingly greater amounts in order to achieve desired effect.

• Feeling irritable, resentful or unreasonable when not drinking.

• Medical, social, family, work or financial problems caused by drinking.

Causes

Although alcohol abuse and dependence can be inherited, having a family who is an alcoholic does not necessarily mean you will develop a drinking problem too. A combination of genetic, social and environmental factors determine who develops alcohol problems.

Treatment

A variety of treatments exist for alcohol dependence including education, counseling, self-help groups, medication, detoxification and rehabilitation on either an inpatient or outpatient basis.

South Shore Mental Health's Quitting Time Addictions Services program provides outpatient and intensive evening outpatient services for individuals with a primary addiction to alcohol and/or other drugs. The program features the 12-step treatment model, random testing, psychopharmacology and 24-hour emergency services. If you are looking for addictions services in the South Shore area, call Quitting Time at 617-847-1923 or (800) 852-2844, ext. 1923.

South Shore Mental Health is a community resource providing mental health and substance abuse services throughout the South Shore, Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod. For more information about any of the programs call 617-847-1950.

Chiropractic Update

WHAT ABOUT THAT PAIN IN THE NECK?

We've all heard the expression, "You give me a pain in the neck," meaning that stress can affect us in a painful way, especially if there is weakness in one's neck.

The neck is the most delicate part of the spine and the most easily injured. It is composed of seven separate bones that are loosely connected together by ligaments and muscles. The structure of the neck allows for great mobility, but also predisposes it to injury. Poor posture, occupation, falling asleep in a chair or on the couch, car accidents, falls, twists and strain take their toll on the neck (cervical spine).

The part of the nervous system housed within the bones of the neck is an extension of the brain. Displacements or misalignments of the neck bones may cause pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves commonly referred to as "pinched nerves."

Some of the symptoms seen most often with pinched nerves in the neck are: headaches, sinusitis, dizziness, neck pain, shoulder pain, and pain, numbness and or tingling into the arm, hand or fingers.

One should always consult a chiropractor after a motor vehicle accident, fall or strain, even if you do not think you are hurt.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 617-773-4400.

Presidents Baseball Making Strides

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy baseball team's 2-1 win over Holbrook last Saturday evened its record — and equaled the total number of wins from the last two seasons combined — but its stay at the .500 mark was short-lived.

Quincy (2-3) traveled to Silver Lake Monday afternoon and held a lead in the fifth inning before it suffered a couple of defensive breakdowns that led to a tough 4-3 loss.

Although it counts as a loss in the standings, it's definitely a sign that the program is making major strides, as it held its own against one of the top teams in the Old Colony League. (For those who followed the team last season, you'll remember Quincy's 24-4 loss to the Lakers at home.)

"This is a big confidence builder for the team," said head coach Michael Draicchio. "To me, we've made a 100 percent turnaround. We were in the game the whole time. We had a lead."

"I'm proud of the guys," he added. "They're working their tails off and good things are going to happen. We're going in the right direction. I'm overwhelmed with the way things are going. Big difference from last year when we weren't in a lot of games."

Quincy has a difficult stretch this week. It traveled to Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) and today (Thursday) it hosts Barnstable at 4 p.m. On Saturday, it heads down to Scituate for a non-league game against a strong team from the South Shore League. "We're busy this week," Draicchio said. "I think we can play with all these teams. I'm optimistic about this week."

Silver Lake took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, but Quincy got the run back in the second. Senior co-captain John Lupo led off with what appeared to be a home run, but was ruled a double. Senior Joe Duffy ripped a hard single to left to put men on the corners, and freshman Matt

Germain brought in Lupo with a fielder's choice.

In the third, Quincy touched up Silver Lake with a pair of runs for a 3-1 lead. Sophomore Craig Keenan singled and stole second base and scored on junior Dave Germain's double. Germain reached third on an error and crossed home plate on a passed ball.

the lead until the fifth inning when Silver Lake scored two runs with two outs to knot the score at 3. It scored the tying run on a Quincy error. Quincy almost got out of the inning unscathed. With a runner on second and two outs, a Laker hit a flare into short left field, but Lupo, playing shortstop, couldn't quite chase it down despite a tremendous effort and Silver Lake scored to make it 3-2.

In the sixth, the Lakers scored the go-ahead run with two outs on another Quincy error.

"It's unfortunate that we have a lot of guys who don't have a lot of experience," Draicchio said of his team's late miscues.

'Robbed' Quincy Gives Fans Its Money's Worth

By CHRIS POISSON

As the ice cream trucks came out of hibernation with the warm weather earlier this week, the Quincy softball team probably didn't buy any snow cones after its home opener Monday afternoon at Mitchell/McCoy Field.

Trailing 5-3 with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning, cleanup hitter Liz Campbell, a sophomore, smashed a ball to right field that had game-tying double written all over it. But the Silver Lake fielder ran backwards, lunged her glove toward the sky and made the snow cone catch to end the game.

"Oh, the snow cone," said head coach Mike Sedar. "Well, the wind is blowing in and that didn't help us. I thought it was over her head. That's the kid to do it. Liz is probably one of our better hitters. She kills the ball. I told her to get her money's worth. She certainly did."

The Presidents (0-2 Old Colony League) gave their fans their money's worth, too. With five starting sophomores and only two seniors, they showed that there are good times ahead for this program. Quincy hosted Falmouth yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. and today (Thursday) it travels to Barnstable.

"The ump just said to me it's the best team he has seen in a long time," Sedar said.

"We needed this. We just needed to be in a game. What's going to happen with us this year, I don't know. As long as we are in them."

After the first two innings, though, it didn't look like Quincy was going to put up much of a fight against the powerful and poised Lakers. Quincy showed its inexperience by committing five errors that put them in a 5-0 hole at the end of two frames.

Sophomore hurler Stacey Andrew only allowed two hits in the first two innings, but the defense couldn't come up with the routine plays. Andrew, however, seemed unfazed and went on to pitch a complete game.

"We gave them a few runs in the beginning there," Sedar said. "We made some young errors. We're going to make some young errors and mistakes. We're a young team with five sophomores. After that, we played with them."

Indeed, Andrew seemed to have found a groove on the hill. After yielding back-to-back singles to lead off the fourth inning, she turned it up a notch and retired the next 11 batters and 12 of 13 to close out the game. The defense also helped her out as it handled 10 chances flawlessly.

Softball

"She pitched well," said Sedar of Andrew, who allowed five hits and two walks while fanning five. "She pitched hard. She did what we've been asking by keeping the ball down low. She did a great job with that."

Offensively, Quincy had a chance in the first for a big inning. The first two batters reached base, but were both thrown out on a double steal attempt that seemed to deflate the young squad as its bats went cold over the next several innings.

In the fifth, the Presidents finally made it around the bases. Sophomore Jennifer Gropp led off with a walk and stole second base. Andrew pinch hit for freshman Kaitlyn Markham and ripped an RBI double to left field for the team's first run.

Andrew moved to third on senior Andrea Verlicco's groundout and scored when sophomore Diane Gilbody grounded to the Laker pitcher, who threw a low ball that the first baseman couldn't come up with cleanly. Gilbody reached second on the play. Silver then made another error on junior Michelle Pilalas' groundout to second, and Gilbody came around to score with great hustle to make it 5-3.

"This was a great home opener," Sedar said. "We played pretty good defense for the most part. Couple bunnies early. And we're still not swinging like we're capable of. We'll get there, it's only our second game."

Quincy Local Signs Final Beam Prior To 'Topping Off' Ceremony At CMGI Field

DAVID MAHER of Quincy signs the ceremonial steel beam recently used for the 'topping off' of steel construction at CMGI Field in Foxboro. Maher is employed as an Iron Worker for the project. Recognizing a construction tradition, each of the workers on the construction site signed the ceremonial beam. There are approximately 325 workers on the project. Before its completion, over 1,000 workers will contribute to the construction of CMGI Field. The placement of the beam signifies the 'topping off' of structural steel. CMGI Field is the future home of the New England Patriots and the New England Revolution. It is the largest privately-financed construction project in the history of New England and will open in 2002. CMGI Field will be a 68,000-seat, state-of-the-art stadium.

QUINCY KIWANIS CLUB President Bob Bunstein (left) and Vice President John McGillivray discuss the planning for the club's annual Kiwanis Family Safety Day Saturday, May 19 in Quincy Center. McGillivray serves as this year's chairman of the event and extends a welcome to other agencies, directed toward children's safety, that may want to become involved. He can be reached at (617) 774-0907 for further information.

Quincy Kiwanis Safety Day Goes City-Wide May 19

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy will sponsor what has become an annual family event — a safety day — on Saturday, May 19.

Each year this civic-minded group sponsors a bicycle safety day; this year it will be expanded in several ways. It has been a tradition to choose a specific school each year to host the event.

This year, every Quincy school will be invited to participate and a central location has been chosen to make it convenient for all.

The Parkway in Downtown Quincy will be transformed into a miniature roadway. Students and their bikes will then be put through safety testing places.

The program is directed toward teaching elementary age children and their parents safety skills in a fun-family setting. Approximately 400 children from newborns to age 14 are killed in bicycle accidents each year. Thousands more are treated in emergency rooms for bicycle related injuries.

Bicycle helmets have reduced the risk of head injury by 85%; only five percent of children cyclists nationwide use bicycle helmets.

The Kiwanis Club of Quincy is committed to preventing accidental injuries to children. During its family safety day May 19, the club will make available, for only $10 each, an approved bicycle helmet. The size range will include adult sizes and in popular color combinations.

The special miniature course is designed to teach children how to ride safely and a free adjustment of all children's bikes will be available. Several city safety specialists will be on hand to distribute important pertinent information.

Refreshments will be available.

In cooperation with the Quincy School Department, reminders of the event will be distributed throughout the city.

For more information, contact John McGillivray, Kiwanis vice president and family safety day committee chairman, at 617-774-0907.

Mental Health Matters

A Troubling Prejudice

By HARRY SHULMAN
President, CEO
South Shore
Mental Health

There is a troubling prejudice in America.

It is a prejudice shared by people of every race, religion, and age. It is a prejudice that exists regardless of education level or walk of life.

That prejudice is the belief that mental illness is not really an illness and that people who suffer from a mental disorder are weak, dangerous or strange. It is a prejudice that prevents many who suffer from a mental illness from seeking the help they need.

Mental illness, left untreated, can tear families apart, cause job loss, school failure, and severely impair the quality of day-to-day life.

May is National Mental Health Month. It is true that there seems to be a month for just about anything and everything. But of all issues facing Americans, perhaps none is both as widespread and misunderstood as mental illness.

Consider these facts:

- Mental illness strikes one in five Americans in a given year. It is the most prevalent health problem in America today, more common than cancer, lung and heart disease combined.

- Nearly half of all visits to primary care doctors are related to psychological disorders like anxiety and depression.

- Stress and depression rank as the second and third largest problems, respectively, that employees report facing.

We are still learning about the origins of mental illness. In some people, it can be caused by a chemical imbalance in the brain; in others, by life circumstances and experiences. And for some, the cause is genetic. Whatever the cause, however, treatment today by psychotherapy and modern medications can be effective in treating mental illness.

The major reason people do not seek help is the stigma attached to a mental illness. That is why each of us has a role to play in eradicating stigma.

If an employee is dealing with substance abuse, a supervisor should encourage them to get help. If a family member has a mood disorder, like anxiety, others in the family should support attempts to solve the problem. If a teenager is angry and mentioning suicide or violence, this should be a red flag that counseling is needed immediately. And if we interact with someone who has a chronic mental illness, like schizophrenia or manic-depression, we should recognize that this person has a disease, not a weakness in character.

While prejudice is destructive, acceptance can be tremendously constructive. In the case of mental illness, the understanding and reinforcement people provide can be the difference between a productive life and a troubled one. Let us all work to make the stigma of mental illness obsolete.

South Shore Mental Health is a community resource providing mental health and substance abuse services throughout the South Shore, Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod. For more information about programs, call (617) 847-1950.

Doherty Scatters 5 Hits As Offense Stalls Raiders Fall To Falmouth, 1-0

By CHRIS POISSON

In its first game at Adams Field in nearly three weeks, the North Quincy baseball team sent out its ace, senior pitcher Keith Doherty, to try to cool off Falmouth Monday afternoon and rebound from last Thursday's 11-6 loss at Braintree.

For the home fans, it was their first glimpse of the left-hander since he hurled a no-hitter in the season opener against Brighton. But make no mistake about it, they definitely kept track of the pitching phenom's two appearances on the road: a two-hitter against Silver Lake and a one-hitter against Milton.

They realized getting hit off Doherty is like the Devil Rays beating the Red Sox — once in a while it's going happen.

It happened Monday as Doherty was lit up (if you can call it that) for five hits. Obviously, he was not the problem. It was the offense. The Red Raiders tallied only three hits and left 10 men on base, which culminated in a 1-0 loss to the Clippers and dropped their record to 4-2.

"They were a little down, but we have some young guys and they have to understand that this is a tough league we play in and we're going to have a lot of tight games," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "It's going to come down to just a few plays and we have to make those plays. If we do, we're going to come out on the better half of the score most of the time."

"The team has a good attitude, they'll bounce back," he added.

North Quincy looked to end its mini two-game slide yesterday (Wednesday) when it hosted Bridgewater-Raynham at 4 p.m. Today (Thursday) it travels to Taunton for a game that was rained out April 12.

Doherty was dominant once again. He pitched his fourth straight complete game, striking out eight and giving up the one run — an unearned run. Doherty still has not allowed an earned run in 28 innings pitched this season. And he has only given up eight hits and 10 walks, while he has totaled an impressive 45 strikeouts.

"He was great," Taglieri said. "When they scored the run the ball didn't leave the infield. So Keith still has not given up an earned run this season. It's incredible."

Falmouth scored the lone run in the sixth inning when the first two men reached on a single and an error and then moved to second and third on a sacrifice bunt. Doherty walked the next batter to load the bases and North Quincy brought its infield in. But it made another error that allowed a run to score. Doherty escaped further damage with a punchout and pop up.

In the fourth inning, the Red Raiders had a golden opportunity to put the first run on the scoreboard. Junior Mike Feetham, who had two of the team's three hits, led off the inning by smacking a triple. But he would be left stranded as the team couldn't not move him the remaining 90 feet.

"We really squandered a chance," Taglieri said. "We had a leadoff triple and we were unable to get across a run. You would like to think you could bring that guy in."

of the season provides a huge lift for Quincy. With Lupo already established as one of the league's stoppitchers, Thorley could make it an effective 1-2 combo. He threw only 78 pitches as went the distance, allowing just five hits, one walk and one earned run.

"He kept the ball in play a lot," Draicchio said. "They really didn't do anything special against him, only had two solid doubles off him. He kept the ball down low. He pitched a smart game."

In the Holbrook game, Lupo (2-1) rebounded from the 11-0 loss to Taunton to toss a complete-game two-hitter. The right-hander allowed an unearned run to lower his ERA to 1.50.

"Lupo pitched a great game," Draicchio said. "I think he pitched a great game against Taunton, too. He had three unearned runs off him in that game. So I was confident he could bounce back after that, no problem."

"He is doing a tremendous job. His earned run average is right up there with the league leaders. He's done a great job and that is a key right now."

After Holbrook scored its run in the first inning, Quincy had a chance to blow open the game in the second and third frames. The Presidents loaded the bases with one out in both innings, but managed to score only one run — snapping their 16-inning scoring drought at the time — to tie the game.

"We had people in scoring position," Draicchio said.

"We had the bases loaded a couple times. You need to get those runs across. But, again, I have some young guys out here. They're nervous as can be trying to play a varsity sport for the first time."

Quincy scored the winning run in the fifth inning. Thorley led off with a walk and moved to second on Lupo's sacrifice bunt. After Duffy was hit by a pitch, Matt Germain hit into a fielder's choice, beating out a double play that allowed Thorley to score from second base.

"It was a close game," Draicchio said. "This is what is going to happen with this program. We're going to have a lot of close games. And that's the way we're going to try to build it back up."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Have you ever had the terrifying experience of running out of gas on a busy road or highway? There you are - hoping you can at least coast to the curb - with horns honking, people yelling and perhaps a policeman saying, "How come?"

Let's take this situation and think about the possible kinship between this traffic problem and the moral and spiritual situation many people find themselves in today. There are many people who do not have any power within themselves. They can be pushed and pulled around. As far as their own motive power is concerned they are helpless. Sadly, they have developed nothing which makes life go for them...

Beware of emptiness. Whether the emptiness is emptiness of thought, or emptiness of heart, or emptiness in life, be sure that it is just as unnecessary as for any of us with normal common sense to allow ourselves to run out of gas...

Durkin Seeks Community Policing In Ward 5

The City Council recently adopted a resolve sponsored by Ward 5 Councilor Stephen Durkin supporting the assignment of a Community Police Officer in that ward.

The resolve cited the success other areas of the city have had in Community Policing initiatives and the fact that Ward 5 is the only ward where no Community Police Officer has been assigned.

Durkin noted that, while Ward 5 has had comparatively low crime rates, it was important to remain vigilant in preventing crime.

The resolve, which was unanimously adopted April 17, specifically calls for a Community Police Officer to be assigned in Ward 5 on the noon to 8 p.m. shift.

State Aid Up Slightly But Tight Budget Expected

By CRAIG SALTERS
Preliminary estimates from the state Department of Revenue for Fiscal Year 2002 indicate Quincy will receive a slight increase in state aid from the current fiscal year.

That increase, said Daniel Keating, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, will be enough to maintain the city's current level of services but will not allow for expansion of services.

"It (state aid) will be enough to cover contractual salary increases but we're really not expanding," said Keating, who cautioned final figures were still "subject to tinkering" as the budget made its way through the various committees of the Legislature.

"We're happy that there are no projected cuts, but at the same time the increase in resources has not kept pace with those of previous years," Keating said.

The preliminary notice to assessors of estimated receipts for Fiscal Year 2002 listed a total of $44,366,356 in state aid, an increase of less than $2 million from this year's actual total of $42,766,311.

"Obviously, there's been a slowdown (in the rate of increases)," said Keating, who pointed to recent state tax cuts and a general economic downturn as possible reasons for the tightening of the state budget.

In terms of the city budget, Keating pointed out that a $600,000 grant for Community Policing ends in October of this year, meaning that the city must now cover those costs.

"There will be no reductions in personnel or programs," Keating said, but proposed programs for the city, such as an additional public works crew to maintain the city's sidewalks, will find it more and more difficult to locate funding.

Department of Revenue estimates show an increase in education funding from $15,679,698 to $16,421,607 and an increase in general government funding from $27,086,613 to $27,944,749.

Net fiscal charges for Fiscal Year 2002 are $3,868,967, down from Fiscal Year 2001's actual total of $4,362,676.

The mayor, who recently called for all departments except for the School Department to reduce general expense budgets by 10 percent, is expected to introduce his proposed budget the first week of May.

headquarters at Merrymount Park.

Another likely topic at Tuesday night's meeting, Cedrone said, would be the debate as to whether to build a brand new Quincy High School or to renovate the existing one, with speakers expected from both camps.

School Committee Vice-Chairwoman Jo-Ann Bragg selected Cedrone as chairwoman of the Siting Commission in early December

Bragg's School Committee Resolve which created the commission called for a recommendation deadline of Wednesday, May 2.

A recent analysis of the remaining sites by the siting commission rated building a new high school on the current DPW site, which would cost an estimated $60 million, as the best choice.

The new Quincy High School, which is slated to open in 2004, is expected to receive 90 percent reimbursement from the state and is part of a roughly $100 million master plan which includes a new location for Central Middle School and improvements to other schools.

FOOT NOTES

by Joel Chariton, D.P.M.

Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Surgery
Diplomate, American Board of Podiatric Orthopedics

ATHLETE'S FOOT

Athlete's foot is a skin condition that develops from a fungus. The fungus typically attacks the feet, most often between the toes. Athlete's foot fungus thrives in a warm, moist environment. People who frequent public swimming pools, locker rooms, and showers are susceptible to athlete's foot because these areas are prime breeding grounds for the fungus. A person with athlete's foot may experience dry, itchy skin, inflammation, or blisters. The condition may spread to the soles of the feet and toenails or to other parts of the body if a person scratches the foot and then touches him or herself elsewhere. The pesky athlete's foot fungus can even spread to other parts of the body via bed sheets and clothing.

Don't wait for skin conditions, fungal infections, corns and calluses and aches and pains to disappear like magic, because they won't. Call us instead for prompt, personal attention. Patients can be seen at our main office in Randolph at 999 North Main Street, as well as at the Quincy Medical Center, where we offer free valet parking. All appointments are scheduled by calling 781-986-3668. I am also affiliated with the Brockton, Milton, Good Samaritan and Carney Hospitals.

P.S. Good foot hygiene can help prevent athlete's foot. Antifungal medications are effective in treating the infection.

Quincy Driver Charged With Hitting Officer, Leaving The Scene

A Quincy man was arraigned in Quincy District Court Tuesday in an alleged hit-run accident in which a police officer was struck and hurled a distance estimated as much as 30 feet.

Douglas Chase, 48, of 60 Elm St. pleaded innocent to three charges of operating under the influence, leaving the scene after causing personal injury and failing to use caution with a pedestrian.

Judge James McGovern ordered him held in $5,000 cash bail and continued the case to May 18. Chase has his beat near 1454 Hancock St. in downtown Quincy about 12:50 a.m. Tuesday when the driver of a dump truck stopped to ask him directions to the Southeast Expressway.

DiMattio walked to the driver's side of the truck and was giving the directions when a dark color Mercury heading north apparently struck one of the truck's tires and then hit DiMattio. The latter was thrown into the air and knocked a distance of up to 30 feet, police said.

The car, police said, kept going and turned the corner onto Chestnut Street.

Officers Timothy Moran and Paul Quinn responded to the scene and found DiMattio lying on Hancock Street conscious but disoriented and bleeding from the head. They called for an ambulance and DiMattio was taken to Quincy Medical Center where he was treated and released.

An alert off-duty officer, Brian Mahoney who was coming out of the Hancock Parking Lot across from the courthouse, spotted a dark car with a broken windshield. He called the police station on a cell phone to inquire if there had been an accident in the area. He was told about the hit-run.

Mahoney, police said, followed the car to the driveway of Chase's home at 60 Elm St. A sideview mirror found where DiMattio was struck matched another one on Chase's car, police said. Chase was then taken into custody.

It was not immediately known when DiMattio would be able to return to duty.

Sheets To Send $193 Million Budget To Council

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James Sheets will submit a proposed Fiscal Year 2002 budget of $193,002,296 to the City Council at its next meeting Monday, May 7.

The new budget figure represents a roughly five percent increase from the Fiscal Year 2001 budget of $183,381,916. The five percent increase, the mayor noted, was two or three percent less of an increase from the previous year.

"This is a very tight budget," Sheets said, explaining that most of the increases were in the area of fixed costs such as contract raises, step raises, health insurance, and pensions.

Another cost, said the mayor, was the average annual payment of $4.5 million as the city's commitment to the new Quincy Medical Center, a commitment which will end in three years.

Given the relatively flat figure of roughly $44 million in state aid projected for FY 2002, Sheets emphasized the need for a lean budget, noting his recent call for all department heads save the School Department to cut expense budgets by 10 percent.

Still in the budget, Sheets said, were funds for eight or nine police cruisers so as to incrementally restock the Quincy Police Department's fleet, as well as funds for the Department of Public Works to purchase equipment such

To Receive McIntyre Humanitarian Award Moakley Among Law Day Honorees At Quincy Court

Congressman Joseph Moakley will be among those honored today (Thursday) at the 48th annual Law Day observance at Quincy District Court beginning at 9 a.m.

Moakley was selected as the recipient of this year's James R. McIntyre Award presented annually to an individual in recognition of his or her outstanding selfless humanitarian endeavors.

The award is named in honor of the late Quincy Mayor-Senator James McIntyre who served in both the Massachusetts House of Representatives and Senate in the 1950s and 1960s. McIntyre's son, Atty. Charles McIntyre, was scheduled to make the presentation in behalf of the McIntyre family.

However, Moakley, who

has incurable leukemia, may not be able to attend the ceremony.

In that event, plans are to present the award to him later in the new federal courthouse in Boston recently named in his honor.

Mrs. Sheila McIntyre, noting that her husband and Moakley served together in the state legislature, said:

"They worked well together. They had great respect for one another and they were good friends. I think Congressman Moakley certainly has an outstanding record as a humanitarian and is most deserving of this award."

Quincy District Court Magistrate Arthur Tobin also served with Moakley in the State Senate.

Principal speaker will be former Quincy District Court Presiding Justice Albert Kramer who will be introduced by present Presiding Justice Mark S. Coven who will also speak.

Atty. Edward J. Kelly, president of the Quincy Bar Association, will introduce the Law Day Motion to be

Hungarian Restaurant Beer, Wine License Request Withdrawn

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

With opposition from the landlord which houses Anna's Hungarian Restaurant and Ward 4 Councillor Mike D'Amico, owner Charles S. Debreczeni withdrew his application for a beer and wine license at Tuesday's License Board meeting.

In addition to a petition with hundreds of names in support, and no abutters at Tuesday's City Hall hearing, Debreczeni said he "listened to his customers" who were advising him to withdraw so he could re-apply.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman offered him an "olive branch", and suggested that Debreczeni withdraw rather than have a "no" answer from the license board making it permanent.

Gorman said he could then try to come to terms with Bruce Wood, the landlord, and D'Amico and then return to the board at a later date to re-apply.

As Debreczeni seemed reluctant to make a decision, Chairman Joseph Shea told Debreczeni he could take his time to "think it over" before making a decision.

However, Debreczeni vehemently said he would "listen to his customers." Some supporters could be heard the background telling him to "withdraw."

At the last hearing Debreczeni said D'Amico didn't return some of his calls pertaining to the hearing. However in dispelling that claim, D'Amico came to the meeting with various letters written to Debreczeni proving that he did acknowledge his calls.

Supporters and customers who spoke at the meeting, said they would enjoy having a glass of Hungarian beer or wine with their meal and all spoke highly of Debreczeni's character and work ethics.

Dr. Vincent Pattavina who spoke in favor of the application said the board should vote in favor and give "justice for the public and justice for Charlie" and told the board "unless you have 50 or 500 people against this, I don't see why he can't get it"...and added he "runs a good shop."

License board members said they felt the they couldn't take action over the objection of the Bruce Wood, the landlord.

Wood said he feared starting a precedent, that once the license was granted, and in the event that Debreczeni moves to another location others who would rent the area would also want the beer and wine license.

At one point, D'Amico said he heard that Debreczeni was looking to expand his business and move to a larger location in the city. Although Debreczeni acknowledged that it was true, he said he first wanted to establish a business with the serving of beer and wine to his customers.

Wood also stated that the site has always been a breakfast and lunch eatery, and that beer and wine should not be an issue.

Over $1 Million Damage To Business Block Cause Of Downtown Fire Still Under Investigation

Investigators are still working to determine the cause of an April 26 fire which began in the Peach Garden Restaurant on Hancock St. and caused more than $1 million in damage to downtown businesses.

"We're still investigating," Quincy Fire Chief Thomas Gorman told The Sun Monday afternoon, adding that investigators had found nothing to suggest the fire was not accidental.

Two firefighters suffered minor injuries in the five-alarm fire, which began just before midnight in the Peach Garden Restaurant. The Peach Garden, a Chinese take-out restaurant, and the adjacent Tasos Pizza & Euro Cafe suffered the most severe fire damage, with smoke damage reported in the Pretty Nails Salon and the site of the former Blue Note Exchange.

Complicating the investigation, Chief Gorman said, was the fact the building had already experienced several fires in the past, including a severe fire in 1961 when the building had housed a furniture store.

The building's past damage, said Chief Gorman, was making it more difficult to determine exactly what damage had been caused by the April 26 blaze.

The fire was out in less than two hours.

McFarland Selling Barry's Deli After 23 Years

After 23 years, Mike McFarland, owner of Barry's Deli, 21-23 Beale St., Wollaston is selling the restaurant.

McFarland introduced new owner Charles "Chuck" Carter to the License Board at Tuesday's meeting.

Carter said he was not going to change the name or the hours or the menu "at this time."

Chairman Joseph Shea asked McFarland how long he had been at the restaurant. He said the restaurant has been at the Beale St. site for 33 years, and he had been there for 23 years.

When asked after the meeting why he was leaving he said "it is time to move on."

As he was leaving to walk out of the meeting, McFarland received a round of applause.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On May 6, 1626, according to legend, Manhattan, a 28 square mile island along the Hudson River, was purchased by Dutch settler Peter Minuit from the local Native people for merchandise valued at $24.
- On April 30, 1803, representatives of the United States and Napoleonic France signed a treaty approving the Louisiana Purchase, a massive land purchase that more than doubled the size of the young American republic. The acquisition of the territory of Louisiana, encompassing the entire region of the Mississippi-Missouri river valleys, was Thomas Jefferson's most notable achievement as president.
- On May 5, 1945, in Lakeview, Ore., Mrs. Elsie Mitchell and five neighborhood children were killed while attempting to drag a Japanese balloon out of the woods. Unbeknownst to them, the balloon was armed, and it exploded soon after. They were the first and only known American civilians to be killed in the continental United States during World War II.
- On May 1, 1960, an American U-2 spy plane was shot down over central Russia, forcing its pilot, Francis Gary Powers, to bail out at 15,000 feet. A year and a half later, the Soviets agreed to release him in exchange for a Soviet spy caught and convicted in the United States five years earlier.
- On May 2, 1972, after nearly five decades as director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover died, leaving the powerful government agency without the administrator largely responsible for its existence and shape. Among his achievements: He built the corruption-ridden agency into an efficient crime-fighting machine, establishing a centralized fingerprint file, a crime laboratory and a training school for agents.
- On May 3, 1979, in British general elections, the Conservative Party defeated the ruling Labor Party, and Margaret Thatcher, leader of the Conservatives, became the first female prime minister in British history.

Family Needs Help . . . Not Pity

The one thing she doesn't want is pity.
"Don't feel sorry for me. Don't cry over me. I'm going to get better."

Those, in essence, are the spunky words of Sharon (Paolucci) Swatek relayed back to her hometown Quincy from Watutose, W.I. near Milwaukee, where she lives with her husband, Lon, and two children, Al, 9, and Kelly, 7.

And where she is hospitalized with the cruel, traumatic results of what began as a strep throat. But, no ordinary strep throat.

She was rushed to the Froedtert Medical Center the evening of Feb. 28 with a high fever and dropping blood pressure.

By the following morning she was in a coma. She developed pneumonia, her entire life system shut down and she was on total life support.

Sharon had contracted a rare and deadly type of Strep A invasive bacteria that had quickly progressed into septic shock.

At one point, she seemed to show signs of improvement.

Then came the jolting news. For Sharon to survive, there would have to be amputation.

Both her arms were amputated, one below the elbow, the other above the elbow.

And then there was more bad news.

Three days later, both of her legs had to be amputated just below the knees.

Her mother, Rosalie (Kyler) Paolucci of Sumner St., Quincy Point and other members of the family have flown to Watutose to spend time with her.

Her mother, who has been staying with her, came back to Quincy for a short visit recently.

Retired Quincy Fire Captain John DiPietro of Franklin St., who is married to Mrs. Paolucci's sister, Gladys and Sharon's uncle by marriage, said her mother found Sharon "fiesty" and "very upbeat" and "determined to get better."

Sharon, DiPietro said, told her mother "no one should be crying or feeling sorry for me."

Sharon, 42, is a member of the Quincy High School Class of 1976, a graduate of Johnson and Wales College and former head chef at the Cranberry Inn in Chatham.

She has known setbacks in life before.

Her father, Albert Paolucci, a Quincy firefighter, died during the Blizzard of '78 believed related to shoveling snow during the storm that buried the area under 26 inches.

Her son, Al, was stricken with cancer at age 4 and now, after five agonizing years, it fortunately is now in remission.

Things finally seemed to be looking up for the family. Then came Feb. 28 and that devastating strep throat.

The Paolucci and Swatek families have firefighting in common. Two of Sharon's brothers, Steve and Mark Paolucci are Quincy firefighters, following in their father's footsteps. Her husband, Lon, is a member of the Watutose Fire Department.

Sharon has another brother, James, an electronic engineer and a sister, Sandy, employed in an investment firm.

The Watutose Fire Department has a fundraising campaign underway headed by Captain William Grimord to help the Swatek family's fast mounting financial needs. Other fundraisers are being held in that area.

And now help is coming from her hometown.

Family members and friends decided to open a trust fund, DiPietro and his daughter, Rosann DiPietro, an attorney, set it up at the Quincy Municipal Credit Union and are the co-trustees.

"Since Feb. 28, the family's bills have been staggering," says DiPietro. "And rehabilitation and prosthetics haven't even started yet."

Those wishing to help may send their donations to:

Sharon didn't personally ask for the help. But she and her family sure could use it.

POLITICAL REMINDER: Nomination papers for candidates in this fall's municipal election will be available Monday, May 7 in the Election Department at City Hall, reminds City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Deadline for returning them is 5 p.m., Tuesday, July 24.

If you are thinking of running, you need 50 valid signatures city-wide as a candidate for mayor, councillor or school committee.

Ward council candidates also need 50 valid signatures -- but all of them in the ward where they are running.

SHEA

BILL BULGER, UMass president and former Senate president, was among those attending the recent Beechwood Life Center "Hungry Ones" dinner at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

BULGER

BEALS

Bulger was there to help honor his old friend and former State House colleague, Atty. George Burke. The latter was being recognized for rescuing the historic Col. John Quincy Tankard from the auction block in New York.

Before the dinner got started, a birthday cake was rolled out in honor of Sharron Beals, Beechwood's energetic executive director.

And Bulger joined in with a group near the cake to sing "Happy Birthday."

Later, dinner emcee Ron Zooleek noting the birthday, told the audience: "I'm not going to tell you how old Sharon is. Only that she's the same age as me . . . and I'm 62."

The disclosure didn't seem to faze Sharron. She was still too thrilled over Bulger singing happy birthday to her.

"He really has a nice voice," she said. (She didn't mention Zooleek's voice.)

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1916 postcard showing the granite base of the Daniel Shed Memorial now located in the center of the rotary on Palmer Street in Germantown. On top of this base is a 12-foot shaft with a lighted beacon. The bronze tablet tells the story of one of Quincy's earliest families for whom this area of Quincy was once known as Shed's Neck. Sailor's Snug Harbor was founded here in 1856 as a home for old sailors. That name survives, as does the name Germantown that came from the presence of German settlers 100 years before the sailors came. The Shed family's hope to restore the name of Shed's Neck, as expressed on the tablet, has gone unheeded. After World War II public housing was built here with government funding for returning war veterans.

Quincy Granite And The Ball

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
I was delighted to see the photograph of the J.S. Swingle Quarry in the April 19 edition of The Quincy Sun. It is nice to know, although this landmark is now nonexistent, there are those that find this history important.

Having returned to the Quincy area, I was very disappointed to find "scummy fill" had been dumped at Swingle's. In the '50s, this quarry was the deepest working quarry in the United States. It employed many Quincy residents and spawned an industry that built this city. The last time I was in the area, it was the city landfill (dump). For the last 40 years I followed newspaper accounts of the choices Quincy leadership were making. I assured myself the city would do right by the Quincy quarries, an asset of the city. Quincy had a chance to develop a very unique historical and recreational area. It's a shame no one could envision that.

Quincy granite was well known throughout the world. Granite from the quarries was coveted for its natural, unique dark color and jewel-like quality. Quincy granite was the hardest granite known which made it particularly desirable by builders and monument makers, and brought them and their businesses into the city. Mining granite was a very dangerous and arduous occupation. Many men died doing it. The quarries brought all types of miners into the area, many cultures and nationalities living and working together in a small city. These were tough, hard-working men who were the backbone of the Quincy area development. We owe them respect and honor for what they did to make Quincy a leader in the Commonwealth.

Speaking of the Quincy granite quarries, a monument, reminiscent of the quarry industry in Quincy, is being taken away from the people that care about it the most. It is being proposed that the Granite Ball at the rotary into Quincy next to the shipyard be moved to City Hall. Originally, when presented to the city by the Granite Manufacturers of America, the granite block was donated to Quincy by my grandfather, and unveiled by my Aunt Maxine at the Quincy Centennial celebration. It was agreed that the monument would not be moved from the City Hall site.

It has been at Quincy Point for a very long time and much enjoyed and appreciated by the people of that area. It is synonymous with Quincy Point. I now reside in that area, too, and I would hate the idea of moving this monument again. Besides taking the risk of damaging the structure, moving it would cost the city money better used in other ways. It should be enclosed and protected during the bridge building. I have watched heavy equipment park dangerously close to it.

Why must they use the rotary center for this equipment? Surely, there is other parking in the area. When the new bridge is complete, the Granite monument, properly landscaped, will look wonderful in its present location and certainly will introduce Quincy to all that enter from Route 3A. We should be proud of it, protect it and cherish the memory of those it represents.

A Dubious Distinction

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Quincy's population has increased by around 4,000 since 1990, according to the last census, and has retained its position as the ninth largest city in Massachusetts.

I believe the ranking is a dubious distinction. More people usually means traffic, more congestion, more crowding, less open space, more strain on public services, ... quality of life suffers.

I wouldn't be proud of our ranking.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Council OK's Major Projects

By PAUL HAROLD

The city council set in motion two major development projects by approving two key May 3 resolutions.

The approval of $800,000 approved for the North River Expressway the 101 (Parking area) $800,000 for land damages to the construction of a high pressure sewer main from Squantum to Merrimount. Expansion of the sewer service would allow for the planned residential development of the Squantum Naval Air Station.

In addition, the council was considering the transfer of $35,000 from water reserves for the purchase of a new foam type fire truck. The new truck would replace a 15-year old engine at West Quincy and would be used to fight oil and truck fires on the Southeast Expressway.

SEARS ADDITION OPENS

The greatly expanded Sears opened at 1591 Hancock St. with five new departments and the addition of 50 new employees, bringing their total sales force to 350. The addition was built on the site of the former Capitol Theater.

Quincy's Robert M. Faxon, who owned the land and the Sears' building, said the expansion demonstrated Sears' confidence in downtown. This was the sixth expansion of the store since it came to Quincy in 1936.

On hand for the opening ceremonies were Mayor Della Chiesa, Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce President Forrest Neal, Jr. and store manager Jeremiah Donovan.

MISS QUINCY MOTORCADE PLANNED

A motorcade from the Winfield House to the Art Theater was planned as part of the Miss Quincy beauty contest pageant.

Contestants would have tea at the Winfield House with the judges and travel in open cars to the Art Theater for the contest. The winner would receive a $300 scholarship and wardrobe and gifts from downtown merchants.

Judges were Mayor Della Chiesa, Mrs. John Hynes, Jr., Henry Bosworth of the Boston Traveler, Carol Nash of Carol Nash Modeling and Alan Leavitt of the Actors' Workshop.

Jewish Radio Personalities Topic Of May 9 QJC Meeting

Author and media historian Donna Halper will be the featured speaker for Jewish Radio Personalities: A Trip Down Memory Lane, Wednesday, May 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room of Roche Bros. Supermarket, Falls Blvd.

The event is sponsored by the Quincy Jewish Committee.

Halper, whose new book Invisible Stars: A Social History of Women in American Broadcasting was recently published, will discuss well-known Jewish personalities who made a name for themselves on radio. Halper will progress from the Big Band era -- with bandleaders like Benny Goodman and Joe Rines -- up to the Top 40 era with figures such as Arnie Ginsburg, one of the few Top 40 disc jockeys to use his own name at a time when ethnic sounding names were discouraged.

With rare pictures, videos, and memorabilia, Halper will guide listeners on a trip from the "Golden Age of Radio" up to recent times, examining the changing attitudes of society towards Jewish entertainers and Jewish entertainment.

Decorator Show House At Beale Estate May 5-25

ILANA SAXE, a senior at Quincy High School and a five-year student in Spanish, spent a week recently volunteering at the Mission at San Lucas Toliman in Guatemala, where she took medical histories and provided care for the Mayan villages in the area. Saxe traveled with her mother Beth Scanlan, a nurse practitioner.

QHS' Ilana Saxe Spends Volunteer Week In Guatemala

While spending a week in March volunteering at the Mission at San Lucas Toliman, a town of 17,000 in the western Guatemalan highland state of Solada, Quincy High School senior Ilana Saxe had to cope with the fact that Spanish was not her first language.

Making her task of helping in the medical clinics by preparing medication and taking medical histories even more difficult was the fact that Spanish was not the first language of her patients either.

As Mayans, her patients spoke Cakchiquel, one of the 20 Mayan languages, but their Spanish and that of Saxe's was good enough that things went smoothly.

"They knew Spanish very well," said Saxe, who has studied the language for five years and credits QHS teachers Angela Check and Joanne Tribulauskas, department head in Spanish, for her success. "I'm not fluent, but I did OK, and I got better as the trip went along."

Saxe traveled with her mother Beth Scanlan, a family nurse practitioner, and other health care professionals as part of the San Lucas Health Care Project, which provides health care services to the indigenous Mayan people in the villages that surround San Lucas.

Saxe also traveled with a friend, Diana Mahler, and Diana's mother Miriam, crediting the two, along with her mom, for making it a fun, educational, and rewarding trip.

"You don't have to be a doctor to help," Saxe said, explaining that volunteers also help with teaching, translating, or entertaining children as they wait to be examined. Some volunteers come to work on the coffee plantations, help with construction projects, or work on re-forestation projects.

Saxe said she was struck by both the richness of Mayan culture and the poverty of the region during her eight-day trip. "Their craftwork is unbelievable," she said, noting that Mayans don't traditionally use machines, doing weaving and embroidery work by hand.

However, Saxe also got in the habit of walking with stones in her hand as a precaution against the wild dogs which roamed the villages. "It was very scary, especially at night," she said.

Saxe, whose duties included triage, said many villagers, especially children, were taught to complain of a sore throat simply because communicating their real symptoms was difficult and, more importantly, the need for any medicine was so high.

"They know if they say 'sore throat,' it's a sure bet that they'll get at least some medication," Saxe said.

Saxe's mom agreed that medical attention was a top priority. "The health care project has improved people's health, but more needs to be done," Scanlan said.

Some of the concerns in the Guatemalan region include a high infant mortality rate as well as malnutrition, unsafe drinking water, and respiratory ailments caused by food cooked indoors over open fires.

Scanlan, who is bilingual, works at the Brookside Community Health Center, where she estimated roughly 80 percent of the patients speak Spanish. The health center, she said, has been involved for quite some time with the Mission at San Lucas Toliman, so she knew it to be a relatively safe and organized trip for herself and her daughter.

Saxe's success at Quincy High School is not limited to foreign languages. Active in student government and a member of the National Honor Society, she also plays varsity volleyball and tennis.

Saxe has been accepted early decision to Colby College in Maine.

Saxe, who said one realization of her trip was just how much Americans take for granted in their day to day lives, recommended such a volunteer experience to both students and non-students alike.

"I'd go back again, definitely," Saxe said. "Just not tomorrow."

Dance Aboard USS Salem For Bell Scholarship Fund

The Bob Bell Scholarship Fund Committee will host its second dance and fund raising event aboard the USS Salem Friday, May 18 from 7 to 11 p.m.

Proceeds from the event will continue the funding of a scholarship for North Quincy High School students in memory of Bell. Mr. Bell and wife Susan's two children, Lisa and Robby, both graduated from NQHS. Lisa, two scholarships were awarded in Bell's memory.

Before succumbing to cancer in May 1999, Bell was an active part of the Quincy business community, working for many years as a realtor. In addition to his work-related responsibilities, Bell worked on behalf of the community in developing and helping to fund numerous youth programs.

The first scholarship event, in November of 1999, raised $12,500 and drew 260 people to St. Mary's Parish Hall. This year's event draws on Bell's love of the water by selecting the USS Salem as the venue.

In addition to hors d'oeuvres and dance, volunteers will give tours of the ship to participants. The event will also include a cash bar and a raffle of items donated to the scholarship fund by local businesses.

Free parking is available at the ship's location at 739 Washington St.

AVULSION FRACTURES OF THE FIFTH METATARSAL

It seems that all medical specialties encounter medical problems that are controversial as to the treatment approach. Avulsion fractures at the base of the fifth metatarsal bone is such a condition. These fractures (breaks) seem to occur after ankle sprains when a small fragment of bone is "pulled away" from the main bone. The break occurs near the attachment of a tendon from the Peroneus Brevis muscle. The fracture can occur quickly and in the most innocent of situations, like shooting basketballs in your driveway with your child (the author actually had a patient with such a situation). The resulting injury can be quite disabling for several months.

The treatment approach is controversial and there seems to be an on-going debate among medical professionals as to how aggressive to be with these injuries. Some doctors recommend only rest and comfortable shoes. Others prescribe post-operative shoes and a cast. Still others order below-knee casts (either removable or plaster fiberglass ones) and crutches. In practice, most people will heal with the approaches above. So, when is it appropriate to operate someone with one of these injuries? The answer appears to be with the activity level of the individual. A surgical approach may be better suited to a professional and/or other high level athlete that must return to activity as soon as possible.

If you are having any foot problems, call and schedule an appointment at 617-773-4300. We are located at 1261 Furnace Brook Parkway, Suite #18, Quincy, and are affiliated with Carney and South Shore Hospitals and Quincy Medical Center.

Unauthorized Use Of Name On Mailing Angers Cedrone

School Committee-woman Christine Cedrone said she is not supporting Alan Cousin in his bid for the Ward 3 Council seat and said she was "really upset" over a recent Cousin mailing which listed her name without permission.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE

Cedrone said she agreed to speak at Cousin's fundraiser, which is set for late May, but only on such topics as the new Quincy High School and being a fellow Republican.

"Mr. Cousin never asked or requested permission to print my name," Cedrone said. "This creates confusion where there should be none."

In fact, Cedrone said, she has since reconsidered and speaking at his kick-off fundraiser. I believe that Mr. Cousin used my name in order to bring credibility to his campaign.

"Running for elected office is difficult for someone who is running for the first time but using a sitting elected official's name without authorization is unacceptable and inappropriate."

The 44-year old Cousin, a 10-year resident of Ward 3 who identifies himself as a "conservative political activist," entered the race against incumbent Patrick McDermott and fellow candidate John Cain in early April.

As of press time, Cousin could not be reached for comment.

has notified Cousin via email that she will no longer speak at his fundraiser.

In a statement released Tuesday, Cedrone said:

"I want to publicly state that I am not endorsing Alan Cousin. In fact, I will not be

Ward 4 Democrats To Host Forum On Florida Election

In response to last fall's historic presidential election, the Quincy Ward 4 Democratic Committee will host a forum to explore what lessons Quincy Democrats should learn from the controversial election and recount that took place in Florida.

The Ward 4 Democratic Committee will host the forum, "The Florida Election: What Really Happened, and What Quincy Democrats Should Learn From It," Thursday, May 10, at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy. All are invited to attend.

Guest speakers will be Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, state Representative Ron Mariano, and Gore campaign consultants Dennis Newman and P.J. O'Sullivan. All four local Democratic Party activists played key roles in Vice President Al Gore's campaign and recount effort in Florida. Each will discuss their experiences and share insight into the lessons that election teaches Democratic party activists, grassroots political groups and voters across the country.

Bellotti, a member of the Quincy Ward 6 Democratic Committee, campaigned for Vice President Al Gore in Broward County, Fla., in the week preceding the November election, and stayed on to assist the campaign's initial recount efforts following the election.

"The Florida election reminded America of the significance of every person's vote," Bellotti said. "In addition to lessons on voting, the election also taught us the importance of implementing efficient voting systems that ensure every vote is counted."

Mariano, a member of the Quincy Ward 2 Democratic Committee, also campaigned for Gore in

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

RONALD MARIANO

Broward County prior to election day as well as during the initial stages of the recount.

"This landmark election reaffirmed the importance of effective grassroots political activity," Mariano said. "As the Florida election demonstrated, mobilizing voters on a local level can change the outcome even in national elections. Hard work from groups like city democratic committees can make the difference in elections for all levels of government."

Newman, who served as Gore's Massachusetts Campaign Chairman, flew to Florida immediately after the election and worked as lead counsel for the Gore campaign in its West Palm Beach County, Fla., recount effort.

O'Sullivan, the former District Director for Congressman William Delahunt, served as a consultant to the Gore campaign throughout the election and also worked in West Palm Beach with Gore's recount team following the election.

Recognizing that last November's election provides a unique opportunity to learn about the electoral process and prepare for future elections, the Quincy Ward 4 Democratic Committee encourages all area Democrats to take part in this forum.

For more information call Ward 4 Democratic Committee Secretary Bryan Connolly at 617-471-0168.

REPAIRING CHIPS AND CRACKS

Patients with chipped or cracked teeth may resort to bonding, which involves coating teeth with a tooth-colored composite material. Although this is the least durable (and least expensive) repair option, when the composite wears off, it can easily be repaired or replaced later. Another, more durable (and expensive) option for hiding defects in the enamel involves fitting a custom porcelain veneer over the surface of the tooth. This procedure typically takes a few visits to the dentist (bonding requires only one), and involves removing a thin layer of tooth enamel to make room for the veneer. While veneers are more natural looking and more durable than bonding, biting into hard objects (ice or hard candy) can chip them.

A smile is one of our greatest personal assets. It expresses who we are and how we feel about ourselves. Yet many people avoid smiling because they are concerned about the condition of their teeth. Many times we underestimate the value of investing in improving our smile. We emphasize preventive, functional and cosmetic dental care. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are accepting new patients. Let us help you smile with confidence. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Badly decayed teeth are not suitable candidates for veneers because the tooth surface itself must be sturdy enough to support the veneer.

Delahunt Sponsoring Medicare Forums

Congressman William Delahunt is sponsoring a series of regional forums to update local seniors on changes in Medicare and prescription drug coverage.

In Quincy, a forum was scheduled for Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon at Quincy City Hall, 150 Hancock St.

While we work to enhance access to affordable health care, seniors are currently eligible for a wide range of Medicare and prescription drug benefits, Delahunt said. "We're hoping to help shed light on what Medicare offers, and does not offer," he said.

South Shore residents.

The forums are free of charge to all seniors throughout the South Shore. The sessions are co-sponsored by the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), the federal agency that oversees Medicare, and the Veterans Administration (VA). As Older Americans Caucus co-chair, Delahunt is spearheading national efforts to expand public understanding of the Medicare program throughout the month of May, which is Older Americans Month.

Each session will feature experts from HCFA and other key agencies to provide the most up-to-date information on Medicare and prescription drugs. Officials from the VA will be on hand to give guidance on veterans' health benefits as they relate to Medicare. Following the brief presentations, the panelists will be on hand to answer personal questions.

Other forums will be held in Brockton, Scituate, and Kingston.

For further details, Call Congressman Delahunt's office toll-free at 1 (800) 794-0911.

Annual Hunger Clean-Up Benefits Long Island Shelter

Students from Massachusetts College of Art, University of Massachusetts at Boston, Boston College, and Emmanuel College recently performed volunteer clean-up work at the Long Island

Shelter as part of the 17th Annual Hunger Clean-up.

The Annual Hunger Clean-Up is a one day community service work-action sponsored by the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG). Volunteers raise money for their service at local shelters and soup kitchens.

Other sites where students volunteered were: Crossroads Family Shelter, East Boston; St. Ambrose Family Inn, Dorchester; and St. Patrick's Catholic Charities, Somerville.

Estimated local participation in the event was 100 students with $3,000 raised in one day. Fifty percent of funds raised were donated to the Long Island Shelter; the other 50 percent will benefit national and international efforts.

Volunteer projects included painting buildings, cleaning, gardening, and painting murals.

The 17th Annual Hunger Clean-Up involved an estimated 15,000 students nationally.

D'Amico Seeks Fourth Ward 4 Council Term

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico announces he will seek re-election to a fourth term and has opened a storefront campaign office on Copeland and Cross streets.

"There is hardly anything more personally rewarding than the day-to-day experiences of making a difference in people's lives," he said. "That's exactly the kind of work I've been honored to do on behalf of those I represent and I plan on getting the job done."

D'Amico called his accomplishments "substantial" and his pace "non-stop."

He noted that "our city has enjoyed the longest period of economic growth in our history, but in Ward 4 we are making sure the benefits of progress don't come at the expense of our neighborhoods."

He said that as a member of the Quarry Hills Advisory Committee, he secured mitigation of money to lessen the effects of dust and noise from the development of the Quarry Hills Golf Course.

D'Amico said he "paved" the way for the Marriott Hotel, eliminated truck traffic on most South Quincy roadways and secured $19 million in state funding to build a connecting ramp from Crown Colony to Southeast Expressway. The connector, he said, will greatly reduce the traffic burden. When there are traffic problems in the area he said he holds neighborhood meetings with City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon to get input from affected neighbors in order to make informed decisions.

He pointed to "hundreds" of weekly neighborhood meetings he has held, "thousands" of phone calls he has returned and also continues to be available for weekly office hours.

D'Amico said he took the lead in the successful efforts to close "The Hat Rack" trouble spot, organizing a coalition of neighbors and police foot patrol officers to shut down the bar.

D'Amico said he launched the Crime Watch program in the area and made Ward 4 one of the first areas to have a Community Policing Program. He also said he initiated the Brewer's Corner redevelopment project in conjunction with Quincy 2000.

D'Amico outlined a "five-year recovery package" calling for installing a Community Police substation, burying overhead utility wires and the formation of Breser's Corner Business Association.

D'Amico takes credit for a $10 million appropriation to renovate Sterling Middle School, a new Lincoln Hancock playground, to obtain state funding with the help of Rep. Bruce Ayers to renovate Shea Park, and founding the Ward 4 Senior Group.

He said he also supported expansion of the city's Council on Aging and the Senior Shuttle Service.

He noted he is a lifelong resident of West Quincy and that his family has resided there more than 150 years.

D'Amico is a graduate of St. Mary's School, West Quincy, Xavierian Brothers High School and Stonehill College. He is presently a student at Suffolk University Law School and works part time in the Norfolk County Sheriff's office.

D'Amico was first elected to the Ward 4 seat in 1995 at the age of 20, the youngest councillor in the city's history. He was re-elected in 1997 and 1999.

Author's First Novel Traces Sacco-Vanzetti

Author William J. Brennan will read from his first novel, "A Tattered Coat Upon a Stick," including a glimpse of the controversial Sacco-Vanzetti Case Tuesday, May 8, at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Meeting Room of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

The story is told through the eyes of 93-year-old Emmett Magawley, a veterans' hospital patient, who recounts his life as a second generation Irish-American, a serviceman in World War I, an observer of Boston's ethnic groups and prison guard.

It is in this role that Magawley meets Bartolomeo Vanzetti, who is sentenced to death for slaying a Braintree paymaster and his guard, and offers insights into the high profile case.

Brennan, a former Brockton resident, worked for the Department of Education before starting a 36-year career with federal agencies. He retired from the U. S. Department of Energy and is at work on a second historical novel.

OPERATION DAY'S WORK: As part of a United States Agency for International Development (USAID) program, Broad Meadows students spent Saturday morning cleaning the grounds of the Thomas Crane Public Library. The students received pledges for their labor which this year will be used by USAID for scholarships in Nepal. Local Students To Address Roundtable On Child Labor

Quincy residents Elizabeth and Laura Bloomer will attend a Congressional Roundtable on Ending Child Labor May 10 in Washington, D.C.

Elizabeth, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams in Braintree and a graduate of Broad Meadows Middle School, and sister Laura, an eighth grader at Broad Meadows, will serve as representatives of the Quincy Kids Campaign Against Child Labor, an organization formed six years ago in response to the murder of Iqbal Masih, a former child slave from Pakistan who visited Broad Meadows in December of 1994.

President George W. Bush is scheduled to speak at the Congressional Roundtable.

Believing that education is the key to breaking the cycle of child labor, successive grades of Broad Meadows students, under the direction of Language Arts teacher Ronald Adams, have dedicated themselves to helping educate poor children like Iqbal in developing countries like Pakistan, Nepal, El Salvador, and Haiti.

The most recent activity of the Kids Campaign Against Child Labor took place Saturday morning at the Thomas Crane Public Library, where Broad Meadows students and student volunteers from Quincy High School cleaned the library's grounds as part of Operation Day's Work USA.

As part of the program, the students collected pledges for their day's work which will be given to the United States Agency for International Development (USAID), which will then provide scholarships to children in Nepal.

In addition to their efforts Saturday on behalf of Operation Day's Work, the students also dedicated a Peace Garden to Iqbal Masih just outside the new children's reading room of the expanded library.

Mayor's Commission To Award Summer Arts Scholarships

To benefit the scholarship fund, the commission will host an Afternoon Tea Sunday, June 3 from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Braintree.

Young women, grades 9 through 11, who have been a resident of Quincy for at least one year, attending any local public, private, or parochial schools are eligible to apply.

Applications are available through the school art departments, and must be submitted by May 26. For information on Afternoon Tea tickets, call 617-376-3728.

DPW Site For New QHS Before School Committee

With the Quincy High School Siting Commission having voted overwhelmingly to recommend DPW Headquarters at 55 Sea St. as the location for the new Quincy High School, the matter now goes before the School Committee for discussion and eventual vote.

School Committee-woman Christine Cedrone, who served as chairwoman of the commission, said she would update the School Committee on the commission's decision process and formally present its recommendation of the DPW site at the School Committee Meeting scheduled for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Quincy High School.

School Committee Vice Chairwoman Jo-Ann Bragg, whose resolve created the commission after the original site for the new Quincy High School was removed from consideration in November of last year, said the next step was to set a date for a public hearing, which she was confident could be done at Wednesday's meeting.

"That way, there will be one more opportunity for public comment before we vote and send it to the City Council," Bragg said.

Bragg thanked Cedrone, who also voiced her support for a public hearing, and commission members for "doing their homework" and exploring every possible site.

"It was a difficult task," Bragg added. "If there was an ideal site for the high school, we would have found it four years ago."

At the April 26 meeting of the Siting Commission, 18 of 22 votes were cast for the DPW site. School Committeeman William Phelan voted in favor of Faxon Field, as did parents Jennifer Logue and Susan Milone. Parent William Chiasson voted for Park and Recreation Department Headquarters in Merrymount Park.

There were no votes cast for the final site up for discussion: Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

DPW Commissioner David Colton, a commission member who voted in favor of the roughly 18-acre DPW site, said construction of a new high school at the current DPW site was projected to cost $55 million. An additional cost of $5 million, Colton said, was anticipated to re-locate the existing DPW headquarters.

The city was exploring several possibilities for the new DPW headquarters, he added.

As for designs for the new school, Colton, who emphasized that no detailed design plans had ever been completed for any site, said the city's earlier needs would be re-confirmed.

The new Quincy High School is now slated to open in September of 2005, one year later than previous timetables. After completion of the new Quincy High School, the city plans to renovate the current Quincy High School to become the new Central Middle School.

Construction costs for both the new Quincy High School and renovated Central Middle School are expected to receive 90 percent reimbursement from the state.

DON'T LET DISCS SLIP

On some disc brakes, the pads have wear sensors that cause a high-pitched squeal when the pads wear down. This noise, caused by the metal wear sensors scraping against the rotor, is an immediate indication to have the pads replaced. Otherwise, the sensors may damage the rotors. When pads without sensors wear down to nothing, the metal backing on the pads begins wearing away the rotors with a grinding noise as the brakes are applied. If this occurs, you can expect to replace the rotors as well as the pads. To avoid damage to disc brake rotors, have the pads checked every 10,000 miles. Because they bear the brunt of the braking responsibility, front pads usually wear before rear ones.

Vandal's Brick Smashes Windows At Dolo Creations

A brand-new business owner can expect many difficulties during his first year, but a brick through the window shouldn't be one of them.

Dolo Creations, 831 Hancock St., a multi-cultural barber shop which opened earlier this year with diversity as its trademark, was vandalized over the weekend when a brick was thrown through the large glass window panes of the shop, destroying three of the eight panes, a neon sign, and the lettering on the glass.

Police are investigating the incident, said Dolo Creations owner Desmond Bellot, who added the damage, estimated at over $2,000, is covered by insurance.

"I'll be in business tomorrow," said Bellot, a former three-sport standout at North Quincy High School who attended Northeastern University on a football scholarship.

But it was impossible for Bellot, who is African American, to hide his disappointment over the vandalism, which he emphasized was one incident in an otherwise warm welcome from the city.

"It's just sad," said Bellot. "I bother no one. I just try to run my business and then I get a brick through three windows."

"I expected something like it, to be honest with you. It wasn't random and so it doesn't take a genius to figure it out."

Bellot said that business at the seven-chair shop, which bills itself as a multicultural business for all city residents, has been terrific and so has his reception from the community.

"I've had a lot of support," Bellot noted. "Business has been good and I won't let this (incident) put any sour taste in my mouth toward the city of Quincy."

Asked what actions, if any, he would take after the incident, Bellot displayed a hint of the determination that made him a star football player and once earned him a contract with the Detroit Lions.

"I keep going," Bellot said simply.

Dolo Creations, 831 Hancock St. across from Veterans Stadium was the subject of a feature story in the March 22 issue of The Quincy Sun.

Board Rejects Request For Restaurant License

The License Board Tuesday on a 5-0 vote denied the request of Carlos Rocha doing business as Copacabana Self Service, 134 Washington St. for a common victualer license.

Chairman Joseph Shea said he was "confused" about Lima Travel, next door as to whether or not they were serving food.

Rocha said he only served packaged foods at the travel agency, but was hoping to serve food at his eatery, the Copacabana next door.

Abutters one by one came to the meeting protesting another business in the area and cited parking as the worst problem in an already congested area."

Robert DeStasio, representing the landlord of the building said there has been a restaurant at that site for many years and that many of Rocha's customers would not take cars, but would walk from their office located near the restaurant.

DeStasio said maybe the board should have someone check the cars that are parked all day in the area and added that the restaurant also had parking in the rear of the building.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi said he was there as both a resident of the area and the councillor and said he "strongly opposed" the application.

Raymondi said that the streets surrounding the restaurant; Walpole, Bigelow, Elm and Washington Streets are already congested and said it would be "impossible" for an ambulance or a fire engine to get by.

He said there is no parking on Elm, Bigelow and extremely dangerous to double park on Washington St.

He said that future aggravation would "only make things worse."

He asked to board to deny the request.

Acting Fire Chief Terence Kelly said he was in agreement with Raymondi and added he was "uncomfortable" with the idea of a restaurant in an already "congested area."

said it will now be forwarded to the Alcoholics Beverage Control Commission which usually takes from 4 to 5 weeks he said..

Montclair/Wollaston Assn. To Hear Mass Electric Speaker

Joseph Cardinal of the Massachusetts Electric Company will be the guest speaker tonight (Thursday) at a 7:30 p.m. meeting of the

Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association at Work Inc., 3 Arlington St. To be discussed are conservation, energy saving tips, environmentally sound methods and current ideas that can be used year round. Association President

Kevin Coughlin will hold a business meeting after the Mass Electric presentation. Items to be discussed are Cleaner/Greener and the June meeting aboard the USS Salem.

New Restaurant Will Locate At Fire Site

The fire last week that damaged the Blue Note Exchange did not stop new owners from proposing to open a restaurant called "The Half Door."

The License Board Tuesday granted the new owners a common victualer all alcoholic and entertainment license.

Addressing the License Board at Tuesday's meeting, Atty. Leslie Muldowney said the new owners, Kevin McGrath and Patrick O'Sullivan are experienced restaurateurs. They also manage Porter Belly's and Devlin's in Brighton.

The new restaurant she said, will be that of an Irish Pub theme and will have entertainment Thursday, Friday and Saturdays.

It will be open from 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. seven days a week and serve food at all times.

Compared to other businesses affected by the fire, Blue Note itself suffered less damage Muldowney said.

She said it would take from 3 to 4 months to renovate, and added they could be open for business at the end of the summer.

Advice On How To Prevent Osteoporosis

As the population of the United States grows, the number of people with osteoporosis is expected to increase. Osteoporosis is a condition in which the bones become weak and brittle, increasing the risk of fractures.

Erin G. Gorman, MD, a specialist in physical medicine and rehabilitation at Spaulding Rehabilitation Center, offers the following sound advice for helping to access the risk for the disease and for its prevention and treatment.

What you should know about osteoporosis

Osteoporosis, the most common disease affecting bone, is a silent disease that goes undetected until a fracture occurs. The result of progressive bone loss, it makes bone more fragile and susceptible to fracture and is therefore responsible for 90 percent of all spine and hip fractures among the elderly.

Am I at risk?

Many factors, including aging, menopause and medications, contribute to the development of osteoporosis. Common risk factors include being female, especially postmenopausal; being Caucasian; having poor bone health; not eating the low-lipid, low-lipid, low-fat diet; and also having certain chronic diseases, such as hypothyroidism, and medications such as steroids and anti-convulsants.

Some factors, such as family history or being female, cannot be changed; other factors, including deconditioning or poor diet, can be modified to decrease the risk of fracture and disability.

How can I prevent osteoporosis?

The best way to prevent osteoporosis is to eat a healthy diet and to get regular physical activity while still young. This helps develop optimal peak bone mass or bone reserve; the greater the peak bone mass achieved when young, the less devastating the effects of progressive bone loss may be as we age. But, even as we age, we can still slow bone loss with regular weight-bearing exercise, supplemental calcium and hormone replacement therapy or medications aimed at slowing bone destruction.

Talk to your physician about the right treatments for you.

How do I know if I am affected?

Unfortunately, osteoporosis often goes undetected until a painful fracture occurs. Other signs and symptoms include loss of height, a forward-bowed posture ("dowager's hump"), shortness of breath, fatigue and a protuberant abdomen. Conventional X-rays do not show signs of significant bone loss until 30 to 40 percent of total bone mass loss has occurred. Ask your doctor about a routine screening, such as a dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry or DEXA.

How can physical medicine and rehabilitation play a role in my care?

Physical and occupational therapists are trained to treat and to help prevent osteoporosis. Treatment involves individualized exercises for increasing bone mineral density and improving posture. In addition, emphasis is placed on improving balance and preventing falls, thereby decreasing fracture risk. This might involve home safety and/or adaptive equipment evaluations.

Therapists also help patients manage pain that results from fractures and postural deviations. This can be achieved by applying heat or ice, electrical stimulation and through instructing patients in appropriate body mechanics and exercise to minimize muscular spasm and strain.

Physiatrists, medical doctors trained in treating musculoskeletal disorders, also play an active role in your care.

A physiatrist, in conjunction with a primary care physician, can assess an individual's risk factors, the need for diagnostic testing and the appropriateness of treatment with hormone therapy, calcium and vitamin D supplements, and/or disease-modifying drugs for increasing bone mass. He or she can also address options for treating pain from fractures and from muscle spasm and strain due to postural deformity.

This might include managing pain with medication, therapy and/or bracing, and treatment with complementary services such as acupuncture, massage therapy and behavior modification.

Travel Tips For Your Feet

The Massachusetts Podiatric Medical Society offers free foot health care information to the public, including the following top 10 travel tips for your feet.

1. Before traveling, visit a podiatrist if you are experiencing any pain, problems or discomfort with your feet or ankles. Foot pain is not normal and can often be relieved or eliminated by visiting a podiatrist.

2. To condition your feet and legs, begin a regular walking program wearing the shoes you plan to travel with include inclines if your destination has hilly terrain at least four weeks before your trip.

3. Review your travel itinerary and the activities planned to determine the kinds of shoes you will need (should pack).

4. Take a few pairs of supportive, comfortable shoes and plenty of appropriate socks so they can be changed frequently. Try not to take new shoes that have never been worn.

5. When traveling, periodically flex feet at the ankles, wiggle toes, unlace shoes if feet swell, keep legs uncrossed and move around if possible (especially during airplane travel — get up and move around once for every hour on the plane).

6. Be prepared: in case of a minor foot problem, pack adhesive bandages, talcum powder, antibiotic or first aid cream, tweezers and nail clippers in your toiletry bag.

7. If you injure your foot or ankle while away, seek professional attention from a podiatric physician. People often assume that if a toe is broken, that it doesn't require treatment. That is not true. When traveling within the United States or Puerto Rico, contact the state podiatric medical association to obtain a referral to a local podiatrist, or access www.apma.org via the Internet to locate a podiatrist.

8. Limit walking barefoot to safe, sandy beaches or close to the pool. Walking barefoot exposes feet to sunburn, as well as the plantar warts virus, athlete's foot and other infections.

9. Regularly apply sunscreen to the tops of your feet.

10. Treat your feet well after a long day of sight-seeing, shopping or hiking: massage them and keep them elevated.

Red Raiders Win Two, Bow To Barnstable

By CHRIS POISSON

With a 2-1 lead in the fifth inning, the North Quincy baseball team looked like it was headed to its third straight win Monday afternoon on the Cape.

But then the April show-ers, which have been lacking here in New England, drenched the Red Raiders in the late innings.

Junior pitcher Mike Feetham cruised through the first four innings, allowing just one run, and then the floodgates opened as the potent Barnstable lineup reached him for five runs in the fifth en route to an 8-2 win.

Although they lost, the Red Raiders' success last week — and so far this season — should not be forgotten. Last Friday, they knocked Taunton from the unbeaten ranks with an 8-4 victory on the road and last Wednesday Feetham went the distance in a 6-3 win over Bridgewater-Raynham.

North Quincy (6-3, 3-2) hosted Plymouth South yesterday (Wednesday) at 4 p.m. and tonight it hosts Duxbury at 7 in a non-league game.

In Monday's game, North Quincy grabbed a 1-0 lead when junior John Fidalgo (2 for 3) knocked in Feetham (2 for 3) with a two-out single. Barnstable tied it in the fourth, but North Quincy responded in the fifth when Crowley stroked a two-out RBI single to regain the lead.

But Feetham couldn't hold the lead, leaving in the fifth without recording an out. Junior Steve Pizzi relieved him and gave up three runs in 1 1/3 innings. Junior John O'Connell got the final two outs.

"Feetham pitched well," said head coach Larry Taglieri. "He was cruising through the first four innings and then they got to him a little bit. But we left a lot of guys on base."

They may have stranded 11 runners against Barnstable, but that was not the case in the triumphs over Taunton and Bridgewater-Raynham.

In the Taunton game, North Quincy trailed 4-2 in the sixth inning before it erupted for six runs to come away with the win. Junior Wayne Moynihan (2 for 3) and senior Chris Doherty (2 for 4) each had RBI singles, while senior Keith Doherty (3 for 3, 5 RBI) provided the heavy damage by crushing a three-run home run.

"I'm really impressed with how the kids bounced back," Taglieri said. "They put a six spot on the board in their park."

Given the lead again, Doherty shut down Taunton in the seventh to pick up his fourth win of the season. He pitched his fifth straight complete game, allowing five hits (all singles) and three earned runs while striking out eight and walking two.

The three runs were the first off Doherty this season. The co-captain had pitched 39 innings without allowing an earned before the Tigers reached him for a trifecta in the fifth inning.

In the Bridgewater-Raynham game, Feetham scattered six hits and two earned runs for his second win of the year. Junior Pat Gregoli (three runs) and Chris Doherty (two runs) each went 1 for 3 at the plate. Keith Doherty went 2 for 2 with three RBI, while senior co-captain Chris Lockhead and Feetham each had RBI singles. Senior Mike Keddy, junior Dennis Thomson and Moynihan also had hits.

Mite A Travel Tourney Champions

The Quincy Mite A travel hockey team recently captured the Waterville Valley Tournament championship with 7-3 victory over Newton in New Hampshire.

Quincy won all four games in the tourney led by the outstanding performance of goalie Matt Brundridge who posted a shutout.

In the third period, Pat White snapped a 3-3 tie with the game-winner assisted by Kevin Magoon and Matt Bridgeman. Magoon followed with an unassisted goal. Kevin Keith found the cage with Victoria Virtue assisting and Matt Rodriguez tallied the final goal. Virtue and Derek Murphy assisted.

In the first period, Zac Helfrich scored with Rodriguez assisting. Newton took a 2-1 lead before Rodriguez scored the equalizer with Magoon earning an assist. Murphy potted a goal to put Quincy on top, 3-2. In the second frame, Quincy didn't score and Newton evened the game up.

Quincy opened the tournament with a 4-1 win over Lexington/Bedford behind Murphy's two goals. Bridgeman and Rodriguez also found the back of the net. Andrew McCarthy, Trevor Richardson and Seamus McKenna had assists.

Quincy blanked South Boston, 4-0, behind

Brundridge and a solid defensive effort. Rodriguez pocketed two goals and Bridgeman and White had one apiece. Richardson and Virtue picked up assists.

In the third game of the tourney, Quincy knocked off Salem, 7-1, behind Murphy's hat trick. Rodriguez netted a pair of goals and McCarthy and Virtue chipped in with one apiece. Bridgeman, Rodriguez, Murphy, Magoon and McKenna had assists.

"Activities and events are planned for all interests," she added. "Two spring 'warmups' have been well attended."

Senior Olympian George Conway will lead competition in the Senior Olympics. At age 98, he is the South Shore's "senior" Senior Olympian and will light the Olympic Torch with Mayor James Sheets in the Opening Ceremony May 14. The Senior Games will culminate with an Awards Ceremony May 23.

The week-long event offers:

Bowling, darts, bocce, billiards, one-mile walk, three-mile walk, one-mile run, half-mile walk, swimming (sprint, freestyle, breast stroke, 100 and 50-yard swims, butterfly), softball game, celebrity volleyball, track & field events (softball throw, javelin throw, running and standing long jump, shot-put, golf and rotation events, horseshoe pitch, basketball throw).

Quincy Wins Third Straight In Slugfest

By CHRIS POISSON

Monday night was a scoreless affair as the Quincy softball team's offense warmed up like the New England weather Monday afternoon as it outslugged Plymouth South, 17-13, to win its third straight game.

Repeat, third straight game.

Quincy's turnaround this season is amazing considering it went 1-20 in each of the previous three seasons, and that it starts five sophomores and just two seniors.

"I'm definitely surprised," said head coach Mike Sedar. "My goal at the beginning of the season was just to be in every game; to still be in it in the seventh inning. I would've been pleased with that. But we're doing a lot better than that."

You betcha. The three-game winning streak upped Quincy's record to 3-3 overall and 3-2 in the Old Colony League. Last Thursday it defeated Barnstable, 4-2, on the road and last Wednesday it edged Falmouth, 2-1, at home.

Quincy's next five games

Softball

are all at home. Yesterday (Wednesday) it faced Bridgewater-Raynham at 4 p.m. and tomorrow it battles Notre Dame Academy at 5:30 p.m. in a rematch from the season opener in which Quincy fell, 7-3. On Monday, Quincy squares off against city rival North Quincy at 3:30 p.m.

In Monday's game, timely extra-base hits paced the Presidents' high-scoring attack. Four players had extra-base hits and each drove in two runs: Junior Michelle Pilalas and sophomores Jen Gropp and Diane Gilbody each tripled, while sophomore Shannon Paine doubled with the bases loaded.

Sophomore hurler Stacey Andrew (3-1) picked up the win. With freshman pitcher Rachel Sorensen out with an injury, Andrew has shouldered all of the innings in Quincy's last three games.

After sterling performances in the victories over Falmouth and Barnstable, Andrew may have fited a bit against Plymouth South. But the workhorse roughed it out to pitch a complete game.

"Our pitching has been strong all season," Sedar said. "Stacey had one bad inning [Monday]. We were up nine runs and we lost our edge a little bit and let them back in the game. That's going to happen with us. We're a young team."

Led by seniors Christina Keenan and Andrea Verdecio, other members of the team are juniors Stephanie Roach, Christina Roosa and Kristin Nelson, sophomore Liz Campbell, senior Michelle Ploof and freshman Katlyn Markham.

"I thought if we got four or five wins that would be a good season for us," Sedar said. "We're playing some pretty good ball. Christina Keenan and Michelle Pilalas are giving us a lot of maturity. Keenan has been rock solid all year."

Presidents Hope New Month Brings Wins

Remember when the Quincy baseball team beat Holbrook, 2-1, on a warm, sunny Saturday afternoon at Adams Field.

It was April 21, but it seems so long ago.

At the time, the victory pushed the Presidents back to the .500 mark and they were overflowing with confidence as they were about to encounter one of the most difficult tests of the season: five games in seven days.

Let's just say Quincy was probably ecstatic to wake up Tuesday morning to see that it was a new month. The team flunked the test, dropping all five games in which it was outscored, 55-7.

On Monday afternoon Quincy tried to salvage something on the last day of April, but the costly errors and ultimately hitting remained as it fell to Plymouth South, 12-2.

Quincy (2-7, 0-5) traveled to Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday) and Monday it will clash with rival North Quincy.

Although the score may indicate that the pitching was poor, it was actually pretty darn good if the staff had a little help from the defense and offense.

Baseball

Sophomore Rob Muollo allowed six hits in four innings and left with his team trailing 10-1. It could have been different. After getting the first two outs of the game, Quincy committed an error and Plymouth South capitalized with a quick 3-0 lead. In the second inning, the Panthers scored five runs with only one ball hit into the outfield.

"There's nothing much to say," said head coach Michael Draicchio. "We haven't given much support to our pitchers in the last few games. We make errors behind them. We make mistakes and they have to go longer than they should. We have innings where the kid pitches more pitches than he needs to pitch."

That was certainly the case for Muollo in the first two frames. In the third he had a quick 1-2-3 inning, and in the bottom half the team finally got him a run. With two outs, freshman Matt Germain walked and his older brother, junior Dave Germain, drove him in with a triple over the right fielder's head.

Plymouth South answered in the fourth inning, scoring two runs without a hit.

In the fifth, senior Mark Robertson relieved Muollo to pitch the final three innings. After Plymouth South scored two unearned runs in his first inning, the right-hander retired the side in order in the sixth and seventh.

"Mark is coming along," Draicchio said. "He's a three-sport athlete. The kid works hard. Athletes are going to do those things."

Quincy added a run in the seventh with senior Joe Thorley's two-out single that scored senior Joe Callahan. In all, Quincy racked up a season-high 11 hits, but it was unable to deliver any in the clutch.

"We have to be able to capitalize when we have chances," Draicchio said. "This is the first time we've actually had hits in a game, and still can only score two runs. It's the most hits we've had this year. But we're not doing it with situation type of baseball. When people are on and we need to score."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It has been said that no one can enrich his own personality by concentrating on himself, but if he directs his thinking toward a friendly enrichment of other personalities, he, himself, has gained as much as he has given to others.

SCOTT DEWARI

All of us know people with a bubbling-over personality. It is easy to elude likes them. Did you ever wonder what causes their popularity?

To start with, they respect the other person's opinion. They let the other person do his share of the talking; they are good listeners. When a variance exists, they never say, "I'm older than you, therefore know more than you." They listen to the other person's problems; don't minimize the problems by citing, comparing or exaggerating their own. They never give masked-for advice, but are ready to give a suggestion when asked. They give subtle praise without evidence of flattery. They have good humor; can and do laugh at themselves; laugh with but not at the other person.

Check these traits with the people you know that possess "personality plus." You will find they have most of these "goodnesses." We know a lot of people like this and we're always glad to meet more like them.

ARIES: March 21 to April 19 Problems begin to affect relationships both personal and professional. Act now to shore up those weak foundations, before it all comes crashing down around you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a break from all that hard work. There's nothing like some well-earned fun and games to charge up those Bovine batteries and send you back fully energized and ready to go.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Deception can sometimes affect perception. You should take a longer, deeper look at what you're being offered. Things might not be quite what you first thought they were.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The time has come for you to set things right. Your courage will help you meet the difficult challenge ahead.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A stubborn insistence that your way is the only way to solve problems could make things worse than they are. Open your mind to suggestions from others.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A close associate reveals a secret that could affect an upcoming decision. Rely on your natural instinct to weigh everything carefully to help you get through this dilemma.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Congratulations! Your decision to take action to deal with a long-simmering situation in the workplace begins to pay off.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You still need to persuade your partner that you're sincere in wanting to save this relationship. Remember: Performance speaks louder than promises.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A disappointment in the workplace can be a blessing in disguise. Take another look at your goals and see if this is the path you really want to follow.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid winding up in the middle of an unpleasant family situation by reassuring your cantankerous kinfolk that you love them all, but that you won't take sides.

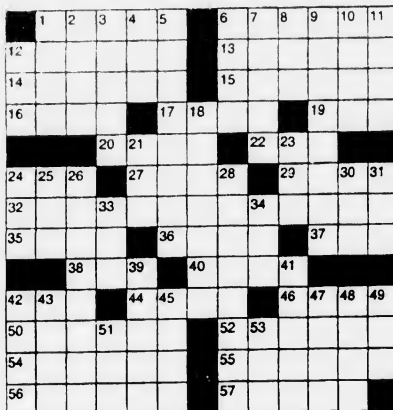

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A successful workplace move begins to pay off with offers of new opportunities. Some might come with strings attached. Check them all carefully before deciding.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You love to entertain. You appreciate fine food and elegant surroundings. You're happiest when you make other people feel good about themselves.

Crime Prevention Tips At A Drive-up ATM

1. Keep your car engine running, the doors locked, and the windows up at all times when waiting in line at a drive-up ATM.
 2. When possible, leave enough room between cars to allow for a quick exit should it become necessary.
 3. If an ATM is obstructed from view or poorly lit, go to another ATM. Report the problem to the financial institution that operates that ATM.
 4. Before rolling down the window, observe the entire area around the ATM. If you see anyone or anything that appears to be suspicious, drive away from the area at once and call the police.
 5. Minimize the time spent at the ATM by having your card out and ready to use. Once you have completed your transaction, take your money, card, and receipt and immediately drive away from the terminal.
 6. If you see anyone or anything suspicious while conducting your transaction, cancel your transaction and leave immediately.
 7. If anyone follows you, after making a transaction, go immediately to a crowded, well-lit area and call the police.
- Using common sense and trusting your intuitions can prevent you from being a victim at an ATM.

Arbor Day Celebrated With Tree Planting At Wollaston School

The city celebrated Arbor Day recently with a ceremonial tree planting at the Wollaston School on Beale St.

The ceremony was highlighted by the anticipation of the Wollaston School students and the planting of a Red Maple donated by Mass Electric.

On hand for the ceremony were Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments; School Committeeman Michael McFarland; Wollaston School Principal Elizabeth Bostrom; Brian Sullivan, Arborist for Mass Electric; Lynn Larson of Mass Electric and the students and teachers from the Wollaston School.

JOINING WOLLASTON SCHOOL students to celebrate Arbor Day with the planting of a tree were, from left, Principal Elizabeth Bostrom, Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments; Mass Electric Arborist Brian Sullivan, Lynn Larson of Mass Electric, School Committeeman Michael McFarland and the Arbor Bear from Mass Electric.

The children read a poem that they had developed regarding the different types of trees and the important roles that trees play in our world. They also helped planting the new tree.

"We are thankful to Mass Electric for donating this handsome tree and helping us instill in our young children an importance of planting and maintaining trees," Koch said.

"Ms. Bostrom and her teachers have clearly done a great job in teaching these children about trees as their poems were great. I hope that these children grow up to become stewards of our urban forest."

The city was recently recognized by the National Arbor Day Foundation as a "Tree City USA" for the fifth consecutive year. Quincy was awarded this recognition due to its ongoing efforts in maintaining its urban forest.

"Through the support of Mayor Sheets and the City Council, we have been able to maintain our distinction as a 'Tree City USA', said Koch.

"We are proud to accept this honor for the fifth consecutive year. I hope that we continue to receive the support necessary to maintain this level of excellence in the future," Koch added.

12th Annual Cleaner, Greener Program May 12

Mayor James Sheets announced the 12th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy program will be held Saturday, May 12.

The cleanup will occur at a variety of locations from 9 a.m. to noon. Following the cleanup, Sheets will host an appreciation barbecue from noon to 2:30 p.m. at the Richard T. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

Sheets said this year will feature the first "Cleaner, Greener Challenge." In addition to the highlighted to challenges, there will be a contest for teams that choose a site for improvement.

The guidelines for the 2001 Cleaner, Greener Challenge are:

- Teams must be comprised of 10 or more people.
- Teams must have permission from the property owner to perform their improvement project.
- Priority will be given to projects on public property.
- Improvement activities such as cleaning, raking, planting, repainting, etc., will be considered acceptable components of an improved project.

Prizes will be awarded for first, second and third place.

"After 12 years of Cleaner, Greener Quincy, we find that many of our parks are cleaner and greener because of the hard work of our citizens," Sheets said. "This year we are expanding the program to encourage people to target those areas in their neighborhoods that might need an aesthetic uplift."

"This year we have decided to give citizens more input into the sites that we will target," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "Every year we hear from groups who wish to clean a location outside of the regular program. I hope that the new format challenges citizens to locate areas in their neighborhood that need cleaning and to develop some original improvement plans."

All participants in Cleaner, Greener Quincy will be given a Cleaner, Greener T-shirt and be invited to the mayor's appreciation barbecue following the cleanup. Stop & Shop Supermarkets will provide the food and beverages for the barbecue.

"Cleaner, Greener Quincy began 12 years ago as a one-day cleanup but has developed into a daily objective for my administration," Sheets said. "Our parks, beaches, school grounds and business districts are all cleaner because of a collective effort between this administration and our citizens to improve our city. I hope that we as a city can continue our success for the 12th consecutive year."

In keeping with the traditional Cleaner, Greener Quincy theme, city personnel will be working at various locations in the city that day. People who are looking for a designated site to clean may report to the following locations:

- Faxon Park, Faxon Park Road, South Quincy.
- Squaw Rock Park/Beach, Dorchester Street.

Squantum.

• Merrymount Park/walking trails, Collins Rest-a-while parking lot, Merrymount Parkway.

Crews from the Park Department and Department of Public Works will be working at these sites and coordinating volunteer cleanups. Employees of the Recreation Department will facilitate the appreciation barbecue.

Sheets To Send $193 Million Budget To Council

as dump trucks or heavy pick-ups.

Unfortunately, the mayor said, the budget allocates no new funds for the purchase of trees for the city, although Sheets said he was hopeful additional funding for such expenses could be found in the future.

Although Sheets said he wished there were "a little more leeway" in the budget, he said there would be no loss of city services and no loss of personnel, which he said, was the case in his first few years as mayor when the city lost roughly $9 million in state aid over the course of two or three years.

As for the payment for Quincy Medical Center, Sheets said the move not only saved a hospital for the city but saved money as well, relieving the city of $90 million in total debt which would have resulted in drastic budget cuts.

"The city is in good financial shape," Sheets said. "But a tight budget will ensure that we remain in good financial shape in the future."

Explaining that the budget was based on projected revenue which couldn't be accurately determined until October or November, Sheets said higher than expected revenue would most likely result in reduced tax rates.

"If there is an excess, I will probably reduce the tax rate below the two and one-half percent (increase)," Sheets said.

Councillor Frank McCauley, chairman of the Finance Committee, said he had not yet seen the budget but understood it to be on the conservative side, given preliminary state aid figures.

McCauley has scheduled five budget sessions with a committee vote expected June 7 and a report out to the full council by June 18, which McCauley said would give the council time to discuss and approve a budget before the state's July 1 deadline.

Budget sessions, which take place at 7 p.m. in City Council Chambers, are scheduled for: Thursday, May 10; Monday, May 14; Wednesday, May 16; Wednesday, May 23; and Thursday, June 7.

The percentage breakdown of the mayor's proposed $193,002,296 budget is as follows:

Education, 32 percent; Fire and Police, 18 percent; Sewer/Water Assessments, nine percent; Employee Benefits, 10 percent; Retirement, eight percent; Public Works, eight percent; Hospital, two percent; Other Departments, eight percent; and Debt Service, five percent.

Pennies For Playground

HOPE REALIZED: Grade 2 students from Margaret Brownell's class at the Atherton Hough Elementary School were the top fundraisers at the annual Penny Drive at the school, helping the entire school to raise $1,221 for Houghs Neck Hope, a local organization which has raised funds for a playground at LaBrecque Field. Some of Brownell's students include, from left: Shannon Coleman, age 8; David Westerman, age 8; Kaleigh McKeon, age 8; and Madison Duddy, age 7.

MWRA Shipyard Property Possible Site For DPW

Property at the Fore River Shipyard currently owned by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) is being considered as a possible new home for the Department of Public Works.

"We're looking very seriously at the shipyard," said Mayor James Sheets, adding that there were two or three as yet undisclosed sites also being considered.

In the next 10 days, Sheets said, his office would explore the feasibility of relocating the DPW to the roughly 35 acre site, weighing such factors as availability and cost per acre.

Relocating the DPW from its current site at 55 Sea St. became a priority for the city April 26 when the Quincy High School Siting Commission recommended the current DPW site for the new high school.

The siting commission's recommendation is currently being discussed by the School Committee.

The mayor emphasized that the cost of relocating the DPW would play a key role in whether or not the new Quincy High School is ultimately built at 55 Sea St.

"For me the financial numbers have to work," Sheets said, explaining that relocation costs, as well as the cost of site remediation and traffic improvements, would not be reimbursed by the state, as opposed to the state's 90 percent reimbursement commitment for school construction.

"The debt service cannot go beyond a certain point," said Sheets, adding that determining just what that point is would be the goal of his office in the next two weeks.

"We will look very carefully to make sure the city has the financial capital to deal with those non-reimbursable costs," Sheets said.

Commenting earlier this month on overall construction of the new Quincy High School, which is slated to open in September of 2005, DPW Commissioner David Colton estimated DPW relocation costs at $5 million.

Hanley Resolve Redefines Fire Role In Mutual Aid

Although the Quincy Fire Department will still respond to emergency calls per its mutual aid agreement with the Metro Fire Association, it will no longer "cover" and/or take the place of a fire truck put out of service due to another community's budget reductions.

That was the message sent Monday night as the City Council voted unanimously to adopt a resolve on the matter authored by Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, chairman of the Public Safety Committee.

"The council has to be loud and clear on this," said Hanley, explaining that some communities were considering cutting their own fire department budgets knowing that larger communities such as Quincy would supplement protection through mutual aid. "We will respond to an emergency in a mutual aid community but we will not cover their house."

Optimistic For Shipyard Comeback

Sheets Sees MHI Plan As 'Positive Sign'

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James Sheets said that the expected filing Tuesday of a reorganization plan with financial backing for the Fore River Shipyard by Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) to U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge William C. Hillman was a "very positive sign" and a reason for optimism at the site.

"I am pleased that they (MHI) have filed their business plan," Sheets told The Sun Tuesday. "I think it's a very positive step forward that they will be getting additional funding and I'm hopeful that, through this plan, the city will receive, over time, 100 cents on the dollar (for its share of loans to MHI).

"I'm hopeful that this means that MHI will come back as the owner of the shipyard and that we will build ships and other types of products."

Sheets emphasized that he was confident of the success of MHI's business plan, although he cautioned that "obviously, it all depends on the federal judge."

MHI and its owner, Sotirios Emmanouil, filed for bankruptcy after defaulting on a number of shipyard loans, including a $55 million loan backed by the United States Maritime Administration (MARAD) and an almost $10 million contribution made by the city through funds from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

MARAD paid off the $55 million dollar loan and took control of the shipyard Feb. 25 of last year.

Talk of MHI's reorganization plan and new financial backing was met with skepticism by some city councillors at Monday night's meeting, including Council President Paul Harold and Councillor-at-large Frank McCauley.

New Cleaner, Greener Challenge Saturday

The 12th annual Cleaner, Greener Quincy program will have a new feature Saturday as it takes place at various sites throughout the city from 9 a.m. to noon.

Mayor James Sheets said this year will mark the first Cleaner, Greener Quincy Challenge in which residents are encouraged to choose a public site in their neighborhood to improve its appearance.

Teams of 10 or more people can select a site, develop an improvement plan, notify the Park Department and compete for first, second and third prizes.

Winners will receive certificates of recognition for their efforts and the title of "Cleaner, Greener, Challenge Champions."

Eligible activities include cleaning, debris removal, planting, and repairing. Emphasis will be placed on public properties and the amount of improvement that each team makes.

"This new format encourages more citizen input into the types of projects that will occur with Cleaner, Greener Quincy. It is our hope that a friendly competition develops between neighborhoods as they vie for the title of "Cleaner, Greener Challenge Champions," said Sheets.

For those who do not have a large group together and are looking for some direction, the city will have cleanup crews at Merry-mount Park (Collins Rest-a-While), Faxon Park, and Squaw Rock Park.

The city will provide all volunteers with latex gloves, tools, and a Cleaner, Greener Quincy T-shirt. Volunteers are encouraged to wear appropriate work-clothing and gloves if heavier cleanup work is planned.

Following the cleanup, Sheets will host an appreciation barbecue at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex, from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. There will be food and games.

"It is gratifying to see some of the children who participated in the first Cleaner, Greener Quincy in 1990 return every year, now participating as teens or young adults," said Thomas Koch, Director of Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments.

"The investment that our community has made in itself for this one day program reaps benefits for our entire community year-round."

In addition to the Park Department, crews from the Department of Public Works will be working at locations throughout the city. Employees of the Recreation Department will oversee the activities at the appreciation barbecue.

"This day represents a coming-together of personnel with community to accomplish the mutual goal of a cleaner, greener Quincy," added Sheets. "Through the assistance of our residents, we have been able to make great strides in beautifying our city. I wish to thank all of those people who have taken part in this fantastic community program."

DENTISTRY
for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BABY STEPS

Proper oral hygiene begins with cleaning an infant's mouth during the first few days after birth by gently rubbing its gums with a damp washcloth. This helps build a foundation of good oral hygiene habits. As soon as baby's first teeth arrive, the potential for decay arises. One serious form of decay among children is baby bottle tooth decay. It occurs when an infant is allowed to drink continuously from a bottle of milk, formula, sugar water or juice while sleeping or napping. As these liquids pool around the teeth for prolonged periods, the teeth are vulnerable to attack by acids. If you must give a bottle to a baby as a comforter at bedtime, it should contain only water.

Your child's baby teeth are important. Children need strong, healthy teeth to chew their food, speak and have a good-looking smile. We recommend that your child see a dentist by his or her first birthday. We will check for cavities in primary teeth and for early developmental problems. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we help make dental visits positive results to last a lifetime. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology and a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Our web address is www.quincydentist.com. P.S. A child's first visit to the dentist should occur by his or her first birthday.

Shipyard Loans Cost City $688,949 In CDBG Funds

By CRAIG SALTERS

The city has committed $688,949 of its Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds for Fiscal Year 2002 to make the annual payment on Section 108 loans given by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the still idle Fore River Shipyard.

The city became responsible for the 20-year, $7.8 million loan after bankrupt shipyard owner Massachusetts Heavy Industries (MHI) defaulted on the loan.

Last year's annual payment, the first made by the city, was $330,000.

Principal Planner Angelito Santos made the announcement at the Monday night meeting of the City Council where he successfully sought authorization of the mayor's CDBG Budget for the coming fiscal year.

Speaking to The Sun Tuesday morning, Mayor James Sheets emphasized that only economic development funds were used for the repayment of the loan and not funds for social programs.

The mayor added that, given the recent Chapter 11 reorganization plan submitted by MHI, there was the possibility that this year's payment and subsequent payments would no longer be the responsibility of the city.

Santos addressed the subject briefly Monday night during questioning by councillors, explaining that the loss of a $688,949 debt payment would be "a significant change" in the CDBG budget and necessitate re-approval by the council.

Council President Paul Harold reacted skeptically to suggestions that the city might someday not be responsible for the loan payment, saying that, even in a "best case scenario," the federal government would be lucky to recover its $55 million loan to MHI.

"The reality is we're already eating into development to pay for the money we borrowed up front," Harold said, noting CDBG budget decreases in areas such as "Neighborhood Public Improvement," "Commercial Area Revitalization District," and "Economic Development Activities."

"We're draining these accounts," said Harold, who noted the very future of the federal government's CDBG program was uncertain.

"I'll be 71 when this debt is finally paid off."

Search Continues For Historic Window Stolen From Library

The Quincy Police, the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, and the FBI are still investigating the theft of "The Old Philosopher," an invaluable stained-glass window by famed artist John LaFarge which was discovered missing last week from the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Authorities are posting the theft on many Lost Art websites on the Internet, said Library Director Ann McLaughlin, and the window is so well known as a fixture of the library that it would be almost impossible to sell through traditional auction houses.

Given the rare cloisonné-style technique employed by LaFarge for the window and its inherent historical value, McLaughlin said that no dollar amount could be placed on the window, which has been at the library since 1883.

"It's priceless," McLaughlin said. "We just want it back with no questions asked."

Anyone with information concerning the theft is encouraged to call the Quincy Police Department at (617) 479-1212 and ask for Detective Thomas Healey.

THIS ABANDONED BUILDING at 513-525 Washington St., a former appliance store damaged by fire in 1999, was taken by eminent domain Monday night by the City Council. The city intends to raze the building and create additional parking for the Washington St. corridor of Quincy Point.

Vacant Point Building To Be Taken For Parking

The City Council voted Monday night to take by eminent domain an abandoned former appliance store located at 513-525 Washington St. for $128,000.

The city plans to raze the site, which was damaged by fire in July of 1999, and build a municipal parking lot.

The vote was 7-1, with Councillor Frank McCauley the sole vote against. McCauley, who said the total cost of both the taking and construction of what he estimated to be 25 new parking lots would be in the $300,000 range, argued that the matter should go into committee for further study.

Councillor Daniel Raymond spoke in favor of the eminent domain taking, calling the building a "fire-damaged, underutilized eyesore" and noting that additional parking was a priority of the Quincy Point Action Plan developed in 1997.

The Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, and Richard Newcombe, owner of Fore River

Fishingackle, also spoke in favor of the plan.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said that he had originally been against taking the land by eminent domain but that the owner's lack of concern over a three-year period, as well as the public safety hazards of an abandoned building in a city, swayed him to vote in favor.

The $128,000 will be paid to Lucinda Larson, trustee of the Larson Washington St. Realty Trust.

Letter Carriers Food Drive Saturday

In an attempt to end summertime hunger, the Quincy, Wollaston, and North Quincy letter carriers will participate in the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) Branch 34's Annual Food Drive Saturday, May 12, to stock local food pantries and the Greater Boston Food Bank.

The NALC, in conjunction with the United States Postal Service, AFL-CIO, United Way of Mass Bay Summit, and the Greater Boston Food Bank, is commencing its campaign to "Stamp Out Hunger."

Postal customers simply leave non-perishable food by their mailbox to be picked up and delivered to local food pantries.

The food drive involves thousands of letter carriers from across the United States who collect non-perishable food and deposit it at local food banks.

Last year's effort produced 70 million pounds of food and the event has turned into the nation's largest one-day food drive.

Locally, last year 20 tons of non-perishable food were collected to benefit organizations such as Father Bill's Place, Quincy Crisis Center, Protestant Social Services, Seaside Advocacy Group, and many others.

The NALC Branch 34, an affiliate of the AFL-CIO, represents 3,500 letter carriers who deliver mail in approximately 65 communities in the Greater Boston area.

Cahill Eyes State Treasurer Bid

City Councillor-Norfolk County Treasurer Tim Cahill is looking at a run for state treasurer.

"I am seriously considering running if the seat opens," he says. "It would be a great challenge to run, be elected and serve statewide."

Whether he does, depends on incumbent Shannon O'Brien.

If she leaves the door to the treasurer's office open to run for governor as it looks like she will, Cahill will be a candidate to succeed her.

And, if he is, it could mean two Quincy names on the 2002 state ballot.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has already indicated his interest in running for secretary of state if William Galvin leaves that office to run for governor as just about everyone in the state political world expects him to do.

If both Cahill and Bellotti ran, they would be teaming up in a little Quincy political history. It would be, it is believed, the first time two Quincy residents were candidates for state-wide office in the same election.

Cahill, at 42, has served seven two-year terms as city councillor at large. And in case anyone is wondering, he says,

"I am definitely running for an eighth term this year."

He was elected to a six-year term as county treasurer in 1996 which he will complete next year. It means that if he runs for state treasurer he will not be running for re-election as county treasurer, opening up that seat.

Cahill points to his experience in both municipal and county office as natural stepping stones to state office.

In addition to his duties as county treasurer, he notes that he is also chairman of the Norfolk County Retirement Board that oversees the Norfolk County Retirement System with $400 million in assets. The funds are invested for present retirees and future retirees.

And the fact that the county he is treasurer of is in good solid financial condition -- unlike some others -- would also help along the campaign trail.

In his travels around the state as county treasurer, Cahill says he has had the opportunity to talk with people about running for state treasurer.

And the reaction?

"It's been very positive," he says.

How seriously is he about running for the job?

Well, he's already working on a schedule of campaign fundraisers to be held around the state.

If Cahill ran and was elected state treasurer it would take another potential candidate out of Quincy's future mayoral derby.

Paul Harold virtually eliminated himself when he was elected Norfolk County Register of Deeds last year.

It would sort of leave Councillor Dan Raymond as the lone present major name as successor to James Sheets when the latter decides to turn the keys over.

If both Cahill and Bellotti were elected to state office, it would have a pretty dramatic trickle down effect on the local political scene.

Quincy's mid-dates surely would run for county treasurer and sheriff -- including some notable municipal office right now. And that would create more trickle down.

On the other hand, it's hard to know what the state will do if Cahill and Bellotti were elected to state office.

nor and as attorney general and almost made it to the governor's office.

Mike Bellotti a few months ago had been thinking about following in his father's footsteps as a candidate for lieutenant governor. But since has switched his attention to the secretary of state's office.

Both he and Cahill could profit from Frank Bellotti's campaign style.

A virtual political unknown when he ran for lieutenant governor, he made up for it by getting off to an early start lining up convention delegates while some of the better known candidates were still sitting back, talking about doing it.

He and Tracy Wilson are being married Sunday, May 20 in St. Ann's Church, Wollaston, with a reception following at the Blue Hill Country Club.

Pat and Tracy met on the campaign trail in 1997 while he was running for the Ward 3 city council seat and she for the school committee. Pat still holds the Ward 3 seat and Tracy is now an assistant district attorney in D.A. Bill Keating's office.

Pat, a true romantic, popped the question -- on bended knee -- while they were on a date and slipped a handsome diamond on her finger.

Tracy, by the way, always has her hair done at Hairplace One, Ron Alfisa, the boss, is her cousin.

City Council President Paul Harold adjourned Monday night's council meeting in time for colleagues and other city officials to give Pat a send-off on the sea of matrimony at the X & O Restaurant.

Pat and Tracy's wedding will reduce the number of bachelors in the city council to three: Mike D'Amico, Joseph Newton and Harold.
